FOUND NO DIAMONDS IN BRAZIL EL DORADO

Gem Seekers Back Rich in Experiences and Rejoicing Over Having Saved $350,000.

THEY WON'T INVEST IT NOW

Took Their Own Expert Along and Left a Record with Our Consul Concerning Much Promoted Properties.

At various times within the last fourteen years sundry parties of American and Canadian argonauts have set sail for Brazil in quest of a fleece that not only was to be golden, but covered with diamonds. Invariably they have been rewarded, though they have said when they returned that their "fleece," instead of a treasure, was a verb, and meant, in the participle, something like "stung." Scattered over this continent are little groups of capitalists who say they have parted with sums amounting in the total to hundreds of thousands of dollars in the hope of becoming Wernhers and Beits in a new Rand that was going to spring up in the State of Minas Geraes, Brazil.

On the Lamport & Holt liner Vasari on election day the latest party of argonauts who went after the fleece returned, and it is with their adventures that this tale has to deal. Their trip had a different ending from many of the others, for, being hard-headed American business men, they had insisted upon taking with them a mining engineer, who was a recognized authority on gold and diamond prospects, and they started out with the motto, "No find, no cash."

They returned without gold or diamonds. There was less money in their purses, but they had seen something of the world. They also say they have collected enough testimony to make it impossible for the man who influenced them to make the journey to tempt anybody else.

Took Their Wives Along.

In the party which headed for Rio de Janeiro Aug. 30 last were Robert L. McCabe, formerly a Chicago lawyer, but now retired and a resident of Columbus, Ohio; R. Wilds Gilchrist, a Lebanon (Ohio) capitalist, and R. W. Richards of Baltimore, lately Superintendent of Construction on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. They represented Western New York capitalists, who were prepared to pay $350,000 in cash for certain diamond and gold bearing properties in the State of Minas Geraes, and if the report of their engineer who accompanied the prospectors, Louis S Noble of Denver, should justify the expenditure, they were prepared, according to Mr. McCabe, to put anywhere from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000 into the development of the property. In the party also were Mrs. McCabe, whom her husband jokingly blames for getting him into the venture; Mrs. Gilchrist, and the latter's six-year-old daughter. The ladies only went as far as Rio de Janeiro.

There are groups of persons in New York City, in Wellsville, N. Y., in Chicago, in Toronto, in Montreal, and elsewhere in whom the name Dr. W. G. Meyer may awaken memories. The memories are associated with an enlarged portrait of the late King Edward of England, a thick-set figure, a German accent, a pompous manner, a German voice, and a convincing flow of words. Memory also may suggest money—good money gone, but not forgotten.

In England similar memories may be awakened at the mention of Dr. Meyer's name. If not, mention "Brazilian diamond fields" and you will play on a lute of a thousand strings. Over there in recent years hundreds of thousands of pounds have been collected and poured into diamond prospects situated on the Jequitinhonha River, in the State of Minas Geraes.

That euphonious stream, devoid of natural salt, has been reported to yield incredible karats of diamonds and gold by the ton.

In London companies have been formed and engineers dispatched to Rio. Sometimes, after having been entertained lavishly in the capital, these engineers reached the district where the deposits were said to be. Sometimes they did not. Almost invariably their reports to the home office were so glowing that stocks were bought greedily by the public, and huge sums were sent out to buy leases and property outright.

Machinery Rusts in Jungle.

Dredges and mining machinery were shipped in great quantity from Liverpool and New York, and great cars to be drawn by traction engines were sent along to haul them from the coast to their destination in the jungle, where now, or on the trail thither, they lie rusting away disused.

On most of these shipments an American, C. M. Spangler, who went down there with one of the early companies, has liens, taken in the hope of getting some of the pay due him. At Mandanha two young Americans from Wellsville, N. Y., who went down to operate the Diamond King Company, are toiling away in a desperate effort to get together enough money to come back home.

In persuading people to put up money for the diamond propositions on the Jequitinhonha River, liberal use has been made of a report to the State Department made by George E. Anderson, formerly American Consul General at Rio de Janeiro, in which he called the Jequitinhonha "the most famous of diamond rivers," and also of a statement he made in the Daily Consular Report, No. 2,870, dated May 15, 1907, in which he stated that "in one year 100,000 karats had been taken out of its banks."

Similar use has been made of a printed report attributed to Jesse R. Grant, son of the late President Grant, in which the belief was advanced that the river was the most valuable ever known, and that the writer expected a return of at least $1 per cubic yard from the gravel.

These, together with an indorsement by W. G. Meyer, as one who had many years' experience in the South African diamond fields, and than whom "there is no better authority in the world," are contained in a nine-page printed pamphlet, issued in New York April 2, 1910, by the Brazilian Dredging Company, which had an office at 150 Nassau Street, but has moved; also there was a picture of a dredge working on the Jequitinhonha. This picture, it is asserted by Messrs. McCabe, Richards, and Gilchrist, was taken at Oroville, Cal., of a dredge called the Indiana II., which was working there.

The first scene of the present comedy is laid in the lobby of the Neil House in Columbus, Ohio. The action started, as related by Mr. McCabe and Mr. Richards yesterday at the Knickerbocker, with a casual stroll taken by Mr. and Mrs. McCabe through the hotel.

"My arm was grabbed by an acquaintance," said Mr. McCabe.

"'Let me take you up and introduce you to the Diamond King of Brazil,' he said.

"I didn't want to meet any diamond Kings, and said so.

"'Come on,' he said; 'you and Mrs.

WORST GRAFT IN CHARITY.

Fosdick Says "Smug Element" Is Worse Than City Officials.

Former Commissioner of Accounts Raymond D. Fosdick, speaking last evening at the dinner of the Collegiate Club, in the Parish House of the Reformed Church of Harlem, told of a charitable institution in this city where graft flourished to such an extent that in comparison the City Government would seem the acme of honesty and efficiency. He said he knew enough of such graft to keep the papers screaming for months.

Mr. Fosdick was making his plea for less criticism of the public official who is doing his best under trying circumstances.

"The worst thing in our civic dishonesty is the supposed reputable man," he said. "Such as, for instance, a pastor congratulating me after a talk I made for efficient citizenship and then asking me to get his son a 'soft' job in my department. Then take the loan shark investigation some time ago. We discovered that the money that was being loaned at exorbitant rates was being supplied by men who held high positions in the business and social world.

"Is there graft in the municipal government? Sure there is graft in the municipal government, and there is graft in business, and even in our charitable institutions. Why, I know of one charitable institution, presided over by two superannuated clergymen, where graft flourishes in every form. I should like to se an investigation started in these institutions."

"BIG TIM" SULLIVAN FAILING.

Friends Do Not Expect Him to Fill His Seat in Congress.

The condition of State Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan is much more serious than his friends are willing publicly to admit, it was learned last night. The Bowery leader has been ailing for some time, and it is not believed that he will ever take the seat in Congress to which he was elected last Tuesday.

A report that Senator Sullivan had been removed from the St. Denis Hotel in this city, where he has had apartments, to the sanitarium of Dr. G. V. W. Bond, in North Broadway, Yonkers, was denied last night by the head of that institution, who declared that "Big Tim" had never been an inmate of the sanitarium and that he had no knowledge of his whereabouts. The only ground for the report was that several years ago, when "Little Tim" was taken ill he stopped at pqqpthis sanitarium for several weeks.

Political and business associates of Mr. Sullivan admitted privately that his condition was serious, and that no hope was entertained for his recovery. It was stated on good authority that he was at the home of Larry Mulligan, his brother-in-law, near Greenwich, Conn.

MONEY TRUST PAPERS GONE.

Congressman Henry Says His Desk Has Been Twice Tampered With.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Representative Robert L. Henry of Texas, Chairman of the House Committee on Rules, has reported to the United States Capitol police that twice within the last twenty-four hours his desk in the Capitol Building has been forced open and private papers have been taken. Mr. Henry said to-night that he believed a pending inventory of his desk's contents would show that some confidential correspondence on the subject of the proposed money trust legislation was missing. Nothing of intrinsic value was taken, and this appeared to dispose of the first suspicion that the desk was opened for the purpose of petty theft. Mr. Henry said he did not suspect anybody.

When Mr. Henry and his secretary were looking for some papers in the desk last night they discovered that somebody had disarranged papers in it, and had pulled down but had not locked the roll top. The desk was locked by Mr. Henry. He found this morning that it had been tampered with again. The lock had been torn out and the papers inside were awry. It was supposed that Mr. Henry's room was entered by means of a skeleton key.

Just before the close of the last session of Congress, in August, the desk of Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky, Chairman of the House Committee on the District of Columbia, in the House Office Building, was broken open and papers in it set on fire.

MAUD MALONE'S "AT COURT."

Invites the Public to Attend Her Trial for Disturbing Wilson Meeting.

Invitations, especially autographed, are out for an "At Court" this morning at 10 o'clock by way of formally opening the Special Sessions social season. Miss Maud Malone is author of the invitations, and she expects to do the receiving herself. They are done in pale blue Remington over white, and instead of the austere and older-fashioned "R. S. V. P.," they contain the initials "C. O. T. A. S." Of course the letters stand for "Come Over Tuesday and See."

Here is the invitation through which she has bidden them assemble:

> The public is invited to attend the trial of the People vs. Maud Malone, to be held Tuesday, Nov. 12, 10 A. M., at the Court of Special Sessions, Atlantic Avenue and Clinton Street, Brooklyn. The charge is wilfully disturbing a public meeting. This is a misdemeanor, the punishment for which is one year in prison or $500 fine. On Oct. 19, at a meeting at the Academy of Music, the defendant got up in her place and asked Mr. Wilson, "What about woman suffrage?" She was thrown out and arrested. Men have always questioned candidates at political meetings. Why not women?

> C. O. T. A. S. MAUD MALONE.

The traffic policeman at the Brooklyn Bridge, to whom no corner of Brooklyn is so remote that he cannot give directions how to get there, shook his head yesterday when asked how Maud Malone's social acquaintances might manage to attend her "At Court." He said it was a far journey to the court house, and those who intended to be present had better start about two hours before they expected to arrive there.

BERNHEIMER WILL UPHELD.

New York Man and His Sister Will Receive About $1,000,000 Apiece.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—Sidney Bernheimer of New York and his sister, Mrs. Carrie Scharff of this city, will each receive $1,000,000 as the result of the verdict in the Port Gibson (Miss.) court sustaining the will of Jacob Bernheimer, which left them practically his entire estate, including Southern real estate and bank stocks.

It is said that under the settlement Sidney Bernheimer and Mrs. Scharff agreed to give "a substantial sum" to the children of the late Marcus Bernheimer, who was one of those who began the suit, but fell dead in the court room at Port Gibson on March 8.

GUNMEN FACE JURY FOR MURDER TO-DAY

Box Is Filled at the End of Second Long Day of Examining Talesmen.

STATE'S OPENING UNCERTAIN

Whitman May Call Jack Rose or First Have Other Witnesses Identify Defendants as Slayers.

Jurors Who Will Try the Gunmen.

Foreman—WILLIAM H. MONTGOMERY, 974 St. Nicholas Avenue.
No. 2—LEO KRAMER, 110 West Eighty-eighth Street.
No. 3—EDWIN FISHER, 297 East 161st Street.
No. 4—SAMUEL M. COMSTOCK, 139 East Seventy-first Street.
No. 5—CHARLES P. HUNTINGTON, 109 East Eighty-ninth Street.
No. 6—JOHN GUDEBROD, 433 East Thirty-third Street.
No. 7—HENRY C. REYNOLDS, 330 East 236th Street.
No. 8—HENRY I. DITTMAN, Marie Antoinette Hotel.
No. 9—JOHN G. DUFFY, 229 West 135th Street.
No. 10—SYDNEY J. HAMILTON, 465 Central Park West.
No. 11—ALFRED J. HERNSHEIM, 51 West Seventy-first Street.
No. 12—FRANK H. GOULD, 550 Riverside Drive.

The jury which is to try the gunmen—"Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, "Whitey" Lewis, and "Dago Frank" Cirofici—in Justice Goff's Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court was completed at exactly 7:10 o'clock yesterday evening after a court session lasting with an hour's recess from 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The last man chosen, really the thirteenth, took Seat 4 in the jury box, replacing Frederick J. Shalek, who had been selected on Friday and who was taken ill yesterday. The thirteenth man was Samuel M. Comstock, a silver-haired man with a white mustache, very dignified and very much in earnest. He appeared a worthy successor to Mr. Shalek, a smaller man, but one equally dignified and equally as much in earnest.

Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss will make the opening address to the jury at 10:30 o'clock this morning, and immediately thereafter the trial of the four men accused of having murdered Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, will actually begin. The first witnesses called will be those who were called at the trial of Lieut. Charles Becker, policemen, an ambulance surgeon, Coroner's Physician Schultze, and others to establish the corpus delicti. It may be that Jacob Hecht, the ex-waiter in the Hotel Metropole, may be called at this time, and if so, there will arise a question as to how to proceed with the testimony.

District Attorney Whitman may elect to put "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose on the stand at once and through him establish the fact that ~~the gunmen on~~ trial were employed by him to commit the murder, or he may introduce the testimony of several witnesses who can identify the gunmen as the men they saw fire the shots that killed the gambler.

The four gunmen and their counsel, ex-Magistrate Charles G. F. Wahle, were thoroughly satisfied at the conclusion of yesterday's session with the jury which had been obtained. The twelve men are rather over than under middle age, only a few of them being young men. With possibly one exception all seem men of serious minds, fully cognizant of the responsibility which rests on them. Six of the ten have mustaches and the foreman and Juror 10 wear glasses.

Mr. Whitman was equally satisfied with the jurors, accepting the last man when he still had two remaining of his peremptory challenges. It required the examination of 122 talesmen, however, before a jury was selected. Fifty-six talesmen were excused for cause and fifty-four were kept out of the jury box by the peremptory challenges. Of the panel of 200 men 198 answered to their names in court and the seventy-six who were not needed were excused from further duty when Justice Goff adjourned court last evening, allowing the twelve men selected to go to their homes.

It was just 10:33 o'clock when Justice Goff ascended the bench, and a minute afterward when the gunmen were brought in. They swaggered along, "Dago Frank" in the lead, with "Whitey," "Lefty," and "Gyp" in that order behind him, looking fully as confident as they had on Friday. They bowed to the court and to their counsel, and then took seats behind the counsel table. Leaving and returning at the noon recess they marched along as though they least of all in the courtroom were concerned in the proceedings, and when they tried to leave the courtroom after 7 o'clock they all burst out laughing when it was found that the door into the Tombs was locked and that the Deputy Sheriff escorting them did not have a key. It seemed to amuse them to be locked out of jail. As they waited to be let in they spoke of the jury which had left the courtroom an instant before, and each of them declared himself absolutely satisfied with the men in whose hands the fate of the four will rest.

Five jurors who had been selected on Friday took seats in the jury box when the trial began yesterday, and it was not until 12:28 o'clock, almost two hours later, that John Gudebrod joined them. He was the twenty-first talesman to be examined yesterday and the fiftieth since the beginning of the trial.

Gudebrod is a tall man with good shoulders. He is clean shaven and has dark hair, tinged with gray over the temples. His features are strongly marked, and as he took his seat he composed himself in his chair, very evidently having determined to pay his closest attention to the case. He took the last seat in the first row of seats, and it was noticed that he was the only man there without a mustache. Mr. Shalek, who left later, had a heavy gray beard.

Juror No. 7, Henry C. Reynolds, was chosen nine minutes later, and for an instant he looked as though a jury were to be got quickly, but five more men were passed before an eighth juror was found.

Henry I. Dittman, Juror No. 8, was revealed on the stand as a clean-shaven man of more than middle height, well set up, with light, thin hair. He refused to take an oath, but affirmed that he would tell the truth. His examination was brief, but it was not concluded until 1 o'clock, and Justice Goff ordered a recess until 2 o'clock for luncheon.

Their absence from the courtroom seemed to have given the lawyers their second wind, for ten talesmen were examined before John G. Duffy, a short, thick-set man with a stubby mustache and close-cropped gray hair, was chosen to take the ninth seat.

Mr. Whitman and Mr. Wahle examined fourteen more talesmen before they agreed on Mr. Hamilton, and meantime Mr. Shalek had asked to be excused. He was obviously ill, and Justice Goff allowed him to leave the jury box.

With Mr. Hamilton installed in the tenth seat, there still remained three seats to fill, and it was then 4:05 o'clock. Still the wearisome examinations were continued, and man after man was passed, until twenty-eight had taken seats on the witness stand, only to leave them a few minutes later. Then, at 5:51 o'clock, Alfred J. Hernsheim was selected. He is short and dark, with heavy black hair and a close-cropped black mustache.

Ten more men were examined before Mr. Gould was chosen, and four more before Mr. Comstock took the seat made vacant by Mr. Shalek. Then Justice Goff put the jurors on their honor not to discuss the case even with their families, and allowed them to go home, adjourning court until 10:30 o'clock this morning. It had taken two full days to complete the jury.

A delightful account of a visit to "the mirror of the sea" will be one of the features of NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES.

BROKER ATTACKED CALLING ON WOMAN

Frederick Judson, Covered with Stab Wounds, Rushes from Mrs. Dencker's Apartment.

HER HUSBAND DISAPPEARS

Missing Man Arrived Home Shortly After Young Visitor Was Admitted—Victim Will Recover.

Frederick Judson, a stock broker of Chicago, who is well known in Philadelphia and this city, staggered into the cellar of an apartment house, at 446 Central Park West at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, bleeding from wounds in his leg, arm, shoulder, and abdomen, and cried to the janitor, Thomas Burnett, who rushed to his assistance:

"For God's sake, get a doctor. I've been stabbed."

Mr. Judson, who was sinking into a state of unconsciousness, informed the police, who were immediately summoned, that he was 21 years old, that he resided at the Racquet Club, Sixteenth and Locust Streets, Philadelphia, and that his father was the President of the Realty Realization Company of Chicago. He was taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital, where late last night he was reported seriously but not dangerously wounded.

In the meantime Mr. Judson's footsteps had been traced back to the Edgemere apartments, 3 West 104th Street, where it was learned that he had been calling on Mrs. May Dencker, the wife of Otto Dencker, a real estate operator, with offices at 503 Fifth Avenue. According to the story of William Smith, the elevator boy in charge during the afternoon, Mrs. Dencker had informed him that she expected a caller and that he should admit him without notifying her. At about 2:45 o'clock, not more than half an hour after the arrival of Mr. Judson, Mr. Dencker arrived home and was immediately taken up to the fourth floor to his apartments.

Heard Sounds of Quarrel.

At this time Mrs. Engelhardt, the wife of the Superintendent, was in one of the back apartments of the same floor where the Denckers occupy the front apartment. She was attracted by the sound of quarreling voices and, running out into the hall, saw Mrs. Dencker in the door in a hysterical condition, she said. Thinking that some family quarrel had occurred, and not wishing to interfere, owing to the fact that the Denckers had been her tenants for four years, she said she quietly passed downstairs, noticing that Mr. Dencker went before her. Late last night he had not returned to the house.

In the meantime, however, Judson had rushed downstairs, out into the street to the apartment house in Central Park West, between 104th and 105th Streets. The elevator boy told the police that he had not seen any wounded man leave the house, explaining that he was on the sixth floor answering an elevator call at the time.

When Detectives Wilbur, Owens, and L'Heureux of the West 100th Street Station arrived, they found the apartment in perfect order. The maid of the flat was absent, and Mrs. Dencker was the sole occupant. Although she was not arrested, the detectives removed her immediately to the police station, where she gave her name as Mrs. May Danna. She would admit nothing, however, save that her husband had been at the apartment prior to the stabbing. No trace could be found of the weapon. She was released later.

Met At a Football Game.

From fragmentary details gleaned from the elevator boy, the Superintendent, and Mrs. Dencker, it was learned that she had met Mr. Judson two weeks ago after attending a football game in New Haven. The meeting took place, it was said, in the Pullman car, and when the two reached New York Mrs. Dencker gave the young man her card and asked him to call.

Yesterday morning, it was declared, Mrs. Dencker received a telephone call and the appointment for the afternoon was made. Immediately the elevator boy was instructed to admit Mr. Judson when he called.

When Mr. Judson arrived at the hospital he was in too weak a condition to describe what had happened. He gave as the name of his best friend George K. Judson of Cleveland, Ohio, but became silent when his assault was broached.

Late in the evening a man who said he was a relative of the missing Mr. Dencker went to the apartment and conferred for a long time with Detective L'Heureux. It was learned that he had received a telegram couched in wandering language from Mr. Dencker and had been led therefrom to fear that the husband intended to make some attempt upon his life. Six detectives were at once detailed to trace him.

Thomas Bennett, the Superintendent of the Greenwich Apartment, where Judson was found bleeding in the cellar, could shed little light on the mystery. The wounded man had evidently escaped notice in his wild rush of fully 100 feet from the house where he was wounded to the place where the ambulance eventually came to him.

Mr. Judson, it is said, is in the habit of stopping at the Hotel Martinique, but he has not been registered there within the last ten days. At the hotel he is known as the son of the President of the Realty Realization Company of Chicago, and as a broker who conducts most of his business in Philadelphia and New York. A clerk at the hotel said that a telephone call had been made for him earlier in the day, and that the inquirer had been informed that Mr. Judson was not stopping at the hotel.

In Philadelphia Mr. Judson is well known, belonging to many clubs, among which are the University, the Union League, and the Racquet.

Mrs. Dencker is a dark, handsome woman of about 40 years.

BANS SHREWSBURY OYSTERS.

Secretary Wilson Orders Shipment Seized, Saying River Is Polluted.

The Department of Agriculture has put the once popular oysters from the Shrewsbury River under the ban. Secretary Wilson, in telegraphing yesterday to the United States District Attorney, directing him to seize a consignment of these oysters, said:

"The waters of the Shrewsbury River are polluted, and these samples of a brand of oysters once famous in New York are positively filthy and the worst I have ever seen."

BATTLE JUST BEGUN, SAYS COL. ROOSEVELT

Congratulates His Party on Feats "Unparalleled in History of Free Government."

OFFER TO THE OLD PARTIES

Support for Them If They Attempt to Put Any Progressive Plank Into Legislation—Party Here to Stay.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt made public last night a statement in which he congratulated his followers in the Progressive ranks on their accomplishment in bringing about the crushing defeat of the Republican Party "since the theft of the Republican organization by the Republican bosses at Chicago last June."

The Progressive leader reiterates what he has already said—that the Progressive Party has come to stay and that the battle has just begun. At the same time he assures the old parties of Progressive support any time they desire to carry into effect policies embodied in the Progressive platform.

The Colonel pronounces the achievements of the Progressive Party as "literally unparalleled in the history of free government."

Here is the statement in full:

I congratulate the Progressives of the country—that is, I congratulate those good men and women who, with sincerity of purpose for the common good, have had the vision to look into the coming years and see what the future demands from us who work in this present.

What the Progressive Party has done since the theft of the Republican organization by the Republican bosses at Chicago last June is literally unparalleled in the history of free government, worked under representative institutions. Three months have gone by since some hundreds of earnest men and women gathered to found the new Progressive Party.

Without much money, without any organization, against the wealth of the country, against the entire organized political ability of the country, against the bitter hostility of 90 per cent. of the press of the country, against the furious opposition of every upholder of special privilege, whether in politics or in business, and with the channels of information to the public largely choked—the Progressive Party has polled between four and four and one-half million votes; has hopelessly beaten one of the old parties, both in the Electoral College and in the popular vote; has carried several of the important States in the Union, and has taken second place in the Nation, and either first or second place in some thirty-seven of the forty-eight States.

No task in any way approaching this has ever before been performed by any party in our country. Such a feat, performed by volunteers hastily brought together and without any previous co-operation with each other, against the trained veterans of the political arena—those trained veterans including the entire mercenary forces of politics—should be a source of pride not only to those who performed the task but to all believers in good citizenship and in the capacity of Americans for self-government.

During the campaign I said repeatedly that this was in no shape or way a one-man movement, but a movement for great principles—a movement which has sprung, as all healthy movements in our democracy must spring, from the heart and conscience of the people themselves. This truth must be kept steadily before the minds of all of us. The Progressive Party has come to stay. If either of the old parties will endeavor to put into legislation any one of our planks it can count upon our hearty support in so doing; but we will not rest contented until the entire platform is enacted into law and becomes part of our political system, National and State.

I am proud indeed that the great, good fortune has been mine to fight shoulder to shoulder with the men and women who, in the ranks and in various positions of leadership, have waged this great battle for social and industrial justice. So far from being over, the battle has just begun. We will not rest content until every feature of the Progressive programme has been put into effect; and when this has been done, unquestionably there will have opened to us new avenues, along which it will still be a duty to work for the moral and economic betterment of our people.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Colonel said yesterday that for the next few weeks he would devote himself unremittingly to literary work. The Progressive leaders are trying hard to get the Colonel to attend the meeting of the Progressive National Committee in Chicago on Dec. 10, when the future of the party is to be provided for. The Colonel has not as yet decided whether he will do so or not.

HELD ON ROOSEVELT CHARGE.

Editor Accused of Criminal Libel Is Under Bond of $500.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 11.—George A. Newett, editor and publisher of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, whom Col. Roosevelt recently charged with criminal libel, waived preliminary examination to-day and was held in a bond of $500 for the December term of the Circuit Court.

No representative of Col. Roosevelt was present.

SCHRANK ON TRIAL TO-DAY.

Roosevelt's Alleged Assailant to be in Court Several Days.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 11.—John Schrank will be put on trial in the Municipal Court to-morrow on the charge of attempting to kill Col. Theodore Roosevelt in this city on the night of Oct. 14 last, it was announced by W. A. Zabel, District Attorney, to-day.

This is in line with Zabel's statement of several weeks ago that the prisoner would not be tried until after the National election. The trial, it is thought, will last three or four days.

"MILLIONAIRE KID" A FRAUD.

14-Year-Old Traveler Not the Son of ex-Governor Bushnell of Ohio.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—A fourteen-year-old boy, plentifully supplied with money and professing to be a son of ex-Gov. Asa Bushnell of Springfield, Ohio, has been a guest, unaccompanied, at the Narragansett Hotel for a week past. He moved on to New York on Friday night by way of the Yale-Brown game on Saturday in New Haven.

This morning word was received from Springfield, Ohio, that ex-Gov. Bushnell left one son, John, who is a man of 35 or 40 years of age, and who lives with his family in that city. He declares that the youthful traveler is a fraud, so far as his claim to kinship to ex-Gov. Bushnell is concerned.

SENATOR RAYNER VERY ILL.

Has Neuritis, Which May Make an Operation Necessary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Isidor Rayner of Maryland is critically ill at his home, 1,320 Eighteenth Street, N. W. There is believed to be a fighting chance for his life, however. Mr. Rayner is suffering from an aggravated form of neuritis, with complications which seem to indicate that nothing but an operation, if one can be performed, will pull him through.

Five physicians have been in consultation on the case during the last few days, among them Dr. John M. T. Finney, the famous Johns Hopkins Hospital surgeon, and Dr. Samuel T. Earle, Jr., a specialist from the Baltimore Medical College. The Senator's son, William B. Rayner of Washington, arranged at Senator Rayner's request with the family physician, Dr. B. L. Hardin of this city, to consult with Drs. Finney and Earle and Dr. Francis R. Hagner of Washington, with a view to an operation to relieve his condition.

SWEAR OFF ASTOR TAXES.

Taxable Assets More Than Offset by Liabilities, Commissioner Hears.

Nicholas Biddle, L. Cass Ledyard, Jr., and William Dobbyn, representing the estate of the late John Jacob Astor, made an affidavit before Tax Commissioner Charles White yesterday that the taxable assets of the estate were more than offset by liabilities. The estate was assessed at $5,000,000 for the year, but, according to the representatives of the estate, the cash on hand on Oct. 1, as well as the taxable property, amounted to only $2,200,000. The liabilities, they said, amounted to $3,000,000. All bonds and stocks, they declared, had been exempted under the transfer tax law. Upon this statement Commissioner White canceled the assessment. Last year Mr. Astor's estate was assessed at $800,000, but he swore off $450,000.

The estate of another person who died in the Titanic disaster came up for taxation yesterday. Mrs. Flora C. Stewart, widow of Albert A. Stewart, who was drowned when the liner sank, told the Tax Commissioner that the taxable value of the estate was only $97,000, although it had been assessed at $250,000. The amount to be assessed was cut down to $39,500.

NEW CROPS OF BERRIES.

Warm Weather Makes Raspberries and Strawberries Grow Again.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 11.—If this weather keeps up the raspberry and strawberry trust will get an awful jolt. This morning Miss Jennie Birdsall picked a pint of red raspberries in the rear yard of her home in North Broadway, and she says the prospects are good for another crop.

Judge Frank V. Millard says his strawberry plants are in blossom, and if frost does not come he hopes to have a mess of berries for his Thanksgiving dinner.

Other signs of the unseasonable weather were noted this morning when commuters were seen putting up the screen doors again. Some even complained that the Jersey mosquitos have come back and a number of bites were exhibited as proof. Even John D. Rockefeller has felt the effect of the warm spell. He has abandoned his paper vest and golfs in his regular Summer attire.

FINDS HER GEM IN FOWL.

Mrs. Martin Says She Discovered Lost Jewel in Sunday Dinner.

This appealing little tale may seem as if it came out of Winsted, Conn., but it is really an offering from truth-loving Brooklyn. The beginning of it was in May last, when Mrs. Charles Martin of 6,910, Third Avenue, Brooklyn, discovered that a large diamond set in a ring which she was wearing had dropped from its setting. The stone could not be found.

Last Sunday Mr. Martin selected a fat chicken from his back-yard flock and killed it for dinner. Mrs. Martin was eating of the fowl when her teeth struck something hard, she says. Investigating, she amazed her husband by holding up to his view the long-missing diamond. The Martins suppose that Mrs. Martin lost the stone while feeding the chickens, but no theory is advanced to explain why the gem was found in the chicken's flesh, instead of in its gizzard.

NO LIVING FOR THE MINISTER.

Can't Pay His Bills on $1,000 a Year, He Says on Leaving Riverhead.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Nov. 11.—That a minister cannot face the high cost of living of the present day and "maintain his honor" on a salary of $1,000 a year was the reason given by the Rev. Gilbert A. Shaw, rector of Grace Episcopal Church of Riverhead, L. I., for his resignation, which he read from the pulpit at the morning service yesterday. He has accepted a call to a church at Hazleton, Penn., where he will receive a larger salary.

"I could not stay here and pay my bills, and I do not intend to run into debt," said he, in discussing his resignation. "I will receive a larger salary where I am going, and will be able to meet my obligations. It seems to me, therefore, that the honorable thing to do is for me to leave, although I have always liked this place and the people."

The Rev. Robert Weeks, a former archdeacon, has agreed to fill the pulpit of Grace Church until a successor to the Rev. Mr. Shaw can be found.

STEAL PRIEST'S XMAS FOWL.

Two Accused of Raiding Flock Intended for Poor Parishioners.

Father Cloke of the Church of St. Catherine of Genoa was filled with righteous anger yesterday morning when he went out to look at the chickens and turkeys he had been raising back of the rectory in Linden Avenue, for the hand of the marauder had been thrust into the coops during the night, and more than fifty of the fowl were gone.

His anger was fired because these fowl were not raised for the rectory table. They were not raised for market. They were just the chickens and turkeys that the good priest had been carefully tending so that by Christmas time they should be fat and tender for distribution among all the poor of his parish.

The police, always very respectful to Father Coke, could hardly wait to get their hands on the sinners who had done so vile a thing. Before many hours passed they arested Samuel Stillwell and James T. Lott, both of Varkins Road, and Magistrate Harris will examine them to-morrow in the Flatbush Court.

LESS ALARM IN EUROPE

Outlook for Avoiding General War Improves—German Army as a Peace Factor.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 11, (10 P. M.)—The Bulgarians began an attack on the Turkish advanced positions along the Tchatalja line yesterday afternoon. The fighting continued throughout to-day.

Judging from the number of wounded arriving in Constantinople, the Turkish troops are offering fierce resistance.

The Porte to-night sent a note by telegraph to the Turkish representatives abroad, inquiring what progress had been made with respect to obtaining the conditions of the Balkan States in the matter of an armistice.

The Porte is still without a reply to its recent appeal to the powers.

The number of wounded soldiers reaching the capital is increasing to such an extent that the War Office has decided to send contingents to Brusa, Asia Minor.

Every possible accommodation in the capital is being utilized for the care of the wounded. Several warehouses, a wing of the barracks, and other buildings have been transformed into hospitals, and two large hospitals in the suburb of Kadikeui were opened to-day. The Unionist and other political clubs, temporarily closed by order of the Government, have also been converted into hospitals.

An official bulletin says that in the past twenty-four hours six new cases of cholera, with two deaths, have occurred among the refugees. The usual sanitary and quarantine measures are being applied to shipping leaving Constantinople.

The sanitary situation of the Turkish troops at Hademkeui is deplorable. One hundred cases of cholera, of which fifty have resulted fatally, are reported among the soldiers.

It is reported that cholera has appeared among the Bulgarian troops.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—Judging by all precedents in the present war, the news from Constantinople is the herald of another Turkish defeat at the Tchatalja lines, where a battle has been proceeding for two or three days.

The Turkish admission that so many wounded are arriving at the capital as to show that the Turks are offering fierce resistance has great significance in view of previous admissions of a similar nature, and may be regarded as preparing the public mind for another disappointment. It may be quite possible that this will prove the last great battle of the campaign.

Descriptions of conditions at Tchatalja differ radically. The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily News says that the troops sent there are excellent, and that every yard of the defenses has been mined and protected by barded wire.

German officers, however, report that the troops are deserting because of hunger, and that men are dying from starvation in the trenches.

The Daily Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent wired on Sunday that the Bulgarian advance had begun and that Nazim Pasha, the Turkish Commander in Chief, had notified his Government that he could offer no effective resistance.

The Daily News correspondent says that there seem to be a quarter of a million persons dying from sheer starvation outside the Constantinople walls, which soon will be surrounded by a pestilence-stricken famished horde. Even now the people are fighting with the soldiers for handfuls of grain. Every effort is being made to transport the refugees to Anatolia, which only means averting a ghastly catastrophe.

There are indications that Bulgaria may, after all, forego a triumphal entry into Constantinople. According to some reports Bulgaria will be content with finding suitable Winter quarters for her army while the peace negotiations are going on and the subsequent settlements are being arranged.

The question of mediation has made another step forward in the announcement from Paris last night that the Austrian Government has agreed to join with the other powers in transmitting Turkey's request for mediation to the allies and in inquiring on what terms the allies are disposed to accept mediation.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that in the opinion of European doctors the disease which has started among the wounded is certainly Asiatic cholera. Several battalions of Syrian troops have been repatriated, apparently on account of cholera.

The dispatch adds that there are 60,000 troops in the neighborhood of Constantinople who have not been engaged in the fighting yet, and as they are better fed they are likely to give a good account of themselves at the Tchatalja lines.

The Turkish authorities, owing to the protests of the Ambassadors, now disclaim any intention of proclaiming a holy war. They give a labored explanation that the sending of a hundred Mohammedan priests to preach to the troops does not really mean such a war, but is in order to inspire the soldiers with religious fervor.

ARMY IN A SERVIAN TRAP.

Caught Between Two Columns, It Must Surrender or Flee to Mountains.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—Telegraphing from Uskub, a special correspondent of The Daily Telegraph gives details of the Servian advance in Macedonia. He says:

"Since the beginning of hostilities it has been remarkable. Counting the days of battle, the average rate of advance has been about 14 miles daily, which constitutes one of the most rapid marches ever made in an enemy's territory.

"One effect has been completely to demoralize the Turks, preventing them from reforming their shattered forces and from offering serious resistance to the victorious Servians.

"Despite the swiftness of the advance, the supply columns are keeping pace with the fighting troops. The difficulties of this wonderful performance have been enhanced by the terrible weather now prevailing. Winter has now set in among the Balkans. The cold is intense, with deep snow everywhere. In Uskub it snowed for three days, and the roads are in a frightful condition."

Apparently the Greek Army has not carried out the full programme allotted to it in the plans of the Balkan Allies. According to those plans it was to take both Salonika and Monastir. The Daily Telegraph's correspondent says that, the Greek Army having failed to carry out the second part of the programme, it is now certain that within a week, perhaps less, the honor of capturing Monastir will be won by the Servians.

One wing of their First Army is drawing near to Salonika along the railway, and the other is advancing through the mountains via Monastir. The whole remaining Turkish forces will be caught between these columns and forced to surrender or to fly west into the mountains of Albania, where the country is covered by deep snow and no supplies are available to feed men and horses.

The plight of the remnants of the Turkish Macedonian Army is pitiable, and it must starve among the mountains or surrender.

SOFIA, Nov. 11.—A dispatch from Seres, Macedonia, dated Nov. 9 says that a reconnaissance last Friday afternoon disclosed strong Turkish forces occupying the heights of Aivatovo and Ilo.

After a desperate fight the following morning the Turks retreated toward Salonika pursued by the Bulgarians, who soon afterward were informed that Salonika had surrendered to the Greek Army. But as the enemy who had opposed the Bulgarians had not capitulated, Gen. Theoboroff ordered that the forward movement be resumed. This order was later countermanded as the Turks continued to retreat without fighting, and the Bulgarians resumed their march on Salonika. The dispatch continues:

"Yesterday evening a Greek Colonel commanding a cavalry brigade called on Gen. Theoboroff and asked what he purposed to do. The General replied that the Bulgarian troops would attack the enemy at all costs on Saturday morning at dawn. The Colonel left to report the result of the interview to the Greek Commander in Chief."

ATHENS, Nov. 11.—A force of 15,000 Greek soldiers has entered Salonika, according to wireless messages received here from that city.

The remainder of the Greek Army is encamped outside the fortress awaiting the surrender of the Turkish arms.

Many Turkish families are leaving the city despite assurances given by the Metropolitan that no harm will be done to them.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—A vivid account of the storming of Prilep comes from The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Uskub.

"On the Servian side," he says, "the battle was waged almost entirely by the infantry, because the nature of the country prevented the guns from being dragged to the front. The Servians had to advance through a narrow defile, which was covered with snow and ice. Both sides suffered terrible hardships.

"The final storming of the Turkish trenches occurred on Thursday. The hillside was so steep that the Turks, when the Servians came near the trenches, rolled huge rocks down among them, crushing and maiming scores of men.

"The Servians, disregarding all losses, clambered up the rocks in the face of a terrible fire and sprang into the trenches, bayoneting the Turks and smashing them with clubbed rifles when the bayonets broke, while their comrades dashed up the slopes behind to their support.

"The Turks fought bravely, but the great physical size and power of the Servian infantry at close quarters soon told, and in a few minutes the Turks were in full flight. The most remarkable thing in the attack was that there was not a skulker to be seen. Every man seemed to be filled with a fierce desire to close with the Turks, and they raced like men wild with a longing to get at the foe."

BULGARS FLINGING THEIR LIVES AWAY

Foolhardy Charges on the Adrianople Forts Are Proving Terribly Costly.

TURKS RESISTING FIERCELY

City Will Fall Simultaneously with Tchatalja, Says Lieut. Wagner, Who Sketches Big Field Operations.

By LIEUT. WAGNER,
The Only Correspondent at the Front on the Bulgarian Side.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

By arrangement with The Vienna Reichspost.

Copyright, 1912, by THE NEW YORK TIMES Company.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE BULGARIAN ARMY, Nov. 6, (delayed in transmission)—The Bulgarian forces which are attacking Adrianople strive to make up for the insufficiency of the size of their batteries by their foolhardy charges and by their heroic but shockingly costly infantry attacks.

Of two battalions of sixteen companies, which I saw advancing to the charge, only two companies came back, a loss of fourteen men out of every sixteen.

Every night the Bulgarian columns advance from Hadinkeui to the region between the outworks of Ainalu Milet and Kenvertalja, situated to the north of Adrianople.

Every day the fighting breaks out anew at Marash, which is now only a smoking heap of ruins.

Heavy fighting is also proceeding on the right bank of the River Maritza toward Karagach, which covers the railway station and bridge.

Story of the Bulgarian Advance.

At the beginning of the war the Bulgarian second army, under Gen. Ivanoff, two divisions strong, moved forward from the west and north against Adrianople. At the same time the second division in the region of Tamrash and Kirjali and the seventh division in Macedonia also advanced.

The main body of the Tamrash group swung around later into the valley of the Ardar and marched together with the Kirjali group against the southeastern front of Adrianople.

Simultaneously in the east the third army under Gen. Dimitrieff, advanced from the north on Kirk-Kilisseh in four columns. The most westerly column was directed from Petra. The next proceeded via Kovchas and Katalica, the third via Derekeui and Demirdzu, and finally the most easterly column via Tirnovo and Samakov.

Between these two armies, which started their forward movement direct from their points of assembly, the main body of the first army under Gen. Kistintcheff was placed, being brought by railway via Sofia and Philippopolis to the region around Yamboli, whence it began its march southward in five columns.

The offensive taken by the second and third armies led to the first engagements at Adrianople and to the battle of Kirk-Kilisseh.

The first army had reached by Oct. 22 and 23 the region of Demoklija, Tetschkanliu, Kuekier, and Kermeschlia. The right wing columns of this army advanced through Pravodija and Akbunar on Musubeli.

After Oct. 22 the left columns marched by way of Haskeui and Havsa to Kliseli, about fifteen miles south of Adrianople, whereby the further line of investment was completed.

After the battle of Kirk-Kilisseh the third army had its right wing operating through Yenidz and its centre through Kavakli and Lefwschi, and followed the Turks who were falling back in a southerly direction.

Turks Shift Their Front.

The Bulgarian left wing and portions of the eastern column at Tirnovo and Samakov moved forward on Bunarhissar in order to disperse the Turkish troops, retreating on that place, and to press the Turkish Army to the east from its line of retreat.

Owing to the counter measures of the Turkish commander, the Bulgarians were not successful in achieving their aim. The Turks, perceiving in time that the great peril of Sedan was threatening them, hastily withdrew their left wing, which was west of Baba-Eski, on Lule-Burgas. At the same time, by throwing their right wing forward, they wheeled around so as to bring their front facing north and northwest.

On the one hand, this change of front enabled the Bulgarian cavalry division attached to Gen. Kutintcheff's army to advance rapidly and obtain possession of Baba-Eski as well as of the crossing of the river at Demotika.

On the other hand, the offensive operations on both sides led to the three days' battle of Lule-Burgas and Bunarhissar. For this battle Gen. Kutintcheff had brought up from the army investing Adrianople troops whose places before the fortress had been taken by the newly formed Tenth and Eleventh Divisions. Thus Gen. Kutintcheff was able to throw into the battle of Lule-Burgas an army with strong reserves, part of which only arrived after the fighting was begun.

After the fate of the battle had been decided, the Bulgarians attempted to cut off the Turks' retreat through Serai. The Turks sought to check the Bulgarians' advance by sending forward a division east of Visa.

Stubborn Resistance by Moslems.

These engagements, in which the Turks fought with great stubbornness, as they did in numerous isolated fights along the line of retreat from Lule-Burgas to Tchorlu, brought both sides by Nov. 2 to a line between Istranja, Tcherkessheui, and Tchorlu, where the Turks, after a three days' battle, sustained another heavy defeat.

This defeat threw them back behind the Tchataldja lines. Around these lines the last battle is now taking place. The Bulgarian troops have already captured several important outworks of the Turkish positions, where in the meantime the Bulgarian Supreme Commander has brought up for the final attack all the troops that could be spared from the force investing Adrianople.

At Adrianople, meanwhile, fierce fighting has taken place between the heroically attacking Bulgarians and the Turks, who have fought gallantly and with initiative.

On Oct. 25 and the three following days, and on last Sunday, the Turks made a sally in strong force in the direction of Kadikeui, which caused extraordinarily heavy casualties on both sides.

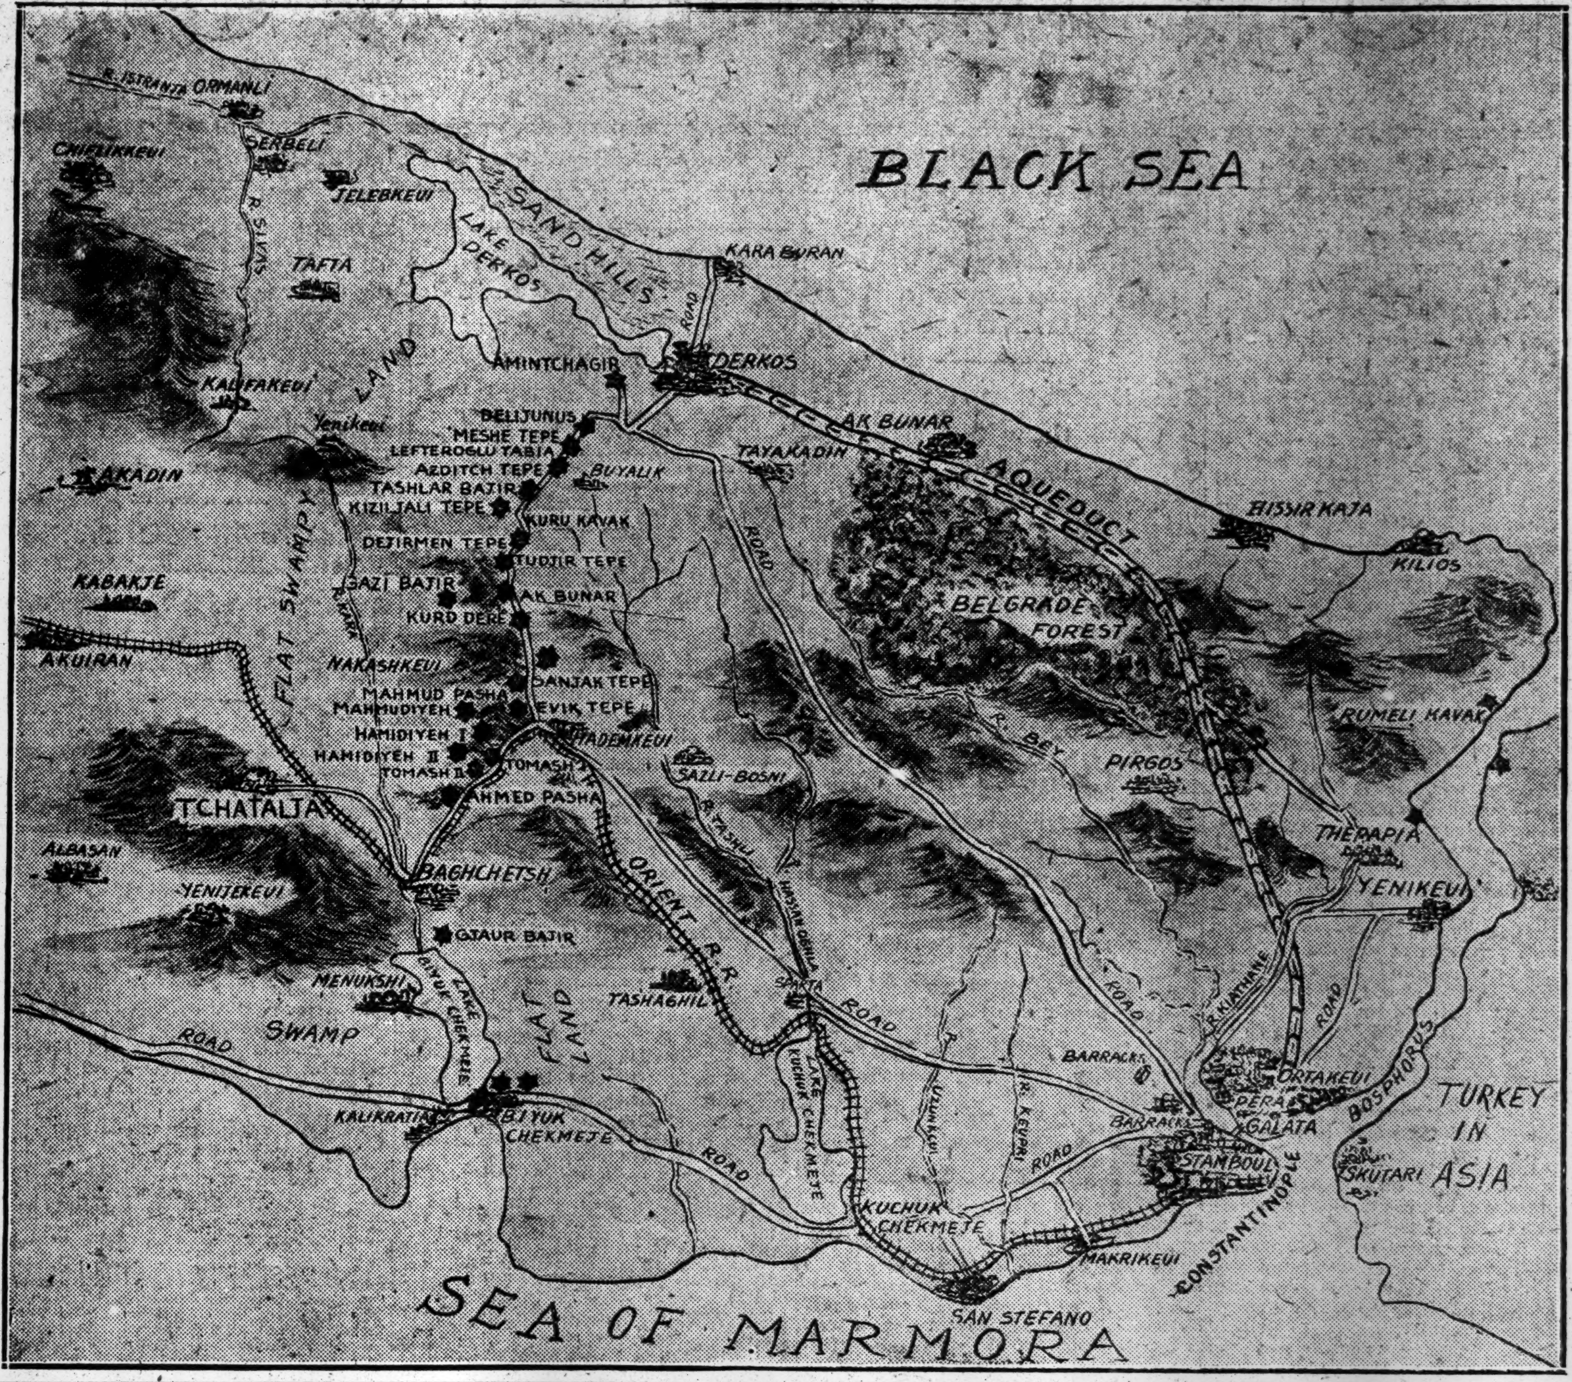
The northeastern and eastern fronts have been quiet since the first fighting, as the Bulgarians have drawn off strong forces from here to the field army, while the Turks have been devoting their activity to the westward.

The decision of battle will probably be reached simultaneously at Tchatalja and Adrianople, thus bringing the brilliantly executed operations of the Bulgarians to a brilliant conclusion.

ADRIANOPLE, Nov. 9, 3:45 P. M., (by indirect route via Odessa.)—The bombardment of this city by the Bulgarians began again yesterday and continued to-day from the south and west. In the afternoon it stopped, and Shukri Pasha, the military commandant, had placards posted all over the city announcing the victory of the garrison, which, he said, had repulsed the Bulgarian attacking force around Marash, and had driven the besiegers a considerable distance into the surrounding country.

The foregoing is the first dispatch sent by any correspondent with the besieged Turkish garrison of Adrianople.

SCENE OF THE GREAT BATTLE FOR POSSESSION OF CONSTANTINOPLE.



PRISONERS BUILD RAILWAY

Bulgaria Puts 8,000 Men to Work on Line to Kirk-Kilisseh.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—A telegram to The Times from Sofia says:

"The Bulgarian authorities are taking active steps to improve communications with the army before Tchatalja.

"Before the outbreak of the war a narrow-gauge railway had been in process of construction from Yamboli to Kizil-Agach, but after the fall of Kirk-Kilisseh the Government decided to make the railway ordinary gauge between Yamboli and Kizil-Agach and Kirk-Kilisseh, by which tarins can be run to Lule-Burgas and Tchatalja.

"About 8,000 men, mostly Turkish prisoners, are now working on the new railway. The portion from Yamboli to Kizil-Agach, about forty kilometers, is already finished, and the remaining forty kilometers to Kirk-Kilisseh will be ready for traffic in about a fortnight.

"Yesterday at the Philippopolis Railway Station Queen Eleonore, in presenting to the Macedonian Volunteers a banner worked by her own hands, spoke as follows:

"'Sons of Macedonia and Thrace: I hand you this flag as a token of sincere respect and admiration for your well-known bravery. Your struggles and sufferings have won the admiration and sympathy of the whole world. The least I can do is to give expression to this sympathy and admiration.

"'The past affords a guarantee that you will worthily bear and guard the flag I now give you, that you will console the disconsolate and restore peace where misery now reigns.'

"Gen. Geneff, Commander of the Macedonian Legion, received the flag from the hands of her Majesty kneeling, and returned thanks for the precious gift."

MISERY IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Refugees Continue to Arrive — Reports of Massacres Corroborated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—The Daily Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent wires via Constanza:

"Constantinople presents a very mournful aspect.

"Mussulman families from the country, worn out with hunger and fatigue, continue to flock into town.

"All the hospitals are filled with wounded to such an extent that it is impossible to give them all proper attention, and in certain hospitals gangrene has begun to make its appearance. Pitiful cases are related of soldiers dying, not from wounds, but from starvation.

"To crown all these calamities, the authorities now admit an outbreak of cholera.

"Constantinople, however, remains perfectly calm, and no single case of aggression is reported. At the same time there appears to be no doubt that in the immediate environs, for example at Silivri, on the Sea of Marmora, a few miles from Tchatalja, massacres have taken place, and details given in connection with the Silivri affair contain a fact which is perhaps presented for the first time in Turkish history, namely, that the massacres were not political, but religious, as it is announced that Greeks, Armenians, and Jews were killed indiscriminately"

A Little Lecture on Getting On

¶All the world is intensely interested in getting on.

¶The newspapers and the magazines are chiefly devoted to the doings of people who are getting on.

¶Rural and city gossip, breakfast talk and after-dinner chat, are largely occupied with this immortal subject.

¶We are a race of gamblers speculating on each other's chances and eternally trying to improve our own.

¶We are as a string of horses on a track, each of us jockeying frantically to make a get-away.

¶From cradle to crepe, from diapers to death, we are forever absorbed in the problem of getting on.

¶And more and more every day it is becoming apparent that clothes play a considerable part in the fight for success.

¶Look at the capable men about you who are engaged in the exhilarating pastime of "putting it over."

¶You will find that the great majority of them are men who exercise unusual discrimination in their dress.

¶And lest you should come back at us with the retort that a successful man can well afford to dress well because he has the money, let us have your company for another paragraph.

¶The prices for Saks clothes begin at 17.50 and range up to 50.00 for suits and up to 75.00 for overcoats; but whether you pay our lowest price or our highest price, it in nowise affects or alters the fact that whatever garment you buy at Saks' is absolutely, regardless of price, the most distinctive example of ready-for-service tailoring that your money can buy in these United States.

IN RODOSTO WHILE BULGARS ATTACKED

Ashmead-Bartlett Describes the Panic in Turkish Port—People Feared Massacre.

HE WAS IN A TIGHT FIX

But, with Mr. Donohoe, Got Away on a French Steamer — Expects Early Fall of the Town.

By ELLIS ASHMEAD-BARTLETT.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
By Arrangement with The London Daily Telegraph.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 11.—I left Constantinople on Saturday for Rodosto to ascertain the movements of the enemy and to attempt to discover what progress he was making in his forward movement to Tchatalja.

I found that prosperous seaport in a wild state of uncertainty and excitement, as the Bulgarians were reported to be only six kilometers away on the Muradli Road.

On Thursday last, this report having come into the town, the religious dignitaries of all the various flocks which are found in these Levantine towns went out to arrange terms of surrender with the invaders, but on arriving at the spot where the enemy were reported they found it vacated, and returned to Rodosto with their mission unaccomplished.

However, on Friday the Turkish warship Masudia, accompanied by a torpedo boat, arrived off the town, and the military element, gaining confidence from the presence of these vessels, decided to defend Rodosto against the invader.

Trenches were accordingly dug on commanding sites, every available man, including the gendarmes, was armed with any old obsolete weapon which could be found, and the enemy were awaited, not with confidence, but in the blind belief that something would happen favorable to the Turks.

On Sunday morning Mr. Donohoe (correspondent of The London Daily Chronicle) and myself motored along the Muradli Road, and, passing through the Turkish outposts, made a reconnaissance on our own account, but we had not gone far when we almost ran into Bulgarian cavalry patrols, who, fortunately, surprised by the appearance of a motor car in these parts, did not advance.

This gave us time to turn the car around and return to Rodosto.

Mr. Donohoe and myself, together with Lionel James, the only war correspondents in Rodosto, then had lunch with the British Consul and his wife.

We had hardly sat down when the guns of the Masudia opened fire with a terrific roar. This caused an indescribable panic among the Greek and Armenian population, who thought that this was the precursor of a general attack and a massacre. The majority fled to the shelter of the Consulates, which were immediately swamped with gesticulating head-lost men and weeping women and children.

We did our best to stop the panic by pointing out that there was no danger and that the Masudia was firing at an enemy who was a long way off and not at the town, but our efforts had little effect, for every time the Masudia fired a broadside from her four-inch and eight-inch guns the houses were shaken to their foundations, and a wild babel of sounds from thousands of terrified Levantines broke out afresh.

Soon the rattle of rifle fire brought fresh terror of a more intimate kind to the unhappy citizens of Rodosto.

We hastened to the highest roof to watch the attack. The Turkish troops that defended the town were ranged in a long, thin line right around the town and could offer no long resistance to the invincible invader.

The fighting lasted throughout the entire afternoon, the enemy steadily approaching until his bullets were whistling over the houses, causing the entire population to take to the cellars.

Every one was scared lest the Bulgarians should bring up artillery and bombard the houses, but on Sunday afternoon, either because they were not in strength or because they had no artillery, the Bulgarians did not press home the attack, and when night fell they were encircling the doomed port with an ever-thickening ring of bayonets, while the feeble, dispirited Turkish garrison were still in possession of the almost undefendable outer works.

The position of Mr. Donohoe and myself now became serious, as all means of escape from the doomed city were now cut off, and we looked to be as good as prisoners of war, which would mean a return home via Sofia and not via Constantinople.

We therefore held a consultation to decide on some means of escape before the enemy took the town.

We tried sailing vessels, but all had left. No steamers remained, and all the roads were held by the enemy, and of horses we had none. Our fate and further utility toward our respective papers seemed black indeed, when suddenly the Mampra, a small steamer flying the French flag, came into port and anchored a long way out to avoid the enemy's fire. She was immediately invaded by thousands of refugees, hundreds of whom had to be refused admission.

Thanks to the French agent, we managed to get on board after a free fight at the gangway, and reached Constantinople safely this morning.

When we left, Rodosto was still holding out, but if the enemy bring up reinforcements it must fall.

NO FOOD FOR EIGHT DAYS.

Turks Sucked Greasy Wood — The Capture of Adrianople Forts.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—A staff correspondent of the Temps, Jean Rodes, who has reached Constantinople from the war zone, sends a vivid picture of the misery of the Turkish soldiers and the disorganization of the Turkish Army. He says:

"We have witnessed the failure of the Turk as a soldier. We have seen him dying of hunger, worn out by fatigue, wrecked by suffering, and running away after having abandoned his place in the combat.

"I have never seen a more poignant picture of human distress than that presented by these unhappy men, thrown into one of the most terrible wars in history, without food, without medical attention, almost without chiefs, almost without arms. And at Seidler I saw a soldier, whose right hand had been severed, hold out to us, bearing for medical help, the bleeding stump around which he had tied a piece of twine.

"I saw long lines of famished men who came to our tent begging for a crumb of bread and staggering away without a murmur of complaint when told that we had none to give. I saw a thousand wounded leaving a trail of blood as they dragged themselves toward Tchorlu. I saw hundreds of others fall by the wayside dying from wounds and fatigue.

"At Tchorlu a column of soldiers, terrible in appearance, staggered through the streets in a driving rain and wind storm. No one paid any attention to them. They had no shelter, nothing to eat. From a near-by bakery an officer threw out handfuls of bread, and the soldiers fought for possession of the loaves. More than half of them got nothing, and turned away, ragged, pallid, and weak.

"I never saw such an image of inferno. One of the most miserable of the wanderers succeeded in getting into the house where we were staying, drenched to the skin and teeth chattering. 'Take all my money, take my clothing, if you will,' he cried, 'but I beg of you to give me some bread.'

"I questioned him. He said he came from Asia Minor and had not eaten for eight days. I gave him a slice of bread and a chocolate tablet, and he went away to join the remnants of the retreating army, of which this was the end.

Bulgars' Victory at Adrianople.

A graphic description of the storming by the Bulgarians of the two Turkish forts of Kartaltepe and Papaztepe, in the outer line of fortifications around Adrianople, is forwarded by a correspondent of the Matin. He declares that their capture seals the doom of the Turkish stronghold.

The operations began at daybreak on Thursday. Following their usual brilliantly successful tactics, the Bulgarian infantry advanced in the direction of the forts under cover of a murderous fire of shrapnel. The Turkish troops, in their turn, sallied out from the forts to deliver a counter attack.

It was then the turn of the Bulgarians' heavy siege artillery, which from every point on the surrounding hills rained a terrific hail of projectiles on the lines of the Turkish troops. Every moment saw fresh companies of Turks marching out from the city and the forts toward the Bulgarians, who continued imperturbably to draw their lines closer together around the forts.

The accurate fire of the Bulgarians' big guns began to tell about 10 o'clock in the morning, when the guns in the fort on Mount Kartel began to slacken in their reply. The fort had been swept by a heavy storm of shells for several hours, the great projectiles bursting right over the works.

The silent Turkish infantry had meanwhile resisted stubbornly the Bulgarian advance, but their lines gradually began to waver.

Suddenly the command, "Fix bayonets!" rang out from the Bulgarian officers, and then, cheering wildly, the Bulgarian infantry dashed forward, and the Turks broke and ran toward the city.

The cannon and rifle fire, which had been slackening, immediately became more brisk, while above the combatants the searchlights flashed and whirled around their immense rays, in which little balls of white smoke caused by the bursting of shrapnel, floated like flies in a sunbeam, making even deeper the surrounding blackness, which was punctuated here and there by flashes from the muzzles of cannon.

The roar of the siege and field guns dominated the rattling of the rifle volleys, and the screeching of shells as they hurled through the air.

Second Fort Captured.

As at Kartaltepe earlier in the day, the fire from the Papaztepe fort began gradually to slacken. There also the Bulgarian siege guns had caused enormous ravages. Abruptly the searchlights were extinguished at about 11 o'clock at night, and the Bulgarian infantry began to storm the fort at the point of the bayonet. Shortly before midnight they had become masters of the position, and the Turks were in flight. They left their dead and dying by hundreds on the field.

The fort on Papaztepe is one of the most important features of the defenses of Adrianople. It commands not only the city itself, but all the other works.

Throughout the operations Bulgarian aeroplanes flew back and forth over the Turkish fort, bringing the most valuable information to the Bulgarian Generals in command.

Some interesting sidelights on the war are telegraphed by another correspondent of the Matin, who had opportunities of talking with some of the Turkish prisoners in the hands of the Bulgarians. Many of them had come from Asia and had never before heard of Bulgaria. When the cause of the war was explained to them, one of them said:

"We know nothing of that. At Brusa, where we were recruited, we were told that, according to the law of the Prophet, we must go to fight the infidels and that the hour to exterminate them had arrived. We were also told that Allah had promised us victory, and the Turkish Governors declared we should divide among us the immense riches of the enemies of Allah. We have, therefore, been deceived."

The situation at Constantinople is described by the correspondent of the Matin there. He says the British cruiser Weymouth is in direct wireless communication with the station at Poldhu, and receives daily the latest political, financial, and sporting news. The crews of the foreign warships are now allowed ashore and stroll along the streets without exciting much attention from the natives.

The presence of the forign warships provokes various amusing comments from the Turks. Two inhabitants of Constantinople were overheard in a peculiar dialogue. "What," said one of them, pointing to the Bosphorus, "are all these foreign warships?" "Those," replied the other without a smile, "are the ships we have taken from the Greeks."

WARSHIPS TALK WITH CAPITALS

French Admiral Uses Relay Vessel to Reach Paris by Wireless.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The Matin correspondent in Constantinople sends the interesting information that Admiral D'Artige du Fournet had difficulty in getting into touch with the Eiffel tower by means of his wireless installation and had to make use of the cruiser Jules Ferry as a relaying station.

The British cruiser Weymouth, on the other hand, is daily in direct communication with the Poldhu station, England.

The electric disturbance, caused by the various warships endeavoring to communicate with their respective Governments at the same time, was so great that an arrangement had to be drawn up, whereby the ship of each nation had a specific hour of the day allotted in which to carry on its wireless telegraphing.

TOULON, Nov. 11.—The French armored cruiser Montcalm, now on its way to the Far East, has been intercepted by wireless and ordered to proceed at once to Constantinople.

GERMANS SAY THEY DOMINATE EUROPE

Believe Their Army Will Preserve Peace, However Near a Great Conflict May Seem.

A DEFIANCE FROM BULGARIA

Official Paper Says an Outlet for Servia on the Adriatic Is a Sine Qua Non of a Solution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—The German Army is convinced that Europe's realization of the "terrible power" of the Kaiser's military organization is a factor which, when all is said and done, will preserve peace. I am able to quote a staff officer of distinction, who spoke with a frankness which leaves no doubt that his sentiments are those inspiring the German military leaders. He said:

"Germany is ready if necessary to put 5,000,000 trained men of the first physical quality into the field. Europe knows that, and because Europe knows it there will be no war. There will be much talk of war over this Albanian business, and peace may seem to hang by the slenderest thread, but before any power or combination of powers elects to go to war they will have one last contemplative look at the German Army, and there will be peace.

"The German Army's position in Europe is like that of a great Dane surrounded by a pack of lesser dogs, which bark, snap, and nag, until the great Dane at last rouses himself to action."

No less striking was the officer's explanation of the reason why Austria will not declare war except on the very last emergency:

"The Austrian people know that in any war which may take place now Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the heir to the Throne, would reap the glory and be acclaimed a hero. That would be a deep affront to the pride of the old Emperor. The Austrians want to risk nothing of that sort. Their reverence for their octogenarian sovereign will keep them from war until it is actually forced upon them."

Another opinion expressed by this officer was that the Russian Army was in such a hopeless state of disorganization and incompleteness that the Bulgarian Army of 250,000 men would be able to beat it.

The Lokal Anzeiger to-night, in a leading article, which emanates unmistakably from official army quarters, points out that at an hour like the present, when the Germans are called upon to defend their prestige, it ill becomes them to identify themselves with the view of the "French and English press" that the Turkish defeats are German military defeats.

"If anybody is minded," the article concludes, "personally to convince himself that our gallant grenadiers and riflemen are still of the same fibre as those of Vionville and St. Privat and that our cannon and howitzers are peers of the much praised Schneiders and Creusots, let him do it. We are keeping our powder dry."

OUTLOOK LESS OMINOUS.

London Sees Signs of a Break in the War Clouds.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—While serious, the Austro-Servian crisis is not acute as viewed in the latest developments of the European situation.

A Vienna dispatch to The Times says that the chances of a pacific settlement is believed to be improved notwithstanding the arrival of Servian forces in the immediate neighborhood of the Adriatic Coast.

From Berlin it is announced that the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria will keep an engagement to shoot with Emperor William on Nov. 22 and 23 at Springe, near Hanover. This announcement is obviously intended to have a political color of rather a soothing effect. A similar meeting took place two years ago.

The special mission sent by the Bulgarian Government to Vienna is also regarded as a hopeful sign, being admittedly a mission of mediation undertaken at the instance of King Ferdinand and deriving additional importance from Dr. Daneff's interviews en route with Belgrade statesmen.

Paris also reports that the diplomatic situation is developing on lines which were sketched as desirable in Premier Asquith's speech.

The features of the morning's news are the bellicose utterances of the Russian press and the threats against Servia in the Austrian press.

SOFIA, Nov. 11.—The official Mir says: "An insistence on the part of Austria-Hungary tending to prevent a just and natural solution of the Balkan question, of which an outlet for Servia on the Adriatic is a sine qua non, may sow the seeds of a future war, which it will be no longer possible to localize."

USKUB, Nov. 11.—The vanguard of the Servian Army has reached the coast of the Adriatic Sea.

It met no armed resistance during its march through Albania, but its progress was slow on account of the deep snow.

BELGRADE, Nov. 11.—The Austro-Hungarian Minister here, Baron von Ugron von Abranfalva, upon his return to-day from Budapest, had a long conference with Premier Pasitch, who later in the day summoned a meeting of the Cabinet.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—Symptoms that important decisions in connection with the Balkan situation are under consideration in Austria are seen in the fact of the frequent audiences between Count von Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, and Emperor Francis Joseph, who has also several times conferred with the War Minister and the Chief of the General Staff of the army.

To these significant occurences are added the arrival at Budapest of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the heir to the Throne, and his forthcoming visit to the German Emperor, as well as yesterday's conferences between Dr. Daneff, the President of the Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, and Count von Berchtold, and, subsequently, with the German Ambassador at Vienna.

Dr. Daneff, who before leaving Bulgaria was received by King Ferdinand, and while passing through Servia had audiences with King Peter and Premier Pasitch, is believed to be the bearer of proposals connected with the difficulty in regard to Servia's desire for an Adriatic port. He is also supposed to be empowered to make a special agreement with Austria-Hungary concerning Bulgarian interests and Roumanian claims.

A local newspaper, the Sonn und Montags Zeitung, sums up the position of the Austro-Hungarian Empire in the Balkan question in the following four points:

First—Assured and unrestricted facilities for access to the Eastern markets and free commercial transit to Salonika.

Second—The integrity of Albania.

Third—The protection of Austria-Hungary's political interests by the creation of local relations with Servia and the exclusion of political antagonism.

Fourth—Compensation for Roumania.

BUDAPEST, Nov. 11.—The Pester Lloyd says that at the interview between Dr. Daneff, President of the Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, and Count von Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, all the important questions at issue were discussed.

The mission of Dr. Daneff, says the paper, shows that the Bulgarian Ministers are sincerely desirous of settling matters with regard to the interests of Austria-Hungary. It adds:

"Immediately after the cessation of hostilities a redistribution of the conquered territory will have to take place. Therefore what each belligerent now holds is a matter of no importance."

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—The revelation of the danger to European peace lying in the antagonistic interests of Austria and Servia appears to have quickened the sense of the powers, and probably of the Balkan States also, to the imperative need of working in amicable co-operation to obtain a settlement of the Balkan problems acceptable to all the parties concerned.

Another factor making for the speedy cessation of the war is the approach of severe Winter conditions, which would give to a campaign an exceedingly arduous character.

There is still talk in Vienna of sending an ultimatum to Servia, and there are other warlike reports, but it is believed that Germany is exercising an ameliorating influence in the direction of persuading both Austria and Servia to consent to a postponement of the settlement until the whole matter can be dealt with by a European conference.

Meanwhile, diplomacy is active in all the European capitals. Dr. S. Daneff, Speaker of the Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, and one of the most influential politicians in Bulgaria, after audiences with his sovereign, King Ferdinand, with King Peter of Servia, and with the Servian Premier, is now in Budapest, where the aged Austrian Emperor, Francis Joseph, his Foreign Minister, his Minister of War, and his Chief of Staff are gathered. It is believed that Dr. Daneff is the bearer of important proposals in regard to Servia's claims, and that these definite suggestions, for which Austria has been waiting, are now under consideration.

It is understood that after his important mission at Budapest is concluded, Dr. Daneff will go to the other European Courts to explain the views of the allies.

The Servian Premier, M. Pasitch, after an important Cabinet meeting, left Belgrade last night for Uskub, to consult with King Peter on the situation.

The existing jealousies are so intense that it will take a lot of pressure to induce either Austria or Servia to recede from its demands. Austria, in fact, takes so seriously the advance of a Servian force toward the port of Durazzo that she has dispatched a steamer there to take off Austrian residents when the Servian troops arrive.

Servia's friend, Russia, also is preparing for eventualities. Besides keeping her time-expired men in the army, she is mobilizing her forces. At Sevastopol transports have been prepared to convey Russian troops across the Black Sea, and her arsenals and commissariat departments are working night and day.

Russia has no intention of being caught napping, as she was at the time when Austria annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina, when she was compelled by German menaces to accede to the annexation, to which she was opposed.

The report of the mobilization of the Austro-Hungarian forces is denied at Budapest. Roumania, however, is taking certain military measures with a view to being prepared for eventualities. The War Minister has issued an order to all the army corps to the effect that half the contingent which was to be dismissed on Nov. 14 is to be retained with the colors until further orders.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—"For the whole of Europe to be plunged into war simply over the question whether Servia shall have a port on the Adriatic Sea is an eventuality too monstrous to be entertained." This quotation from one of the leading newspapers here fairly sums up Europe's attitude toward the Balkan danger.

All the diplomatic pressure possible will be exerted at Vienna, Belgrade, and St. Petersburg to induce the adoption of conciliatory policies at what is regarded as this critical moment for European peace.

The reports that Russia has extended the time of service of her soldiers and is not granting any requests for leave made by her army officers in the district of Warsaw, together with the fact that Austria-Hungary is strengthening the garrisons of Bosnia and Herzegovina, are regarded as disturbing factors.

The suggestion by the British Premier, Mr. Asquith, that all specific questions, such as the distribution of ports on the Adriatic, should be postponed finds great favor in France, which thinks that if such subsidiary problems can be relegated to the future the danger of a European conflict will have passed.

Advices reaching here from Belgrade confirm the report that the exposition of the Austro-Hungarian point of view to Premier Pashitch of Servia by the Austrian Minister contained nothing in the character of an ultimatum.

Public opinion in Budapest is greatly alarmed over the belief prevailing there that the military conference held to-day under the Presidency of Emperor Francis Joseph will decide to mobilize two Austrian army corps in Bosnia, according to a dispatch to the Temps.

Sends a Message to Princess Sophie, His Sister, About Salonika

ATHENS, Nov. 11.—The German Emperor has sent a letter to his sister, Princess Sophie, wife of Crown Prince Constantine, conveying his congratulations on the capture of Salonika.

The Princess, accompanied by Premier Venizelos, and the foreign Military Attachés, whom the Crown Prince invited to join the army of occupation, left for Salonika to-day.

The Crown Prince has requested the detachments which landed from the foreign warships at Salonika to re-embark, as the Greek troops will now maintain order.

A Greek destroyer has brought to Piraeus the German steamer Tenedos, which is suspected of having Turkish soldiers hidden aboard.

No word comes from the army operating against Monastir, but Arta reports that the Greeks have occupied the fortress of Pentepigedia and surrounding positions. The Turks have retired to the hills, but are keeping up a desultory fire.

WILL PROTECT AMERICANS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The European powers most intimately concerned in the Balkan situation have undertaken to extend protection to Americans in Turkey.

The American Embassies in Europe were intrusted, when informing the various nations of the decision of the United States to send the cruisers Tennessee and Montana to the coast of Asiatic Turkey, to inquire whether provision had been made or was contemplated in the interest of American citizens in Turkey. Replies indicate that instructions issued by Great Britain and Russia anticipated the desires of the American Government.

Formamint makes mouth and throat hygiene easy—it kills the Germs that cause throat infections.

Enrico Caruso, The world's greatest tenor, writes: "I have found Formamint Tablets very pleasant to the taste and beneficial to the throat."

Leo Slezak, The world-famous tenor, writes: "I find Formamint Tablets simply superb, and I recommend them to my friends."

Mme. Adelina Patti, The Queen of Song, writes: "I have taken Formamint Tablets for some time past and have much pleasure in saying that I find them very beneficial for the throat."

From The Lancet. "The sole object of a medicinal lozenge is to keep part of the mouth or throat one desires to treat bathed for a time in a drug dissolved in the saliva. I know of only one medicated lozenge—FORMAMINT—which meets this requirement."

YOU owe it to yourself—to the community—to public health—to keep your mouth and throat hygienically clean.

Most infectious diseases are due to germs taken into the mouth and throat—and if the germs are not killed—danger of mouth and throat infection is not confined to you alone but may be transmitted easily to those about you.

Wulfing's Formamint
THE GERM-KILLING THROAT TABLET

makes mouth and throat hygiene easy. It replaces gargles and mouth washes, which are ineffective and inconvenient. With none of their disadvantages, Formamint succeeds where they fail—reaching the deepest cavities of the throat, where the germs lie hidden—destroying them and paving the way for quick recovery.

Formamint is a pleasant-tasting tablet which, when sucked in the mouth like candy, releases its powerful, yet harmless germicide—mixing with the saliva—freely bathing the membranes—being carried into the recesses of the throat where gargles or mouth washes cannot reach.

Besides, its convenient form enables you to use it any time, anywhere.

Formamint does not leave the mouth and throat dry and parched—it increases the flow of saliva fully fifty per cent, insuring an abundant supply so essential where the membranes are inflamed and infected.

If you have a throat infection—or think you may be getting one—you should use Formamint.

The Man in the Tower Finds the Tower of Babel

When a number of smart men in this city do the same thing, or order the same thing—that thing becomes smart.

It is the province of the Man in the Tower to observe what that thing is and report it for your benefit.

Weber and Heilbroner's suits and overcoats are made on this basis—built to these specifications.

Observing other ready-to-wear clothes is of no benefit in this work.

The Tower of Babel, with all the tailors working at cross purposes, could not pour out more polyglot differences.

* * *

Originally a haberdashery house, we learned the vast importance of the New York man's own ideas of styles.

We have not relinquished our position in that field—this is still the largest retail haberdashery business on the continent, for good and sufficient reasons.

Nor have we disregarded the lesson.

This house does not originate—does not attempt to create, or even lead the clothing styles of New York.

It merely walks hand-in-hand with them—keeping step with the exclusive tailors—applying the same methods to the same materials, as nearly as it may be done.

We believe this constitutes a genuine difference from any other ready-to-wear clothes.

ASQUITH DEFEATED BY A 'SNAP' VOTE

A Financial Provision of the Home Rule Bill Amended by a Majority of 22.

GOVERNMENT NOT TO QUIT

But the Adverse Motion Will Delay the Passage of the Bill—Unionists Jubilant.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—The Asquith Government will not resign as a consequence of a defeat it met in the Commons yesterday, when, by a majority of 22, the House voted for an amendment to the Home Rule bill proposed by a Unionist member, Sir F. Banbury, and opposed by Herbert Samuel, Postmaster General.

The House was fairly full. 434 members being present. Sir Frederick Banbury, who usually speaks at great length, introduced a motion, proposing to limit the imperial grant to Ireland to two and one-half millions sterling in any one year, speaking with unaccustomed brevity, and Mr. Samuel rose to reply. A Liberal member, recognizing the likelihood of a snap division, left the House to warn the whips, who replied that they were certain that the Government had a majority in the precincts of the House. This, it appeared, was correct; but the Opposition had what the Liberals described as "a force in ambush" in St. Stephen's Club, just across the way from the Parliament House, with which it is connected by an underground passage. In the club were fifty Unionist members whom the Liberal whips had not taken into their calculations. The club is connected by telephone with the office of the Tory whips, and at a given signal, when the division was called, the St. Stephen's Club reserves rushed through the subterranean passage and got into the House within the six minutes allowed under the rules of procedure for divisions.

When the vote was announced a dramatic scene ensued. Ministers sat flushed and uneasy. The Opposition gave a shout such as is seldom heard in Parliament. Papers were thrown in the air. The Speaker stood impassive with folded arms.

Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Asquith both entered the House immediately after the division. The Premier looked calm and cheerful, as in a single sentence he moved that the House adjourn. The Speaker left the chair, but the scene of excitement continued.

"Resign!" cried a few Tories. "No Home Rule," was a remark made to Mr. Redmond. "Bang goes £400 a year!" shouted a Unionist who had protested against the payment of salaries to members.

Later in the day the Government issued a statement which intimated that it had no intention of resigning because of a snap division. Not even the most sanguine of Tory politicians cherished any real expectation that it would. Nevertheless, the defeat is by no means unimportant, and will delay the passage of the bill. The Liberal papers admit it to be a "mishap." Apart from any other reason, it is urged that the Asquith Government cannot at present advise dissolution, owing to the European crisis.

The Unionist organs are naturally making the most of their victory. The Daily Mail says: "It destroys the Government's moral authority, is fatal to the prestige of their whole plan of campaign, and has deranged the third Home Rule bill, which, like its two predecessors, is designed to destroy its authors."

International Association Will Hold Its First London Meeting To-day.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Duchess of Marlborough will preside to-morrow at a meeting of the International Association for Housing Students and Teachers, which was founded in London last Summer by Heloise Durant Rose of New York. This will be the first meeting of the association since its inception.

The Duchess is one of the Vice Presidents of the society, the officers of which include Sir Henry Lunn, Dr. Arnold of the East Indian Association, and Lady Bunting.

It is understood here that a meeting of the American branch will soon be held in New York to perfect the organization of the association in America.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Two reports of the Royal Commission on Divorce were issued this evening. The majority, including Lord Gorell, formerly President of the Divorce Court, propose in addition to the present grounds for a dissolution of marriage, that divorces be granted on account of desertion for three years, cruelty alone, incurable insanity, habitual drunkenness persisting throughout three years, or for life imprisonment inflicted for murder in place of a death sentence. This was the most important matter the commission had to consider.

The minority report, signed by the Archbishop of York, Sir William Anson, and Sir Lewis Dibdin, notable as an ecclesiastical lawyer, denies that there is any real demand for easier divorce. They call attention to the "lamentable fact that in classes which mainly use the Divorce Court, the restraint and obligations of family life have been weakened.

"There is at work in all classes," they fear, "a strong tendency against the continuous union of man and wife. If anything is done, therefore, the State should strengthen rather than relax the strictness of its marriage laws." They do not, however, recommend anything of this kind.

Upon certain points all the Commissioners agree. Chief among these is sex equality, and that a divorce should be granted to a woman for the same reason as to a man. They also took the common ground that the granting of divorces should no longer be confined to the courts in London, though the majority and minority differ as to the number of local courts required.

The Commissioners are unanimous upon another point, that of exercising control over the publication of reports of divorce proceedings.

SELL JOHN ORTH'S TREASURES

Berlin Firm Disposing of Property of Long Missing Austrian Archduke.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—The extensive collection of art treasures belonging to John Orth, who was Archduke Johann Salvator of Austria until he renounced his imperial rights, was put up at auction here by Helleron Brothers to-day. The sale, which attracted buyers from all parts of Europe, comprises practically the entire contents of the five castles of the Archduke, who was strangely missing so long that the Austrian Court consented to allow him to be declared "dead."

The former Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, sister of the Archduke, and the Austrian Government were officially represented at the auction, which will last throughout the week.

The prices thus far paid are not high in themselves, but in almost every case are above the actual value. Several pieces of antique furniture went to-day for $250 to $700 each.

M. P. MAY BE OUSTED.

Sir Stuart Samuel May Lose Seat Owing to Indian Banking Contract.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The question whether Sir Stuart Montagu Samuel, Radical member for one of the East End divisions of London, shall continue to hold his seat in Parliament is to come before a select committee of the House of Commons.

Sir Stuart is believed by the members of the Opposition to have forfeited his right to sit as a member of Parliament, owing to the fact that his firm of bankers became purchasers of silver for the Indian Government. Under an old act of Parliament, a member may not be even indirectly interested in such a transaction, or in any Government contract.

Only recently Sir Stuart Samuel's brother, Herbert Samuel, the Postmaster General, was attacked in connection with the Government's wireless contract with the Marconi Company.

HARVARD TO GET $500,000.

Dr. Cabot's Will Gives It $150,000 Outright, Rest at Wife's Death.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—The bulk of the property of the late Dr. Arthur T. Cabot of Brookline, estimated at $500,000, is to go to Harvard University at the death of Mrs. Cabot, according to the provisions of the will filed at Dedham to-day.

Dr. Cabot was one of the fellows of Harvard College and deeply interested in the medical school, which received $100,000 outright. An additional sum of $50,000 and numerous paintings are given to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

$34,000,000 for Russian Navy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.—The naval estimates for 1913 include $34,000,000 for shipbuilding.

URGES QUICK ACTION TO SAVE FIFTH AVE.

High Buildings Threaten to Transform It Into a Canyon of Skyscrapers, Brunner Says.

WANTS A LIMIT OF 150 FEET

Fifth Avenue Association Approves Report of Commission Now in the Hands of Board of Estimate.

Arnold W. Brunner, an architect, and Chairman of the Fifth Avenue Commission, which a short time ago advocated a height limit for buildings in Fifth Avenue, declared yesterday that only prompt action on the part of the city would prevent what is now one of the finest retail shopping streets in the country from degenerating into a cañon of skyscrapers.

"Much has been said from time to time," said Mr. Brunner, "about the necessity of laying out one or more broad, artistic thoroughfares through the busy part of the city north of Thirty-fourth Street. While one or more such avenues would undoubtedly improve the architectural beauty of New York, they could only be created at tremendous expense. Most of Fifth Avenue, on the other hand, lends itself to this architectural development without entailing any cost upon the city. It has already become the finest retail shopping thoroughfare in the country, and if it is not to degenerate into a mere cañon of skyscrapers, prompt action by the city authorities is necessary."

The Fifth Avenue Commission was appointed last Spring by Borough President McAneny to suggest improvements to the thoroughfare. Among other things the commission advocated a height limit of 125 feet to the cornice of all buildings, with the privilege of two additional stories in a mansard roof, which would give a total height of some 150 feet, or the equivalent of the ordinary twelve-story building. The report is now in the hands of the Board of Estimate. If this board approves the recommendations, the Aldermen will be asked to pass an ordinance embracing the height limit provisions.

"The beauty and attractiveness of Fifth Avenue for business north of Twenty-third Street should be preserved," Mr. Brunner declared. "We realize that it is useless to change conditions for the present between Fourteenth and Twenty-third Streets, where the tall buildings contain so many garment workers that the sidewalks of the avenue there are almost impassable in the noon hour and late in the afternoon. But this evil can be prevented north of Twenty-third Street. Many of the merchants are already following out the plan proposed.

"New York is lamentably behind many other cities in laws to preserve the character of its streets. Boston has three different height limits for three parts of the city, and the courts recently upheld the city officials in limiting the height of buildings around Copley Square. We have a law limiting the height of apartment houses to one and one-half times the width of the street, but business buildings are not governed by any such statute. In Chicago a limit has been put on the height of skyscrapers.

"Personally I am not opposed to the skyscraper, but the height of these buildings should depend upon the conditions of the neighborhood and the character of the street.

"I think the limitation in height of buildings should be followed by a law requiring uniformity in the skyline, and perhaps in façades, but if a height restriction can be obtained, these features may be left to individual taste and judgment."

SIR S. K. McDONNELL LOSES.

Husband Wins Divorce Suit That Ended Official's Career.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The divorce case which has put an end to Sir Schomberg Kerr McDonnell's public career came up in court to-day, and a decree nisi was granted to the petitioner, a retired army officer, named Harrison.

Sir Schomberg McDonnell was Secretary and Permanent Chief of the Government Department of Works, succeeding Lord Esher in 1902. He recently resigned his post because of the divorce scandal.

The fifth son of the tenth Earl of Antrim, he was born in 1861, and was educated at Eton and Oxford. For many years he was the private secretary of the late Lord Salisbury when the latter was Prime Minister. He visited Washington during this period, and in diplomatic circles it was understood that it was on his advice that Lord Salisbury kept Lord Pauncefote as Ambassador at Washington long after the age limit for retirement.

A Remarkable Big New Novel
By THEODORE DREISER

THE FINANCIER

AUTHOR OF
"Jennie Gerhardt" and "Sister Carrie"

ONCE in every four years a big book, an unusual book, comes to the surface. We believe Mr. Dreiser's story of "The Financier" is such a book.

Broad in its scope, sweeping in its power, it is only fair to add that it is almost brutal in its naked picturing of the lust for wealth and the hunger for love.

It is not for those who fear the fighting force of a strong man, nor is it the unfolding of a lovely life.

It is first of all a great, absorbing haunting story, then it is perhaps a lesson—but, taken all in all—its bigness, its insight into larger phases of our life—it seems destined to rank as one of the great examples of modern fiction.

RIGHT TO HOLD MENA.

Zone Judge Says the Law Allows Us to Detain Him Without a Charge.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 11.—The Zone Supreme Court denied this afternoon the application of Gen. Mena, the Nicaraguan rebel leader, and his son, Daniel, for a writ of habeas corpus requiring their release from American custody.

Judge Brown, in his decision, held that the President of the United States, under the law, had the right, in the administration of the affairs of the Zone, to detain both as political prisoners without any other charge or warrant.

Friends of Gen. Mena contend that his detention and the armed interference in Nicaragua of the United States was due to the positive fact that he had sold a concession, as President of Nicaragua, to a German syndicate to build a canal through that country. Gen. Mena refuses to discuss the matter.

SUPERVISION

Very often the difference between good work and poor work is determined by the quality of the supervision.

We had this in mind long ago when we created a corps of supervisors, trained to study the various processes of manufacturing building materials, and competent to pass upon the quality of the finished product.

No materials of any kind are accepted by us on a building site unless their quality comes up to the required standard.

HOLD GEM BROKER FOR DIAMOND THEFT

Dealers Allege Buchner Pawned Stones Worth $45,000 Obtained on Memorandum.

INTRODUCED A CUSTOMER

Told Dealers Friend Was Going to Open a Store and That He Could Sell Him Gems.

Isidor Buchner, who had been a diamond dealer in Maiden Lane, was held in $15,000 bail by Judge Swann in General Sessions yesterday on the charge of grand larceny. Buchner, according to the complaints against him, had obtained diamonds worth $45,000 on "memorandum" from dealers in Maiden Lane, which, it was charged, he pawned.

Buchner was arrested by Detective Summers as he was entering 81 Maiden Lane yesterday. He was first taken to Police Headquarters and later before Judge Swann. The complaint against him in one case alleged that he had obtained $27,000 worth of diamonds from Herman Levy of 16 Maiden Lane. It was also charged that he obtained $3,000 worth of diamonds from Frank & Sass of 45 John Street.

Wholesale jewelers have a system which they call "lending goods on memorandum," under which agents are allowed to take goods from their offices to show to customers. The agents return the articles not sold with the money for the gems they have disposed of. Buchner, it was alleged, obtained the diamonds which he pawned in this way. It was said yesterday that he came to this country from Antwerp two years ago, and entered the jewelry business. His business did not pay, and according to the complaints against him he went to see Mr. Levy last June. He told Mr. Levy, it was alleged, that he wanted to obtain some diamonds on memorandum, as he had a friend who intended to open a jewelry store in Brooklyn, and he thought he could make a sale. Mr. Levy asked the name of this man and Buchner gave it to him, and told him to call up a number in John Street on the telephone, where he could talk to the alleged customer. Mr. Levy did talk on the telephone with a man who answered to the name given by Buchner. A few days later Buchner brought a man whom he alleged was his customer to Mr. Levy's office, the complaint sets forth, and Mr. Levy accompanied them to Brooklyn, where Buchner, it was alleged, showed him a store which the defendant said his friend was going to open. Mr. Levy thereupon gave Buchner the diamonds. He repeatedly called on the telephone the man for whom Buchner obtained the diamonds, Levy asserted, and asked to be paid something on account, but was put off on each occasion.

Last week Mr. Levy visited the District Attorney's office and Assistant District Attorney Conlon took up the case. The name of the man with whom Mr. Levy talked over the telephone, and who accompanied him to Brooklyn, is withheld as his arrest is expected soon.

Buchner, it was charged, adopted the same methods with Frank & Sass, but in this case, it was asserted, the man to whom Buchner said he wanted to sell the diamonds was going to open a store in Newark, N. J. Other persons and firms who alleged they were swindled by Buchner were Louis Bergman of 17 Maiden Lane and Clipper Brothers of 50 Maiden Lane.

All the diamonds obtained by Buchner, it was alleged, were pawned by him at one-quarter the amount they were worth. Some $12,700 worth were recovered from a pawnshop in Eldridge Street. Buchner after his arrest said, according to the police:

"It was just a business transaction and my arrest was due to spite. I have a big diamond deal on, and needed the money to put it through. I pawned the diamonds I had on memorandum to buy others for cash. I intended, as soon as I got the money from my customer, to take the diamonds out of pawn and either sell them as I had arranged or return them to the owner."

GAYNOR ON GRASSHOPPERS.

Writes an Oklahoma Man About Newspapers, Taking Them as Text.

Mayor Gaynor, in a letter to H. H. Henderson of Yelton, Okla., discussed yesterday the proposition as to whether the grasshoppers ate up the broom corn of that State. The Mayor, at the same time, did not neglect to express his opinions concerning certain newspapers. This is his letter:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor.

Dear Sir: Your letter of Nov. 4, asking me to assure the broom manufacturers that the grasshoppers did not eat up the broom corn of Oklahoma, as is reported in the newspapers, is at hand. I do not know why the grasshoppers should eat up the broom corn crop when there are so many other things much more juicy and satisfactory to their palates. I am therefore quite willing to believe you, and I shall pass the word around among the broom manufacturers, if I can. Perhaps the newspapers will do it, although it is very hard to get some of them to contradict their own stories. It detracts from the notion of their infallibility. However, we have some newspapers here that are just as ready to contradict themselves as to contradict anybody else. They daily contradict in the morning what they say in the evening, and in the evening what they say in the morning. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

Mr. Henderson's letter was not made public by the Mayor.

OPERATE ON CARROLL'S BRAIN

Member of the Firm of Fiss, Doerr & Carroll Dangerously Ill.

Joseph D. Carroll, treasurer and Director of the Fiss, Doerr & Carrol Company, dealers in horses, was taken from his apartments in the Vanderbilt Hotel yesterday to the New York Hospital, where he underwent an operation for the removal of a growth upon the brain. Mr. Carroll returned ten days ago from Europe after an extensive stay abroad in search of health. On the voyage to this country he was confined to his stateroom under the care of a physician. Since his return he has been attended by Dr. Francis Aiken of 34 East Thirty-second Street.

FOUND NO DIAMONDS IN BRAZIL EL DORADO

McCabe, both. Why, he's full of diamonds. He'll give you a diamond ring,' he added, to my wife.

"When she heard the word 'diamonds' she became unanimous for going, and the motion was declared carried. In one of the biggest suites of the hotel we were introduced to a man whose name was given as Dr. W. G. Meyer. He appeared to be about 58, was heavy set, heavily whiskered, and talked with a German accent.

"After some general conversation, he handed to my wife a gem he called a periodot. Then, quite as carelessly, he referred to Cecil Rhodes, and to John Hays Hammond, and to Wernher and Beit of South African fame. Soon he was launched upon his story. It was a narrative that had Monte Cristo beaten three ways.

"He said he had been associated with Cecil Rhodes in many of the latter's big projects in South Africa. He was born, he told us, in Schleswig-Holstein, ran away to California when 14, made there several small fortunes, and gambled them away. Then he headed for South Africa, and in a few years had cleaned up $4,000,000.

"During the reform movement in the South African Republic he was arrested as one of the plotters in the Jameson raid. He related how he had been summoned before Paul Kruger, with convincing details as to what took place at the interview, and how he had finally made his escape to Cape Town, and thence on an English steamer to London.

"Coming up on the boat he had learned from a fellow-passenger of John Mawr's 'Travels of Brazil to the Gold and Diamond Fields,' published in 1806, and he had purchased a copy as soon as he reached London, and was tremendously impressed by it.

"His wife joining him soon afterward, he learned that his magnificent estate had been confiscated, and all his wife had been able to save was a little bag of diamonds. These he sold, gave half the proceeds to her, and with the remainder started for Brazil.

"In Rio he fell in with two Germans, who, upon hearing that he was bound for the diamond fields, joined him. Both turned back on the way. He kept going for about six weeks, and finally caught sight of a mountain shaped like a man's nose. He knew he had reached his destination.

"One of his mules became mired in the sand. In digging it out a lot of gravel was removed. This looked to him like diamond-bearing cascalha. He panned some of it, and found it contained numerous diamonds. With the priest of the nearest village he arranged for an option on the property, went to England, formed a company with a capital of £150,000, of which $150,000 was paid to him immediately and a similar sum set aside for working capital in Brazil. Returning with the Superintendent of the company, he paid the priest $33,000, and soon afterward left the company and started out for himself.

"He told how he had formed various successful companies since then, and now had come to the United States with positively the most alluring proposition he had had yet.

Investigation Deemed Worth While.

"He met some other Columbus men, who thought so well of his proposition that they had Noble come from Denver to look into it and give an opinion. After going over blueprints, photographs, and maps for ten days, and listening to Dr. Meyer's explanations, Noble said the prospect was at least worth investigation.

"Meyer said he owned a tract of land from half a mile to a mile wide, extending along both banks of the Jequitinhonha River a distance of 700 miles. But a much richer tract, he told us, was the Dona Maria property, adjoining his property at one end, and upon which he had an option.

"The men he had in tow decided to take up the proposition, and were to have sailed for Rio last February. Then the revolutionists in Mexico got troublesome, and many of them having money tied up in ventures there, they had to abandon the idea. The idea was put up to me to go myself, but I did not decide to go until Aug. 15. I had a great admiration for Gen. Grant, and his son's opinion, together with the reports of Consul General Anderson, influenced me not a little. All we paid Meyer was money for his passage down and $550 for an outfit.

"Meyer took a dislike to Richards and Gilchrist. They asked many questions. He wanted me to leave them behind, first here and then at Rio.

"We reached the Brazilian capital Sept. 7, and Meyer immediately demanded $1,000. He said he was the only one who knew the language and the customs of the country, and said he wanted the money for general purposes. In this he was supported by an Englishman in his employ, Ernest Swain. For four days they held us up in Rio, Meyer declaring he wouldn't take us on unless I left Richards and Gilchrist behind.

"However, we started finally, and got as far as a place called Rodiador, something over 500 miles out by train. When we left that place Meyer put me on the worst mule of the bunch we had, after having promised me a fine riding horse. When, after a forty-six-mile ride, we reached Diamantina, I was worn out and refused to go further. So I remained at Meyer's house in Diamantina with the Englishman, Swain. Meyer had said the Dona Maria property was only twelve miles further. When I found it was thirty-five I balked at the idea of any more mule riding."

R. W. Richards took up the narrative at this point.

"We left Diamantina early in the morning of Sept. 18," he said. "Meyer took along a man named Rudolph Silva. We reached Mandanha in the afternoon. Meyer had given out, and we had to remain there until the next morning. In Mandanha I met C. M. Spangler, originally a California miner. Meyer told us to keep away from him, as he was his enemy. From Spangler we learned the details of a great many deals Meyer had been in down there. Spangler had been left there by a former company, and had not been able to collect enough money to come back home.

"We arrived at the Dona Maria property the next day at noon. That afternoon Noble and I walked over the property and located the sites for our testing pits, which were begun the next day. When Test Pit No. 1 was partly dug Meyer announced he would take charge of the digging. When the diggers were three feet from the cascalha which was supposed to carry the diamonds, we took charge, and notified Meyer, who had arranged a seat for himself on a little eminence above the pit, that he would not be required to be present any longer. This threw him into a violent rage, but at the end he returned to Diamantina.

"We dug seven test pits, but none yielded a diamond. In some there were small quantities of gold, the most valuable showing 12½ cents to the cubic yard. Test Pit No. 5, dug just four feet from a pit tested by Meyer and his associates for Smith & White of Milwaukee, for F. O. Case, Secretary of the Brazilian Dredging Company of New York, and for Wilthcng, Wilson & Tweedie of Toronto, yielded gold only at the rate of 4 cents a busic yard.

"We remained on the property until Sept. 30. Meyer did not come back, being represented by Silva. However, we secured Spangler's services, and employed a new crew. I carried my revolver in my belt, together with thirty-five cartridges. I used to pot a chicken in the eye or knock a chip out of the river for moral effect. When we had made up our minds with regard to Silva, I called him over.

Tried to Buy Gold and Diamonds.

"'Silva,' I said, raising my revolver and taking aim at the eye of a young alligator and hitting it, 'we want you to stay in the camp. We are on to your salting game.'

"He took the hint, and stayed. We found out later that on our way up Meyer had sent him to the shop of a man named Gomez, in Mandanha, to purchase some diamonds on a credit basis. Gomez refused to sell. We learned from the two Taylor brothers of Wellsville, N. Y., to whom Meyer sold the Diamond King property, that Meyer had sent over to them to purchase gold at double the market price, but they, having heard of our being in the country, had refused to sell.

"Those two fellows are in bad shape. They paid a big price for their property, and in two years, working a dredge, they have been able to get $1,920 in gold, and no diamonds at all. They can't get together enough money to leave.

"In Mandanha we looked at some diamonds shown by Juca Carlos, which had been picked up by 'fescadores,' or stray diamond hunters, within a radius of sixty miles. Carlos told us the most that had been taken out of the Dona Maria property in slavery times was 1,140 carats. He showed us a lot of 240 carats which he said he had been a whole year getting together."

"I hadn't been having a jolly time in Diamantina with Swain and the doctor together," said Mr. McCabe, "but I played one against the other, and from Swain managed to get a lot of information. When the boys came back, I met them at the gate, and told them not to alight. We went to the hotel immediately, and then our troubles began.

"Bills of every sort began to pour in. A lawyer would accompany each bill with threats. The most brazen attempt to collect money was when a lawyer who was the son-in-law of a State official dropped in, asserted we had wired for him, that he had left a lot of clients at Bell Horizonte, the capital, and demanded $1,000 for the loss of time and trade.

"It is a wonder we ever got out alive. As it was, when we left, it was without most of our luggage.

"In Rio we filed a statement of our experiences with the Consul General telling Americans of our experiences and investigations, and warning them against the gold and diamond mining projects which we had seen. This statement gave a brief recital of our investigations.

"Noble wrote the statement, and we all signed it. We shall send a copy to the State Department."

More Than 500 Acceptances for Canadian Clubs' Annual Event.

The annual Canadian Club dinner, for which more than 500 acceptances have been received, will be held to-night at the Hotel Astor. Among those who have signified their intention of being present are the Hon. S. Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defense at Ottawa; Sir Edmund Walker, President of the Chamber of Commerce at Toronto; Sir Alexander La Coste, Chief Justice at Quebec; Secretary Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture; Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway; Robert Williams, former partner of the late Cecil Rhodes; Robert F. Walker of the Rock Island Railroad, and George Gordon Battle.

As the dinner is avowedly intended as a "booster" gathering for Canada, most of the speeches will be on that country's progress.

HAD VANDERBILT LETTER.

Woman Arrested in Sixth Ave. Bore Missive to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt.

A well-dressed woman, who said she was Mrs. Lee, but declined to give her address, was arrested last night in front of Jack's Restaurant, at Sixth Avenue and Forty-third Street, after she had been put out of the restaurant. A large crowd gathered and Policemen Sweeney and Butler of the West Forty-sventh Street Station took the woman there.

When she was arraigned in the station house, the woman threw a leather handbag in front of Lieut. Haerle, telling him to take care of her money. When Matron Taylor opened the bag, she was unable to find anything of value in it. A sealed letter addressed to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, marked "Personal," was found in the woman's possession.

and others of note, from England, France, Austria and America.

Of Table Services alone, there are OVER 100 OPEN STOCK PATTERNS from which you may select; with a price-range from $2.50 for a 60-piece set to $1,050 for a superb Louis XV. Service of 108 pieces. In this astonishing gathering you will find—

Seventeen Patterns of ENGLISH ROCK CRYSTAL.
Thirty Patterns of ENGRAVED GLASS.
Fifteen Patterns of GOLD DECORATED GLASS.
Twenty-two Patterns of ETCHED CRYSTAL.
Sixteen Patterns of PLAIN CRYSTAL.

And of each you can buy one piece, or one hundred pieces, for all are open stock patterns that we have at all times.

There's Much Charming Decorative Glassware

Of the individual pieces for adorning the dinner table or the living-room there is an equally prodigal assortment. Table after table—fixture after fixture—is beautiful with artistic new designs, the graceful shapes, the flashing colors of the glassware.

Here are Marie Antoinette Flower Baskets, for instance, of Bohemian crystal, for bonbons or flowers; richly engraved and in all sizes, from 4½-inch at $1.25 to 12-inch at $4.75.

On another table is a group of Vases in sets, for the dinner table; in various shapes and tints, and sometimes connected with chains, at $2.90 to $8.75 the set.

There are beautiful English Rock Crystal Decanters, Pitchers and other separate pieces. Table Ornaments of crystal, stunningly decorated with French gilt; and, finally, a splendid collection of Cut Crystal in newest designs on blanks of utmost purity and quality; ranging from a small Bonbon Dish at 90c to a magnificent Punch Bowl at $95.

Best Time to Come Is NOW

May we suggest that now—early in the season—is the most satisfactory time to choose to best advantage from this wonderful collection (which in many ways excels that of the finest specialty shops) the Glassware either for your own home, or for highly desirable wedding or holiday gifts.

As an incentive to make your first holiday visit to these Crystal Salons tomorrow, we have arranged—

WILSON IS THINKING EXTRA SESSION OVER

Finds It Remarkable That Congress Meets a Year After a President Is Seated.

FAVORS LABOR DEPARTMENT

Bill Creating It May Get Impetus from His Statement That He Hoped to Appoint New Cabinet Head.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—The one best political bet here to-night is that President-elect Woodrow Wilson will call an extra session of Congress soon after he is inaugurated, to bring about an immediate downward revision of the tariff schedules. Some word may come from him to that effect at an earlier date than had been expected, possibly before he sails away on his vacation Saturday. Gov. Wilson is showing the greatest interest in the many expressions by men prominent in the councils of the Democratic Party that an extra session should be called to prevent a long delay in carrying out the promises of the party to rid the tariff schedules of special privileges. To-night he asked the newspaper correspondent to obtain for him a list of the names of those who have spoken in interviews or by letters printed in the newspapers, for or against an extra session.

"I want a line-up," he said. "I have read them, but can't hope to remember them all." It was not only the names of the Congressmen that he wanted, but of everybody who had expressed an opinion whether he was in public life or not.

The fact that the Congressmen would like to know as early as possible in order to make arrangements to be in Washington next Spring if the session was to be called, was brought to his attention.

"Yes, that is a consideration from the viewpoint of their convenience," he said thoughtfully. "Of course, I don't see any public need for announcing my decision now, except, perhaps, to quiet any speculation as to whether there is going to be early action or not."

Thinks Regular Sessions Ill-Timed.

Commenting on the provisions of the Constitution by which, in the ordinary course of events, Congress is not convened until more than a year after the Presidential election, Gov. Wilson made it plain that he did not believe in the wisdom of that course. He was asked why he thought the Constitution had been so framed.

"It must have been," the Governor replied, "that the exact result of an election in the early days would not be known everywhere for several months on account of the lack of transportation facilities.

"It is really an extraordinary arrangement that Congress doesn't meet until more than a year after the Presidential election in which the wishes of the people are expressed."

A newspaper dispatch from Washington was called to his attention, declaring that close friends of William Jennings Bryan said he would decline a place in the Cabinet.

"Oh, but Mr. Bryan did not say that," remarked the Governor, "that was just a piece of dope."

Gov. Wilson expects to name along with other members of his Cabinet an executive for the proposed Department of Labor.

"I hope there will be a new member of the Cabinet for the Department of Labor," he said. "It will be a very important selection to make. Everybody confidently expects it, and I have been told that both sides in Congress favor the new department. The immediate creation of the department is, of course, dependent on the action of the approaching session of Congress."

May Be White House Guest.

According to unofficial advices, the President-elect will pay his first visit to the White House during the Christmas holidays on his way to Staunton, Va., to attend a "birthplace jubilee" which is being arranged by the citizens there in his honor. Gov. and Mrs. Wilson, according to these advices, will then be invited to be the guests of President and Mrs. Taft for two days. The invitation had not reached here to-night, and the Governor was not questioned about the report. If the advices prove to be authentic, it will be the first time that Gov. Wilson has set foot in the White House, which is to be his home for at least four years.

The Governor said to-night that he was planning to cover in one trip the jubilee at Staunton and the annual conference of Governors at Richmond, Va., and with that in view he asked that the date for the jubilee be set for some day during the Christmas holidays.

There are two engagements, made before he was nominated by the Baltimore Convention, which the Governor feels in duty bound to keep. He will accept none of the hundreds of other invitations he has received. These two are with the Southern Society of New York, and the Commercial Club of Chicago. The date of the dinner of the former organization was changed when it was learned that the Governor would be away on his vacation on the day originally proposed. The other engagement falls some time in January.

As the result of a visit made to-day by a delegation of Gov. Wilson's friends from Columbia, S. C., that little town may become the Winter capital of the United States after next year. Gov. Wilson's father, the Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, and his wife lived there from 1872 to 1877 in a house which Mrs. Wilson planned and Mr. Wilson built.

Among the gifts received by Gov. Wilson to-day was a live eagle from Louisiana, sent by John P. Parker, one of the Presidential Electors from that State. The Governor doesn't know yet what he is going to do with the bird.

Talking about quotations which were being used from his book "Congressional Government" as an illustration of his beliefs, the Governor said that he had written the book when he was 28 years old. "I haven't read it since and I don't know what is in it, or whether it expresses my views now or not," said he. He spoke of his lectures on the executive delivered in a later year at Columbia University, and from which quotations are also being taken. "I can't take an affidavit that those are my opinions now either," he remarked. "That was before I was an executive."

Some one brought up the subject of the resignation of Ambassador Bryce, and the Governor paid Mr. Bryce a high tribute. "He was one of the most wonderful men I have ever known," he observed.

FILIPINO CALL FOR FREEDOM.

Aguinaldo Reappears to Urge Independence at Wilson Celebration.

MANILA, Nov. 11.—An immense demonstration was held to-day in celebration of the election of Woodrow Wilson to the Presidency of the United States. Ten thousand Filipinos paraded and 20,000 gathered at a mass meeting on the sea boulevard Luneta. Those participating in the parade carried banners bearing the words "Immediate Independence."

Manuel Quezon and Sergio Osmena were the principal speakers. They expressed their faith in the Democratic promises of immediate independence for the Philippines.

Emilio Aguinaldo, the former insurgent leader, made his first public appearance since the insurrection. He was seated prominently on the platform and made a brief speech indorsing the views expressed by Manuel Quezon and Sergio Osmena, the former of whom is delegate to Congress and the latter Speaker of the Philippine Assembly.

By Telegraph to the Editor of the NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Va., Nov. 11.—Complying with your request for an expression of opinion on Representative Quezon's belief that the Democratic majority in Congress will grant immediate independence to the Philippines, I would say that there is now on the calendar of the House of Representatives a bill granting qualified independence to the Philippine Islands for a period of eight years from the fourth day of July, 1913. After that date it is provided that they be given complete independence.

It is expected that this measure will come up for consideration in December next, and that it will be passed by the Democratic House.

STIMSON REFUSES PIER EXTENSION

Will Grant No More Temporary Permits to Any Steamship Companies.

BIG SHIPS MAY LEAVE PORT

Boston or New London Could Furnish Facilities, Says Dock Commissioner Tomkins.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The plan to extend the piers of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, the North German Lloyd, and other companies at Hoboken into the channel of the North River was rejected to-day by Secretary of War Stimson.

This decision is on the application of the Hamburg-American, North German Lloyd, and other steamship companies to be permitted temporarily to extend their piers at Hoboken in order to accommodate their larger steamships, which have difficulty in docking at the present piers. The decision also involves the temporary permit granted last year by Secretary Dickinson to the International Mercantile Marine Company for the extension of the White Star pier.

The decision is based upon the conviction of Secretary Stimson that the interests of the commerce of New York should not be prejudiced by any temporary project directly opposed to the permanent development of the harbor. Mr. Stimson had a long conference with the New York Harbor Line Board, all the members of which were present. They are all officers of the Engineer Corps of the army.

Incidentally the Secretary serves notice upon the British steamship lines that they must prepare to make other permanent arrangements for the accommodation of their big ships, intimating very clearly that they must remove the present temporary pier ends in the Chelsea district when the permit expires on March 15 next. In order to facilitate the rearrangement of the harbor lines on a permanent basis, the department has remitted the application of the Hamburg-American and Holland America Lines to the New York Harbor Line Board, "with directions to reconsider the matter with a view to its permanent decision and with instructions that no recommendations for temporary encroachments beyond the established pier head lines will be entertained."

Further, after notifying the International Mercantile Marine Company that the same Army Board will consider the question of the continuance of its temporary extension, the Secretary says: "I shall be glad also to have the authorities of the City of New York and of the State of New Jersey having in charge the matter of harbor terminals notified, in order that there may be full co-operation in this decision."

SHIPS MAY GO TO BOSTON.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins Says That Is Lines' Second Choice.

The report from Washington that Secretary of War Stimson had denied the application of the Hamburg-American Line for a temporary extension of the Hoboken piers to accommodate the new 50,000-ton Imperator steamship, which will arrive here next May, reached New York too late for the Atlantic steamship agents to hold a conference last night. In addition to denying the request for pier extension, the Secretary has also stated that he will not renew the temporary permit granted by his predecessor to the White Star Line agents for the docking of the Olympic, which expires next March.

Dock Commissioner Calvin Tomkins, who returned from Boston last night, said that he hoped the decision of the War Department on the pier extension in the North River was not final, because it would be a serious blow to the commerce of New York and to that of the whole country.

"I was afraid," said the Commissioner, "that a difficulty might arise regarding the renewal of the permit to the White Star Line, as the attitude of the New York Harbor Line Board was adverse to granting it at first.

"When Secretary of War Dickinson signed the permit in Washington a year ago last March he did it only on the express understanding that the city authorities would get to work immediately and make permanent arrangements for the docking of these big ships, and made it clear that the permit was only temporary, to allow the Olympic to dock in the following June. Since that time two plans have been discussed by myself and the New York State Harbor Commission and the New Jersey State Harbor Commission with the New York Harbor Line Board, and the plans have been laid before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, but so far nothing has been done."

"Who is responsible for the delay?" he was asked.

"The blame rests on the Dock Commissioner," he said, "and I am sorry that I have not been able to succeed in getting the confidence of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment."

"Next to New York, the Port of Boston offers the best facilities, as the trains which can never be done in this port.

"I do not think that New London, Philadelphia, or Baltimore would be considered by the steamship companies in the event of their having to send their big ships away from New York. They would naturally go to Boston, where the White Star, Cunard, and Hamburg-American already have pier accommodations."

Julius P. Meyer, Vice Director and Assistant General Manager of the Hamburg-American Line, said yesterday that he had heard that the Secretary of War had denied the application for the pier extension, but had not received the communication officially, and could not discuss what steps his company would take at present.

P. A. S. Franklin, Vice President of the International Mercantile Marine Company, which owns the White Star Line, said that he understood the permit granted to his company for the extension of the pier head did not expire until June 30, and he hoped that by that time some permanent plan would have been decided upon.

BRYAN QUITS EMBASSY.

Said to Have Resigned as Envoy to Tokio After Row with Knox.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—According to gossip in Washington, the resignation of Charles Page Bryan of Chicago as Ambassador to Japan, officially announced to-day, was due to a disagreement between Mr. Bryan and Secretary of State Knox when both were in Tokio attending the funeral of the late Emperor.

The reason assigned by the State Department for Mr. Bryan's resignation was ill-health and injuries received in a carriage accident in Japan, necessitating hospital treatment and possibly a serious operation. Mr. Bryan is now in Chicago. In his letter to President Taft he said that he would be unable to return to his post because of his physical condition, and accordingly desired to resign at once.

Behind the apparent record in the matter is a report that Mr. Bryan's resignation was decided on in Tokio in the course of the imperial funeral ceremonies. It was said that Mr. Bryan was told by the Secretary of State at the time that he should proceed to his home in America and in proper time forward his resignation to Washington.

Ambassador Bryan was preparing in September to come home for a vacation. The sudden death of the Emperor compelled him to rearrange his plans and to remain in Tokio to receive the Secretary of State. Mr. Bryan left Tokio three days before Mr. Knox sailed for home. At the time this was regarded as significant of some difference between the two, and inquiries were made at the State Department to learn why Mr. Bryan should have started from Japan while Mr. Knox was there. The answer given was that there was no information whatever at the department in regard to the matter, and that conjecture would perhaps do both injustice. Mr. Bryan came home leisurely by way of Vladivostok and the Siberian Railway, staying a fortnight in Europe, and then went direct to his home in Chicago without stopping at Washington.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Ambassador Bryan was confined to his room in his suburban home to-night and was not permitted to receive callers, but it was announced that he would start for New York to-morrow to place himself in the hands of specialists. He expects to remain in a hospital for several weeks. His condition is not critical, it is said.

CURTIS GETS PERMIT TO WED.

Veteran at Eighty-two Takes His Fourth Wife.

Samuel E. Curtis of 129 Waverley Avenue, Brooklyn, a veteran of the civil war, who, although 82 years old, has been waiting for the dispensation that would make possible his fourth marriage, got the desired permission yesterday afternoon, and less than an hour later he and Mrs. Mary McGowan, who is 42 years his junior, were united. Mr. Curtis is a Protestant and his new wife is a Roman Catholic. It was necessary before the marriage could be performed to get a dispensation from Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn.

TAFT'S CABINET PLAN THEIR FUTURE WORK

Most of Them Will Return to Law Practice When the Administration Ends.

OFFERS MADE TO HITCHCOCK

Wilson, Who Will Have Completed Sixteen Years' Service as Cabinet Officer, to Return to Farming.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The members of President Taft's Cabinet are already arranging their plans for the future, following the example set by the President. Philander C. Knox, the Secretary of State, has intended for some time to return to the practice of law in Pittsburgh as soon as the Taft Cabinet comes to an end. He is a man of independent means, and will probably find leisure from the law to spend considerable periods at Valley Forge, Penn., where he has a fine farm. He also has a fine house here, which he purchased from the widow of George W. Childs of Philadelphia.

It is expected that Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, will not return to Chicago to resume his business career after he leaves office. Among Mr. MacVeagh's friends it is the understanding that he will retire altogether and settle down in Washington, where he has a handsome new residence, constructed under the personal supervision of Mrs. MacVeagh.

Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, will return to New York City to resume the practice of law. Mr. Stimson has been a member of the Cabinet since March, 1911, a period not sufficiently long to cause him to get out of touch with his law business.

George W. Wickersham, Attorney General, intends to make a trip around the world for about a year, accompanied by his wife. Upon his return Mr. Wickersham will resume his law business in New York with the firm of Strong & Cadwalader, of which he is a member.

As far as is known, Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster General, has not planned his future. Mr. Hitchcock is said to have received many offers from business concerns, which have been attracted by his record in the Post Office Department, where he turned an annual deficit of $17,000,000 into a surplus. Some of Mr. Hitchcock's friends are concerned over the condition of his health, and it is probable that he may take a rest. It is supposed that he will take a trip abroad immediately after the Taft Administration ends.

George Von L. Meyer, the Secretary of the Navy, is actively interested in several manufacturing concerns and banking institutions in Boston and its vicinity, and is expected to return to his residence at Hamilton, Mass., in order to resume active business again.

Walter L. Fisher, the Secretary of the Interior, is a member of the law firm of Matz, Fisher & Boyden of Chicago, and will return to that city to resume law practice.

James Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, is going back to farming. Mr. Wilson has broken all records for Cabinet service, having served continuously under Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, and Taft. He entered Mr. McKinley's Cabinet in March, 1897, and upon his retirement with President Taft will have completed sixteen years in the office of Secretary of Agriculture.

Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor, will return to St. Louis, Mo., to resume the practice of law with the firm with which he was connected when he entered President Taft's Cabinet, and in which he has retained a nominal membership.

Carmi Thompson, the secretary to the President, will take up the practice of law at Ironton, Ohio, his former home. It is the expectation here that Mr. Thompson will retire soon and be succeeded by Charles D. Hilles, who gave up the office of secretary to the President in order to become Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Nearly all the members of President Taft's Cabinet, with Mr. Hitchcock, have received flattering offers to ally themselves with big business or professional concerns at large salaries. There is no reason to believe, however, that any of these offers will be accepted.

ARREST PROF. LORING JORDAN

Instructor in Cathedral Choir School Held on Boy's Charge.

A man who told the police he was Prof. Loring Jordan, a teacher of history and mathematics in the choir school of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, was arrested yesterday morning and locked up in the West 126th Street Station on the strength of a story told to two detectives by 14-year-old Sigmund Fink, son of Samuel Fink, an insurance adjuster living at 122 West 137th Street. Prof. Jordan also teaches at the Brooklyn Branch of the New York Preparatory School, and he asked the police to telephone to the building at 545 Franklin Avenue that he had been hurt in an accident and would not be able to hold his night class there.

Sigmund Fink disappeared from his home on July 8, and the general alarm that was sent out then brought no result. It was not until Monday night that he was found. His mother, following a clue left at the house by a newsboy, came upon her son sitting on a bench in Madison Square. He had gone in for the life of a newsboy, he told her, and had been able to make plenty of money selling papers in City Hall Park. Later information which he gave the police brought about Jordan's arrest.

A Cargo of Rare Chinese Porcelains

Arrival of 10,000 Pieces at Vantine's

IN all the merchandising news of the metropolis, there is nothing more important. Two car loads of those rare jars and pots and vases, in unique, decorative shapes, which the Chinese have given to the world as their unequalled contribution to ceramic art.

Things which you will not soon again have the opportunity to pick up—selected by our personal representative in China through a period of months—offered now, not at the prohibitive prices of rarities, but at modest valuations which any home can afford.

It Is More Than a Sale—It Is an Exhibition

This is by far the largest assortment of meritorious Chinese porcelains brought to America for several years

The collection embraces all the favorite quarries of the modern collector. Ewers, pilgrim bottles, ginger and sugar jars, trumpet shape vases—those delightful vanities which the world of old ceramics lays before the enthusiastic American.

Here is the phœnix painted in blue under glaze—the petals of flowers in white enamel on grounds of wonderful shade—work closely following the Ming and the Tartar dynasties, richer than anything the Occident can present.

For almost a song, 17 and 18 inch vases with Kang-shi period decorations; characteristic examples of the black, red, yellow and blue "familles"—rich in their glazing and lavishly simple in ornamentation.

Odd square vases and gourd shapes—white enamel slips over blues and browns; and a beautiful display in all sizes of powdered blue jars and urns and vases, whose depth of color and feeling is that of the ocean.

Porcelains that look like agate, marble, jade and even carved wood—showing the superiority of the Chinese artist when he is working for himself.

Here are reasonably priced duplicates of the famous Celadon green jars and vases—so named in Paris from the pseudonym of the favorite shepherd of comedy whose costume was green.

Pieces as low as 75 cents, with the artistic value of objects of art which cost as many dollars.

* * *

For $1.50, $5, $6, $10 or $12, most interesting members of this highly decorative family—of genuine refinement for personal possession or gifts.

For $15, $18 and up to $40, $50 and $60, more pretentious porcelains, fit for the cabinets of connoisseurs or the mantelboards of homes where tasteful decoration is the object to be attained.

BRYCE WILL REMAIN TILL SLATE IS CLEAR

May Be Kept Far Into the Winter on Panama Canal Tolls and Arbitration.

THEN WILL TURN TO WRITING

British Protest Against Canal Plan Will Arrive Soon and He Will Press It in Person.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—That Ambassador Bryce will not yield his post until late in the Winter became known here today. Consequently there will be no delay in the pending negotiations over Panama Canal tolls.

It was assumed at first that Mr. Bryce's retirement might mean the dropping by Great Britain of her claim for free tolls like those given American coastwise ships, but it is stated on good authority that no change of British policy is involved in the change of diplomatic representation here.

The formal British protest is now being formulated by the British Foreign Office. It will be forwarded in a few weeks, and when it comes it will be presented by Mr. Bryce and pressed by him in personal conversations.

This official explanation of Mr. Bryce's retirement was given out from the British Embassy:

> The President has been informed of Mr. Bryce's intention to retire before long from his post as Ambassador. He intimated his wish to do so to his Majesty's Government in July, 1911, more than a year ago, as by that time the questions which he came from Europe to settle (including those relating to the North American fisheries, the boundary waters between the United States and Canada, fur sealing in the Behring Sea, and pecuniary claims outstanding between Britain and the United States) had all been disposed of.
>
> At the request of the British Government, however, he remained in Washington in order to deal with certain other matters then pending. Mr. Bryce is retiring in order to devote himself to the completion of two works on which he has been long engaged. The time for his departure has not been fixed.

It is suggested in some quarters that the "certain other matters then pending" include, besides the canal matter, negotiations for a renewal of the general Anglo-American arbitration treaty, which Mr. Bryce originally negotiated.

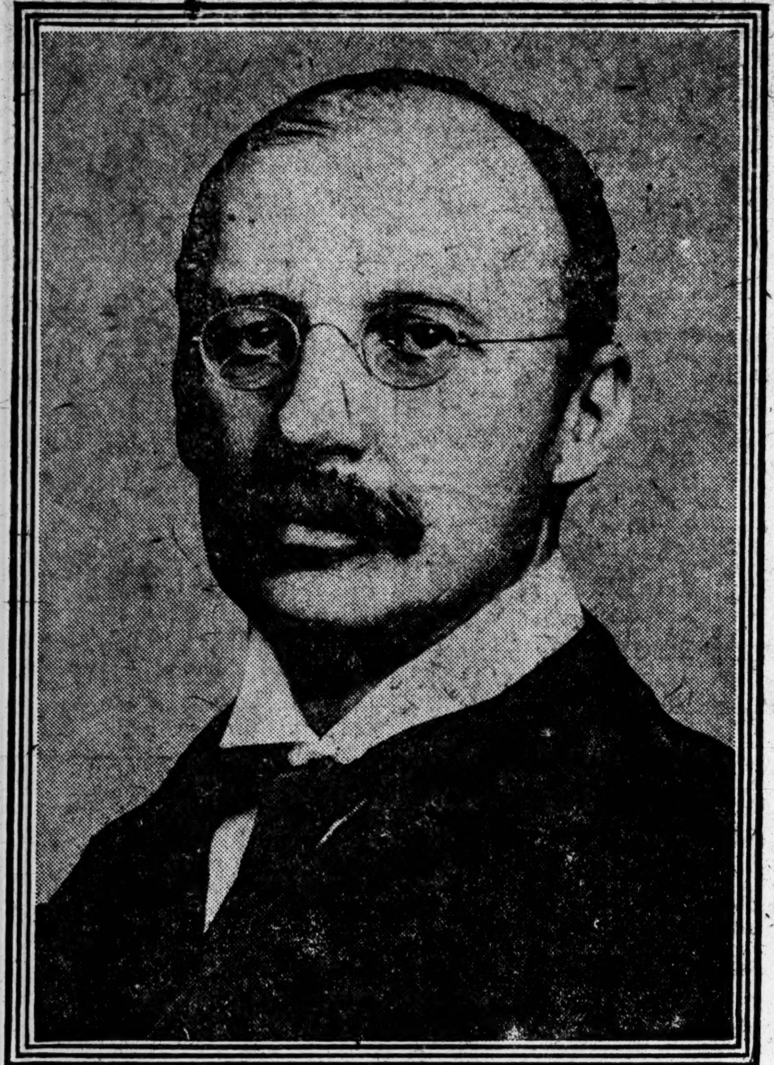
Renewal of the treaty in April, when it expires by a five-year limitation, is thought to be in some doubt, whether Mr. Bryce remains in Washington or not. During the debate on the Panama Canal bill last Summer a Republican Senator high in the Committee on Foreign Relations expressed the idea that the measure might be a blow to arbitration.

He thought the discussion made it plain that when Great Britain, under her treaty of arbitration, asked for arbitration of the tolls question, the Senate would refuse to permit the question to be arbitrated. This refusal, he said, would be made in the face of the treaty's declaration that the "interpretation of treaty rights" was peculiarly within the treaty's scope. As he expressed it, "the American attitude on Panama tolls puts a knife into The Hague which will set the cause of arbitration back fifty years."

The literary works to which Mr. Bryce wishes to devote himself are a monumental study of democracy and a historical work on the Emperor Justinian, who codified the Roman civil law. The work on democracy will cover many lands.

It is stated here that Mr. Bryce's prospective successor, Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, now Minister at Stockholm, is entirely satisfactory to President Taft and Secretary Knox.

SIR CECIL ARTHUR SPRING-RICE.



Chosen to Succeed James Bryce as British Ambassador.

PRAISE AND BLAME IN LONDON.

Times Says Bryce Lacked Equipment, but Did a Great Work

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—Commenting on the resignation of Ambassador Bryce, The Times says this morning:

"There was a weakness in Mr. Bryce's equipment for his post. He had no very clear appreciation of the force and meaning of the modern imperial movement, and he was himself a party politician, marked with a strong bias toward the economic and other doctrines of the Manchester school.

"So far as these predilections influenced or weakened his position as an Ambassador, they justify the criticisms which will always be heard against the choice of a statesman with a political record but with no diplomatic training for a great diplomatic office.

"Such criticisms are not mitigated by Mr. Bryce's action in the early stagts of the Panama Canal imbroglio, for his failure to grasp the first indication of difficulty and his absence afterward at a critical time are both to be deplored.

"These criticisms are essential to any just review of his career, and they indicate some very clear considerations in the choice of the future tenants of the post. But, having mentioned them, we are glad to put them aside, though their recentness still makes them bulk unduly large in the public eye.

"They are of little enough account in comparison with the general influence for good which Mr. Bryce's reputation and personality have exerted on Anglo-American affairs. He went to Washington with a reputation so high as to be difficult to maintain. He has not decreased it. He has made it higher in both countries by the work he has done.

"He has been a dignified and capable Ambassador, a distinguished public figure, and, in private life, a man of many friends.

"His successor, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, is, unlike Mr. Bryce, a diplomatist by profession. His reputation stands high in the service, and he is already well known and popular in Washington."

14 DEAD, 90 HURT IN WRECK.

Flagman, Railway Officials Say, Failed to Warn Freight Engineer.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 11.—Fourteen persons were killed and ninety hurt in a wreck on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad near Mountz, La., at 12:30 o'clock this morning. The crash was caused by the negligence of a flagman, railway officials say. It is said the employe, whose name is Cunningham, was sent back from a crowded excursion train that had been stopped on a curve. He was to flag an oncoming through freight train, but it is alleged he failed to do so. The heavy freight engine rammed its way through the rear coach of the ten-car excursion train. Cunningham disappeared soon after the collision.

Of the killed, four were white women, one was a white infant not yet identified, four were negro women, and five negro men, most of them residents of towns near Mountz. Forty-one of the injured persons are white and forty-nine negroes. It is thought that all of these, with the possible exception of three, will live.

The casualties occurred in the last and the fourth from the last cars, the two between withstanding the crash better. The car next to the last was damaged only a little. The third was partly telescoped, and the fourth was smashed. All except the last two cars were filled with negroes.

Soon after the crash the wreckage caught fire. It was with difficulty that those not hurt rescued the injured from the flaming mass of steel and wood. As far as is known, no one was burned to death. The injured were taken from the wreck before the fire gained great headway.

WOMEN WILL HAIL TEN-STARRED FLAG

Carnegie Hall to Blaze with Electrical Recognition of the Suffrage States.

MRS. SHAW LEADING SPEAKER

Meeting To-morrow Night to be Tribute to Her Campaign as Well as Celebration of Victory.

A salute to a ten-starred American flag will be the feature of the women's "Celebration of Citizenship" at Carnegie Hall to-morrow night. The celebration has been arranged hurriedly in honor of the addition of four States in which women can vote and to welcome home the National Suffrage President, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who has been campaigning since early Summer, with no vacation, speaking six and seven times a day, and has traveled over 10,000 miles.

As the salute goes up from all over the hall the ten stars in the great flag will come out in a burst of electricity and the women will sing the "Women's Marseillaise," of the following two verses and chorus:

THE WOMEN'S MARSEILLAISE.

Arise, ye daughters of a land
That vaunts its liberty!
Make reckless rulers understand
That women must be free,
That women will be free.
Hark! Hark! The trumpet's calling!
Who'd be a laggard in the fight?
With victory even now in sight,
And stubborn foemen backward falling.

Chorus.

To Freedom's cause till death
We swear our fealty.
Repeat—March on! March on!
Face to the dawn,
The dawn of liberty.

Arise! Though pain or loss betide,
Grudge naught of freedom's toll,
For what they loved the martyrs died.
Are we of meaner soul?
Are we of meaner soul?
Our comrades, greatly daring,
Through prison bars have led the way;
Who would not follow to the fray,
Their glorious struggle proudly sharing?

Chorus.

To Freedom's cause till death
We swear our fealty.
Repeat—March on! March on!
Face to the dawn,
The dawn of liberty.

There is great enthusiasm about the meeting and many prominent people will occupy the boxes. All the seats except in the boxes and on the stage will be free.

Those who have not heard it will know to-morrow afternoon. A big four-in-hand coach will start from the headquarters of the Woman's Political Union, East 29th Street at 2 o'clock and roll up Fifth Avenue with women delivering notices of the celebration from the top seats.

The four horses drawing the coach will be blanketed, each blanket bearing the name of one of the new suffrage States, Arizona, Michigan, Oregon and Kansas. On the coach among others will be Mrs. John Winters Brannon, Miss Eleanor Brannan, Mrs. Edward Livingston Hunt, Mrs. Calvin Tomkins, and little Miss Katherine Tomkins, who is a strong and ardent suffragist, and is helping to support the cause by giving five cents a month toward campaign expenses.

There will be no suffrage colors in the decorations of the hall Wednesday night. The National colors will be everywhere. In the lobby of the building thousands of little silk flags, the real flags, not ten starred, will be sold for five cents each and every usher will wear one. American flags will be everywhere and with them the peace flags loaned by Dr. Robert Friedman.

The meeting will open with an organ recital by Miss Mary Adelaide Liscom of the West Side Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Shaw as the guest of honor will be the chief speaker of the evening and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch will preside. Dr. Harvey Wiley will speak and has telegraphed the women:

"I want to join in the chorus of victory."

A telegram from Mrs. Pankhurst which will be read at the meeting says:

"The British militants send congratulations to the suffrage leaders in successful States. Victory only postponed in Wisconsin."

Dr. Maud Parker, a Washington State woman and graduate from Cornell Medical College will be one of the speakers. Dr. Parker cast her first vote for President an hour before she took the train for the East.

Among the women who have taken boxes for the celebration are, Miss Alice Carpenter, Mrs. Lewis L. Delfield, Miss Lydia Field Emmett, Mrs. Henry Phipps, Mrs. Calvin Tomkins, Mrs. Frederick Peterson, Mrs. Raymond Brown, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. William Floyd and Mrs. E. Livingston Hunt.

ACT ON DIX'S RESIGNATION.

William McKinley Hospital League Resents Criticism.

The resignation of Gov. John A. Dix as a member of the Advisory Committee of the William McKinley Memorial Hospital League was acted upon at a meeting of the committee, in its office in the Metropolitan Building yesterday afternoon. Prior to the meeting it was rumored that the $50 the Governor had contributed to the fund would be returned to him, and also that his resignation would be accepted. Whether or not either of these things was done yesterday was not made public by the committee.

Gov. Dix, in resigning from the committee, is said to have stated that those who were seeking money for the league were not worthy of support, and the impression has been general that the committee would take some action with reference to the Governor's unfavorable criticism.

MILL POND MURDER STILL A MYSTERY

Police Dismiss Theory That Body Was Shipped in Trunk from New York.

WAS FILLED WITH GROCERIES

Authorities Now Incline to Belief That Slaying Was Result of Illicit Liquor Traffic.

Special to The New York Times.

GEORGETOWN, Conn., Nov. 11.—At the close of the first day of the inquest into the death of the woman whose mutilated body was found on Saturday in the Gilbert and Bennett mill pond, Dr. Ernest Smith, Medical Examiner of Georgetown, gave as his opinion that the body had been in the water at least a week before it was discovered, which seemed to dispose of the theory that the body had been shipped here in a trunk from New York. Coroner Phelan was equally certain that the body of the murdered woman was not in the trunk which reached Georgetown from New York on Friday night, and which was later carted away from here by two unknown Italians. The body, Dr. Smith said, had been in the water too long for it to have been placed there on Friday.

The mysterious trunk was traced by State Policeman Virelli to-night to the house of an Italian. It was found to be filled with groceries.

The Coroner authorized a statement to the effect that, in his opinion, there was no connection between this murder and the recent Stratford murder, supposed to have been committed by "white slavers," but the State police are looking for Andrew Capone of New Haven, alias "Big Andrew." At the time that Jennie Cavaglieri was shot to death at Stratford, on the night of Oct. 22, Capone was sought as one of five men who had taken her to Stratford in an automobile on that evening. No trace of him has been found since that time. Capone was arrested several months ago in New Haven in connection with a "white slave" investigation, but the case against him was dismissed for lack of evidence.

The State police also began an investigation of the disappearance of Niccoccia Arnestina and his wife from their home three miles west of Ridgefield late in October. The Arnestinas lived on the Lake Waccabuc Road, close to the New York State line, and their house was one of those that the State police had under suspicion during the liquor raids.

While passing the house one morning the detectives noticed that the curtains were drawn tightly, and the place apparently deserted. Neighbors said that no one had been seen about the place since the previous day. When the detectives returned later in the day they found everything in apparently the same condition as in the morning, except that the position of one of the window shades had been changed, possibly as a signal to some one outside. The place was searched, but Arnestina and his wife had disappeared.

The authorities believed that the couple had fled across the New York State line because they feared arrest for illegal liquor selling, but the prolonged absence is thought by the police not to be in keeping with this theory, and it is now believed that there may have been some connection between their disappearance and the murder of the woman found in the pond.

The features of the murdered woman are so discolored and distorted that identification would be almost impossible. Fear is expressed that both the Arnestinas have been murdered, and that the body found in the pond in Georgetown is that of Arnestina's wife.

It is expected that the pond will be dragged again to determine if Arnestina's body is there.

The State police declare to-day that neither Arnestina nor his wife gave them information in regard to the liquor cases. They say that so far as they know there were no informers among the Italians in Ridgefield, the evidence that led to the liquor raids being gathered in other ways.

Italians living at Branchville frequently have their baggage and express matter consigned to Georgetown. Ridgefield, in which Branchville is located, has been a no-license town, and it is said that much liquor has been shipped there via Branchville. This, the authorities believe, is the real reason for what mystery there may be about the trunk from New York.

DENY WHITE SLAVE STORIES.

Federal Authorities Say Murdered Woman Never Promised Information.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty sent Detectives Ralph Micelli and Clinton Woods to Georgetown, Conn., last night to investigate the theory that the body of the murdered woman which was found in a millpond in that place had been shipped there in a trunk from this city. It was established yesterday that the trunk believed to have contained the body was sent out of the Adams Express Company's depot at 450 Lexington Avenue on Thursday.

At the office of the Federal Department of Justice, at 13 Park Row, it was said yesterday that no special agents had been assigned to the case, as there was nothing to show that it was connected with the white slave traffic.

WARNS COMMERCE BOARD.

Supreme Court Objects to Orders Issued as Result of Its Investigations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Upholding the Commerce Court and annulling an order of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, the Supreme Court of the United States to-day held that the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the Norfolk & Western Railways cannot be compelled to grant physical connections with an electric interurban road, the Cincinnati & Columbus Traction Company, at several crossings in Southern Ohio.

A word of caution was recorded against the Inter-State Commerce Commission issuing orders based upon its own investigations rather than upon testimony of witnesses, by the Supreme Court to-day.

The court, speaking through Justice Holmes, sustained the Commerce Court in holding that the electric line appeared to have been built without regard to the existence of the steam roads, and was not a "lateral branch."

"We remark that the commission stated in its report that it based its conclusion more largely upon its own investigation than upon the testimony of witnesses," said Justice Holmes. "It would be a very strong proposition to say that the parties would be bound in the higher courts by a finding based on specific investigations made in the cases without notice to them. Such an investigation is quite different from a view by a jury taken with notice and subject to the order of a court, and different again from the question of the right of the commission to take notice of results reached by it in other cases when its doing so is made a part of the record, and the facts thus noticed are specified so that matters of law are saved."

The court did not pass upon the question of the power of the commission to require steam roads to grant connections with electric lines as such.

The principal question in the case was whether an electric railway is a "lateral branch line of railroad" within the meaning of the Inter-State Commerce act. Justice Holmes, in announcing the court's opinion, said the court would not determine the scope of the meaning of "lateral branch," but would rest its decision on the finding that in this case the roads intercepted in such a manner, and were built with such purposes, that the electric could not be a lateral branch.

The court to-day dismissed also, for want of jurisdiction, the suit of the National Telephone Manufacturing Company of New Hampshire for $500,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution by the American Bell Telephone Company of Massachusetts.

The appeal of Archbishop Harty of the Catholic Church from the decision of the Supreme Court of the Philippines giving the municipality of Victoria, instead of the Church, title to the large public plaza there, was also dismissed.

Holding it was without jurisdiction to consider the case the court dismissed an appeal of John F. Hanson, an attorney, from a sentence of contempt, imposed by the Probate Court of McPherson County, Kan., when Hanson refused to answer a question at a probate hearing.

The court did not give its decisions in the Union Pacific merger suit, the hard coal cases or any of the other big cases now pending. It announced it would take its annual Thanksgiving recess from after Nov 18 to Dec. 2.

HOE LIBRARY TOTAL NOW AT $1,707,576

$3,500 for an Elzevir at Opening of Last Part of Great Book Sale.

MANY AGENTS FROM ABROAD

Fine Chrysostom Brings $3,125 and a Longus $2,800—$38,400 for Both Sessions.

The dispersal of the fourth and last part of the late Robert Hoe's library was begun at the Anderson Company's auction rooms yesterday. Two sessions were held, one in the afternoon and one last evening. There were present representativs of some of the best-known foreign dealers in rare books. F. S. Ferguson looked after the interests of Bernard Quaritch of London. Joseph Baer of Frankfort-on-Main was prominent in the bidding. An agent of C. Lang of Rome was also on hand, and Dr. Joseph Martini acted in behalf of Mme. Theophile Belin of Paris. Among the members of Mr. Hoe's family who were present were his widow, Arthur Hoe, and Robert Hoe, Jr.

The total for the day was $38,440.50. Of this amount $31,731 was obtained last evening and $6,709.50 at the afternoon session The grand total to date now amounts to $1,707,576.25.

Books in fine bindings brought the best prices of the day. The highest paid for any item in the two sessions was $3,500, which James F. Drake gave last evening for "Eschole de Salerne, envers Burlesques," a duodecimo printed by the famous Elzevir Press in Paris in 1651. It is one of the rarest productions of that press, and the Hoe example is said to be the only one known in uncut state. It came from the Count de Mosbourg's library, and contains his bookplate. The citron levant morocco binding is by Traut Bauzonnet.

Mr. Drake also gave $3,125 for the "Homélies ou Sermons" of Joannes Chrysostomus, three volumes, octavo, Paris, 1693. This work is in old French blue morocco binding by Padeloup, and in fine condition. Cortlandt Field Bishop, former President of the Aero Club, and one of the foremost collectors in this country of illustrated French works in fine bindings, sat beside Mr. Drake while the latter was bidding on these two works, and it was thought he was acting for Mr. Bishop. He would not, however, say for whom he acted. One of the works he said would remain in New York, the other would go to Paris. More than that he would not tell.

$2,350 for Pontanus "Opera."

Dr. Martini, for Mme. Belin of Paris, paid $2,350 for the "Opera" of Joannes Pontanus, three volumes, quarto, printed on the Aldus Press in Venice, 1518-19. It is in contemporary dark green morocco binding, came from the library of the famous bibliophile, Jean Grolier; has his name at the foot of each front cover, and on the centre of each back cover is his motto, "Portio mea domine sit in terra viventum." Laid in is a letter by M. Theophila Belin of Paris, addressed to the late Robert Hoe, in which he says that the bindings are genuine and that they have been only slightly restored in the corners.

Mr. Ferguson, for Bernard Quaritch, paid $2,800 for "Les Amours 'Pastorales de Daphnis et Chloe,'" of Longus, with frontispiece by Coypel and twenty-eight plates engraved by B. Audran after Philippe d'Orleans, the Regent, duodecimo, Paris, 1718. It is in light brown morocco binding by Padeloup.

Other notable items sold last evening were as folows:

"Sermons tres-doctes et eloquens" of Cornelius Musso, Paris, 1584-86, bound in olive morocco for King Henry III., $700, (Martini.)

"Henri II. Galliarum regis elogium," by Petrus Paschalius, Paris, 1560, apparently bound for presentation to Diane de Poictiers as a memorial of the funeral of Henry II., $520, (Smith.)

"Omnia Opera" of Plato, folio, Lugdunum, 1548, with arms of a Cardinal, $450, (Baer.)

"Sacre de Louis XV.," finely illustrated, large folio, Paris, 1722, with the arms of Louis XV. in the centre of each cover, binding by Padeloup, $400, (G. S. Hellman.)

Poetical Works of Percy B. Shelley, edited by F. S. Ellis, Kelmscott Press, 1894-1895, $500, (Smith.)

"Variarum lectionum libri XXV." of Petrius Victorius, folio, Florence, 1553, from the libraries of Thomas Maoli and Firmin-Didot, $835, (Baer.)

"Henri II. et sa cour" and "Stockholm, Fontainbleau et Rome," two volumes, Paris, 1829-1830, presentation copies from Alexander Dumas, Pere, to Mlle. Georges, the French tragedienne, $275, (Dodd & Livingston.)

Some new records were made at the opening session in the afternoon, and the general average was good for the kind of material offered, but there were no high prices. The largest amount paid for any single item was $505, which George D. Smith gave for a first edition of the "Prima Pars Secundae" of Thomas of Aquinas, a folio printed at Mentz in 1471 by Peter Schoeffer. In this work occurs the famous colophon that "this book is produced not by aid of a pen but by the new and wonderful art of printing."

A clean and large copy from the Yemeniz Library of "Extraict ou Recueil des Isles nouvellement trouvees en la grand mer Oceane," a French abridgment of Peter Martyr's first three Decades, printed in Paris about 1532, went to Mr. Smith for $405. This is said to be the record price for this rare work. A copy of Anacreon's "Odes, Inscriptions," duodecimo, printed on vellum, by Didot in Paris in 1794, was knocked down to Maurice Sloog for $150.

For an interesting copy of "A Stray Leaf from the Correspondence of Washington Irving and Charles Dickens," by William Loring Andrews, New York, 1894, one of seventy-five copies on Japan paper, Walter M. Hill of Chicago paid $140. Inserted in the front of the book is an original water-color drawing representing Dickens interviewed by a group of ladies, apparently the incident at Cincinnati in 1842.

Two more sessions will be held to-day, the sixty-second and sixty-third of the sale.

COHALAN SCORES LAWYERS.

Refuses to Grant Delays After Cases Are on His Calendar.

Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan delivered yesterday a lecture on lawyers and their responsibility for the law's delays. Justice Cohalan was compelled to adjourn court twice last week, because lawyers were not prepared to go to trial with cases on the calendar for the day. When he opened his court yesterday, lawyers asked him to postpone cases marked for trial. He declined to do so.

"Only recently," he said, "a committee of lawyers made a report to the Bar Association relating to the call of the calendars and made certain recommendations which they declared would prevent delay in trials. These recommendations are now in force and yet we have the same difficulty. There must be a stop put to this needless delay and I think it rests largely with the lawyers themselves.

"All the jurymen empaneled for this part of the court are business men and have as much right to have the cases that they are called here to pass upon ready for their decision as the lawyers have to come into court to try them. There are twenty-five cases on this calendar. All of you have known for a week they were to be called. Still you come here and ask delay. Aside from the expense to the city of these delays, they clog the calendar and prevent lawyers who are ready with their cases from getting on."

James B. F. Smith, clerk of the parts of Special Terms where equity and divorce actions are tried, announced that his calendar was clear and that new cases may be brought for trial now with greater rapidity than any time since consolidation. J. Lewis Lyon, clerk of the trial parts, said that his calendars were never in better shape. It was agreed that if there was any retrogression toward the old condition of clogged calendars it would be because lawyers failed to take advantage of favorable conditions to get their cases tried.

WARD'S BREAD IS BEST

Come to the Ward Bakeries--
Here's What You'll See

In the Weighing Room—
Materials for thousands of loaves of bread being weighed at one time.

In the Mixing Room—
Great mixing machines kneading the dough for 1,500 loaves of bread at one time.

In the Dividing and Shaping Room—
Thousands of loaves being divided, shaped and carried on moving belts to the ovens.

At the Ovens—
Forty immense ovens baking over 15,000 loaves at one time.

WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD

You will see all this and a great deal more, all intensely interesting to you, if you will visit either one of the two great Ward bakeries—one at East 143rd Street and Southern Boulevard, The Bronx; the other at Pacific Street near Vanderbilt Ave., Brooklyn. You'll not only see the Tip-Top loaves being made; you'll see the other Ward loaves, Dainty Maid, Wheat-Heart—whole wheat bread—and Kron Prinz—the sweet rye loaf.

There is nothing more interesting to you than the perfect baking of clean, wholesome bread. Once you have seen Ward's Tip-Top Bread made you will never let yourself be deceived by the imitators of that bread. You will carefully look for the name, WARD, baked in on the side of every loaf and for the red, white and blue label.

Learn to discriminate--things are not always what they seem.

NEW YORK.

April 19, 1912.

Gentlemen:-

At the close of the operatic season, it gives me great pleasure, on behalf of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and also the artists who have taken part in the performances during the season, to thank you for the Hardman Pianos which have been supplied since last November, and to express the thorough satisfaction that we all feel in these instruments.

There have been eighteen Hardman Pianos in constant use in the dressing rooms of the artists, in the orchestra, and elsewhere for practical work besides a large number used by the artists in their private apartments. The fine tone quality, fullness and splendid durability of these pianos are fully recognized by everyone here.

We shall start upon the coming season - that of 1912-13 - with complete assurance in regard to the unqualified satisfaction the Hardman Pianos will give to us and to our artists.

Believe me,

Yours very truly,

Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Company,

"Most perfect of all pianos."

MARTIN. (Copy't Mishkin.)
"The best piano made."

THE rise of the curtain at the Metropolitan Opera House last night ushered in a season of assured success.

Assured—because the management has spared neither pains nor expense in securing the world's best available talent.

The same broad, time-honored policy led them to select the Hardman as their Official Piano.

That their choice of the Hardman from among the world's greatest pianos was justified the above letter testifies.

But the Hardman is more than the Official Piano of the Metropolitan Opera House.

It is the favorite piano of the Metropolitan Opera House's greatest artists.

It is the piano they delight to use in their own homes for their own gratification.

Nor have they refrained from giving frank expression of their opinion of the Hardman's merits.

This is what some of them have to say about it:

ENRICO CARUSO says:
"The Hardman is my favorite piano."
EMMY DESTINN says:
"A perfect instrument."
RICCARDO MARTIN says:
"The best piano made."
BERNICE DI PASQUALI says:
"Its tonal quality is exquisite."
LEO SLEZAK says:
"Most perfect of all pianos."
CARMEN-MELIS says:
"I am pleased with the Hardman."
GIULIO ROSSI says:
"It has the finest tone."
ANDREA DE SEGUROLA says:
"No other piano is so completely satisfying."
MARIE MATTFELD says:
"It has a soft, velvet-like tone."
DINH GILLY says:
"I have never heard such wealth of tone."
PUTNAM GRISWOLD says:
"I have been most pleased with it."
GIOVANNI ZENATELLO says:
"It fills all the wants of an artist."
BELLA ALTEN says:
"I prefer it to all other pianos."
ADAM DIDUR says:
"It is superior to all other pianos."
ANNA CASE says:
"It is thoroughly satisfactory to me."
LEONORA SPARKES says:
"It has been a real delight to me."
LEON ROTHIER says:
"It is the finest instrument in the world."
GIOVANNI POLESE says:
"Its qualities are of conspicuous superiority."

Terms of payment arranged to suit purchaser's convenience.
Liberal allowance made for old pianos taken in exchange.

VISITING SURGEONS SEE MASTERS WORK

Two Thousand Doctors Gather from All Parts of the Country for Clinical Congress Here.

DEMONSTRATE NEW METHODS

More Than 130 Clinics Held in the City Hospitals Throughout the Day —Sessions to Last a Week.

The third annual Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, probably the most important gathering of this kind in the world, opened yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria, with more delegates present than have attended any of the previous meetings. The score or more young women secretaries before the end of the afternoon had registered the names of some 2,000 surgeons who arrived from all parts of the United States and Canada. Many visitors came from Europe.

Each visitor was provided with a button in which was a slot carrying a card on which his name was written, and with these emblems to identify the delegates the congress was immediately put on an informal footing. Surgeons who had not met for years readily renewed acquaintance by seizing each other by the lapels of their coats and spelling out the names. Among the delegates were more than 300 women physicians.

The grand ballroom of the Waldorf was one of the busiest places in the city in the early morning, for there, displayed on bulletin boards, were the schedules of the clinics to be held in the hospitals in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn throughout the day, and these were eagerly scanned by the delegates. Something had been provided in the way of demonstrations or operations to meet the needs not only of those who were engaged in the practice of general surgery, but for specialists in each branch of surgical science. More than 130 clinics were held in the city institutions between the hours of 8:30 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Each clinic was well attended, and in some instances it was impossible for all those who visited the operating rooms to gain admission.

See Masters of Surgery at Work.

The nature of the 400 operations performed and the demonstrations showed conclusively that the purpose of the congress had been attained in the most admirable manner even on the first day of the meeting. It had been announced by those in charge of the general arrangements that the congress had been arranged so that each visitor might learn as much as possible of his specialty by seeing the way in which his fellow-specialists in this city carried on their work. In other words, the surgeons operating in the clinics held yesterday did not try to accomplish anything of an extraordinary nature, but simply carried out the ordinary routine of their work. The result was that the visitors saw every-day operations performed by masters in surgery and by the most modern methods. The publicity attending the advent of so many distinguished medical men to New York called attention to the vast amount of surgical work that is accomplished here every day. This is lost sight of ordinarily because the work is carried on so unostentatiously in so many medical institutions.

One of the forenoon clinics that attracted many visitors was held in the Skin and Cancer Hospital at Second Avenue and Nineteenth Street by Dr. James T. Gwathmey, the well-known authority on anaesthetics, who demonstrated the most modern methods of general anaesthesia. There was particular interest in the method recently devised by Dr. Gwathmey himself, and in this instance it was employed in an operation for sarcoma in the neck. His method consists of administering the vapor of the oil of orange in conjunction with ether. The oil of orange is placed in one bottle, while ether is put in two other bottles, and this constitutes what is now known as Gwathmey's three-bottle vapor anaesthesia apparatus. It is said of this method that not only is the odor of the anaesthetic completely disguised so that the patient is unable to tell when its administration begins, but other important results are obtained. The patient passes into surgical unconsciousness without any preliminary stage of excitement, anaesthesia is easily maintained with less than half the quantity of ether required by the usual method, and the patient quickly and comfortably regains consciousness without nausea, except in rare instances.

A New Way of Giving Ether.

The gratifying results obtained from administering ether in conjunction with vapor giving a pleasant odor causes the editor of The New York Medical Journal to speculate as follows concerning its mode of action:

> If pleasant odors are indeed sedative to the olfactory nerve, does that surfice to explain their extraordinary influence, at least when followed by ether, over the entire nervous system? Is there merely an association of ideas? The smell of ether is associated with the surgical knife in the minds of adults, and is terrifying to children from its irritating qualities. Perhaps the very familiarity and the harmlessness associated with the odors of flowers and fruit are sufficient to suggest powerfully to the subject that what he is about to undergo, cannot be dangerous, or even unfamiliar.

Whatever the mode of action of this combination for general anaesthetic purposes, those who witnessed its administration yesterday expressed their satisfaction over this advance in surgical procedure. One of the most interested and interesting visitors at Dr. Gwathmey's clinic was Miss McGraw, the chief anaesthetist at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., where the Mayo brothers do their work. She has administered anaesthetics to more than 30,000 patients.

Many visitors to the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital at Second Avenue and Twentieth Street, as well as those at Dr. Gwathmey's clinic, departed hurriedly yesterday morning when it was whispered about that something extraordinary was taking place in the Lying-In Hospital at Seventeenth Street and Second Avenue. As many as could crowd into the amphitheatre on the eighth floor, arrived in time to see the operation known as Caesarian section performed by Dr. Asa B. Davis. This was an entirely unexpected [illegible] visitors as well as to the [illegible] of [illegible] hospital staff, for the patient had just been brought to the institution in an ambulance. Many of the surgeons declared that this was the first time in their lives that they had ever had the opportunity of witnessing this relatively rare operation. It was carried out successfully, and later in the day it was announced that both mother and child were doing well.

Late in the afternoon Dr. Davis performed another Caesarian section in the same operating room. This was the second time that this patient had been obliged to submit to this operation. As in the first instance, it was successful, and the belief was expressed by the medical men present that both mother and child would survive. Dr. Davis introduced a woman and several of her children in the amphitheatre and announced to those present that she had been obliged to submit to the Caesarian operation five times.

Albee's Operation Performed.

There was a large attendance at the clinic held in the amphitheatre of the Post-Graduate Hospital yesterday afternoon by Dr. Henry Lyng Taylor, who performed Albee's transplantation operation. This consisted of removing a piece of bone from the tibia, the bone in front of the leg, and transplanting it to one of the vertebrae which had become deficient through tuberculosis of the bone. This operation was devised by Dr. Fred H. Albee of the staff of the Post-Graduate Medical School. It was a comparatively new operation and had proved most satisfactory in the treatment of those afflicted with hunchback originating from tuberculosis. The living bone is taken from a place where it can best be spared and put where it will be of the greatest benefit. It quickly grows there, and in a short time it performs its functions just as well as though it had always been a part of the spinal column. Dr. Albee exhibited some of his patients in the wards of Roosevelt Hospital yesterday morning.

Dr. Clarence C. Rice exhibited patients in the dispensary of the Post-Graduate Hospital who had been treated with radium for cancer of the pharynx and cancer of the larynx. Many visiting surgeons attended this clinic and expressed themselves as much pleased with the progress which had been made in therapeutics by the employment of radioactive substances.

Clinics in surgery, gynecology, obstetrics, orthopedics, diseases of the eye, ear, throat, and nose, and clinics in radiology, were held by many of New York's most prominent surgeons in other hospitals.

The Publicity Committee, of which Dr. George David Stewart is Chairman, announced when giving out the programme for the day's work yesterday that at 10 o'clock yesterday morning the registered attendance had already exceeded that of the entire week of the second annual congress held in Philadelphia one year ago. The committee expects that at least twenty-five hundred surgeons, and possibly more, will attend the congress, which will be in session throughout the week.

The Presidential meeting was held in the ballroom of the Waldorf last evening. Dr. George E. Brewer of this city delivered the address of welcome, and then introduced the retiring President, Dr. Albert J. Ochsner of Chicago, who delivered a brief address. Dr. Ochsner then introduced President-elect Edward Martin of Philadelphia, who delivered the President's address, taking as his subject the "Treatment of Hepatic Cirrhosis." Dr. Martin also introduced several distinguished visitors: Prof. Otfrid Foester of Breslau, Prof. W. Arbuthnot Lane of London, Dr. W. W. Grant of Denver, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association; Dr. John B. Murphy, ex-President of the American Medical Association; Dr. John A. Witherspoon of Nashville, Tenn., President-elect of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Abraham Jacobi, President of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of Philadelphia read a paper on the surgical bearings of the bio-chemistry of the liver. Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan of Chicago discussed the papers read by Dr. Martin and Dr. Taylor. Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., read a paper on surgery of the spleen, and this was discussed by Dr. Charles K. Peck of this city.

CARREL TELLS OF HIS WORK.

Delegates to Clinical Congress Cheer Noted Experimenter.

Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, recipient of the Nobel Prize in 1912, whose work in experimental surgery has amazed and gratified the scientific world, delivered a lecture last night on the results of his researches, under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History and the New York Academy of Sciences, in the auditorium of the museum in West Seventy-seventh Street.

He held a large audience spellbound for an hour while he gradually unfolded his marvelous discoveries. Many of those who heard him were members of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America. They cheered the lecturer enthusiastically at the end of his address. The lecture was illustrated with many pictures in colors which were projected on a large screen. The title of the lecture was "The Results of the Suture of Blood Vessels and the Transplantation of Organs." The pictures, therefore, illustrated sections of veins, and arteries upon which operations had been performed, showing the successful results; organs such as kidneys, which had been transplanted from one animal to another, and which retained their functions normally, and pictures of dogs which had had their legs removed and others substituted with such perfect technique that no scar line could be observed.

First Tests in Blood Transfusion.

Dr. Carrel began his lecture with the description of his simplest and earliest two operations which had to do with the transfusion of blood and the transplantation of arteries and veins. In this connection he told of the case of a child two days old which was suffering from hemophilia, more commonly known as hemorrhage of the new-born. The infant was in a critical condition when Dr. Carrel was persuaded to use the method of transfusion which he had devised. The father of the child, a well-known physician of this city, volunteered to give the blood. An artery in the father's arm and a vein back of the child's knee were opened. The two blood vessels were united and a quantity of blood transfused. In a few minutes all symptoms disappeared; the child's bleeding ceased and its skin took on the rosy tint of health. This child was absolutely cured of a dangerous and possibly fatal ailment in less than half an hour.

The surgeon next took up the consideration of the possibility of removing large sections of tissue from an animal and after a time replacing them with successful results. He showed pictures of a dog from which he had removed the right ear, the subjacent tissues, and a large part of the skull. He washed this large mass of tissues in a salt solution, and after a time replaced them with the result that they grew on again in a normal manner. This convinced him that it was a safe procedure to remove tissues when necessary and to replace them at will. He expected, he said, that with improved technique, it would be feasible to perform such operations on human beings.

The next step in experimental surgery shown by Dr. Carrel was the transplantation of the hind legs of dogs. He showed a series of pictures indicating the conditions of the animals both before and after these operations, and he declared that while the dogs suffered to a certain extent from paralysis following the operations, they were not oversensitive to pain in their newly acquired limbs.

The transplantation of internal organs next appealed to Dr. Carrel, he said, as an experiment well worth trying, and of deep significance if it should prove successful.

He decided to attempt such an operation, and selected the kidney as the most readily accessible and the organ likely to lend itself best to such an experiment. He extirpated one kidney from each of two dogs and exchanged these organs. The animals were able to walk on the afternoon of the day on which they were operated upon, and were hungry and able to eat two hours after the operation. He showed a picture of one of these animals taken two years later. It was jumping to a considerable height for a piece of meat, and, as Dr. Carrel put it, "was just as good as ever."

Means of Preserving Tissues.

The noted surgeon pointed out to his auditors that the tissues of animals could not be used to replace lost tissue in human beings. He said that the difficulty in transplantation operations for human patients lay in the fact that persons were not anxious to give up their tissues and organs to accommodate those who were in need of them. He said, however, that tissues, when obtainable, could be kept in two ways—in a condition of latent life and a condition of active life. The best way to keep them, he said, was in cold storage. He thereupon showed pictures of tubes containing human skin which he had kept in cold storage for seven weeks and had used them to save the leg of a human patient.

Dr. Carrel then gratified his auditors by telling of his most recent successful work—the preservation of living tissues outside the bodies from which they were taken. He said that he had now living in glass jars tissues which had been taken from their original bodies on Jan. 17, 1912, and that these were not only alive and growing, but were in just as good if not better condition than they were nine months ago.

Not satisfied with preserving pieces of heart, spleen, or liver, Dr. Carrel conceived the idea that it might be possible to maintain the life of entire organs in proper solutions outside the body. He was able not only to do this, but to preserve a whole system of organs, consisting of heart, lungs, spleen, kidney, stomach, and liver, forming a complete organism, which lives by itself entirely separated from the brain, formerly supposed to be the seat of life.

"I was able," said Dr. Carrel in conclusion, "to keep these alive in a bath of water, and for twelve hours I observed the heart beat, the kidney functionate, digestion take place in the stomach, and bile accumulate in the liver. Very few of these procedures are applicable at present to human beings."

Indorse Whitman for Mayor.

At a meeting of the Republican Club of the Thirtieth Assembly District held last night at the clubhouse, 2,060 Lexington Avenue, resolutions were adopted indorsing District Attorney Charles S. Whitman for Mayor. After the cheering had subsided resolutions were also adopted indorsing ex-Judge William Wadhams for District Attorney. Frank K. Bowers is the leader of the district and Mr. Wadhams was the speaker at last night's meeting.

J. A. WAYLAND A SUICIDE.

Millionaire Socialist, Owner of Appeal to Reason, Shoots Himself.

GIRARD, Kan., Nov. 11.—J. A. Wayland, founder and owner of The Appeal to Reason, a Socialist weekly newspaper published here, shot and killed himself in his home last night. Mr. Wayland was unconscious when found by his housekeeper shortly after midnight. He died a few minutes later. He had fired a bullet into his mouth, muffling the sound in the bed clothes. Between the leaves of a book lying on the bed the following note was found:

"The struggle under the competitive system isn't worth the effort. Let it pass."

Friends of Mr. Wayland attribute his act to despondency over the death of his wife, who was killed in an automobile accident a year ago.

Wayland became a millionaire through the success of his paper, which is said to have made more Socialists than any other single agency in America. He owned the greater part of Amarillo, Texas, and his rent roll alone was said to be more than $40,000 a year. For all his prominence as a Socialist, he was in disfavor with the bulk of his party. Socialists said he had exploited the cause for his personal profit, and that he had exploited his work people, too.

FINDS HUSBAND A SUICIDE.

H. S. Wallace Had Sent Wife $15 Before Ending Life at the Martinique.

Mrs. Henry S. Wallace, expecting to be greeted by her husband and return with him to their home in Atlantic City, N. J., where he was well known as the former publisher of The Atlantic City Review, entered the Hotel Martinique last evening and found him dead in the bathroom of the suite he had occupied since Saturday. He had committed suicide by firing a bullet into his right temple. A revolver lay beside the body.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Wallace received an envelope bearing the imprint of the hotel and addressed in her husband's writing, containing $15 in cash, a blank piece of paper, and a blank check of the Atlantic City Bank, where he kept an account, but not a line of writing. He left home Friday to collect money, she supposed, saying that he was going to Philadelphia.

Wallace left no explanation of his reasons for suicide. His wife and the bookkeeper said it was undoubtedly due to business troubles. He had conducted the Wallace Advertising Agency at Atlantic City the last two years, and business had been unprofitable. His personal effects were taken to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, including $8 in cash.

What More Than 25,000 Men Have Learned From This Great Sale of Suits and Overcoats

Since the opening day of this, the Hackett-Carhart creditors' settlement sale, more than 25,000 men have secured suits and overcoats at an average one-half saving.

Of these many thousands, not one man has failed to learn these great truths:

First—That the finest, widest assortment of men's clothes in New York are to-day at the Hackett-Carhart stores.

Second—That it would take twice the Hackett-Carhart prices to duplicate these clothes elsewhere.

Third—That such a rare clothes opportunity exists—that there is an average one-half saving in each Hackett-Carhart suit and overcoat—simply because of the recent receivership, and the settlement with creditors at fifty cents on the dollar.

No other concern in New York can begin to compete against the present Hackett-Carhart values. The reason being that these values are the result of the enormous loss suffered by Hackett-Carhart creditors. A loss that any other concern must itself suffer if it tries to offer what the Hackett-Carhart stores are offering to-day.

And the majority of the patrons of this sale have proven this by going to other stores first. They found nothing that even approached the Hackett-Carhart merchandise—in newness of fabric, lateness of style, or variety of assortment.

Right now, you may choose among 15,000 overcoats in more than 750 fabric designs and over 60 models—for dress, business, motor, travel and storm wear.

And awaiting your inspection also are some 10,000 suits in English, Continental, Fifth Avenue, College and Hackett-Carhart models. All in coloring and mixtures most favored by good fashion—and all fresh from the tailors' hands.

It's time now for you to effect this

LARGEST BREW KETTLES EVER BUILT

We have just installed the four largest brewing kettles ever built in a brewery. They were constructed by August Roos from the finest grade of copper of the famous Calumet-Hecla Mines at Lake Michigan, requiring 200,000 pounds of copper, and have a capacity of 25,000 gallons each. These kettles are vessels in which the wort is boiled for the purpose of sterilization of the beer before it is conducted into the stockhouse, where it becomes aged and clarified before bottling. The above illustration shows only part of the numerous modern equipment which we have installed in our plant in order to meet the demand for KNICKERBOCKER, RUPPINER, METROPOLITAN and RUPPERT'S Extra Brews.

The Beer That Satisfies

Sanitation in our brewery has been brought to as near perfection as is possible in any food-producing establishment. All hops and malt are carefully prepared before being permitted to enter into the process of manufacturing. The vats, pipes, &c., are thoroughly scalded and sterilized before being used. The bottles, before they are filled, are also sterilized, and when the beer is placed in the bottles it is pasteurized. Every person who opens a bottle of Ruppert's beer is assured absolutely that he has a product as pure as human ingenuity and skilled labor can produce.

M'MANIGAL NAMES NEW ACCOMPLICES

Points Out Wachtmeister, Said to Have Handled Carpenters' Dynamiting Fund.

SAYS HOCKIN POCKETED PAY

Gave McManigal Commission to Blow Up Cleveland Viaduct, Which He Fulfilled with J. B. McNamara.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 11.—Ortie E. McManigal, the dynamiter, to-day in the Federal Court resumed his story of his dynamiting career and the connection other defendants had with it.

He gave in complete detail his story of how Hockin "double crossed" him in paying for his work, and of his discovery that the man who is now Secretary-Treasurer of the union put into his own pockets a part of the dynamiting money.

McManigal has expressed to his guards his satisfaction that at last, after nineteen months' of waiting, he has been put on the witness stand to tell his story.

"I am glad it has begun," said the dynamiter. "I want to go ahead and get through with it."

From that part of his career when he had discarded dynamite and was resorting to the use of nitro-glycerine, which he carried about on passenger trains by the dozens of quarts, McManigal related how he had caused explosions at Cleveland, Jersey City, Pittsburgh, Omaha, and Superior, Wis.

Names More Defendants.

He named Peter J. Smith and George ("Nipper") Anderson of Cleveland, Charles Wachtmeister of Detroit, Hiram Cline of Indianapolis, William E. Reddin of Milwaukee, Fred Mooney of Duluth, and Eugene A. Clancy of San Francisco, all labor union officials besides those he previously had mentioned as being among the forty-five defendants who knew he was employed by the Ironworkers' Union to blow up work under construction by "open-shop" contractors.

Carrying twelve quarts of nitro-glycerine in the company of Herbert S. Hockin from a hiding place in an old cooper shop at Rochester, Penn., McManigal testified that he delivered the explosive to Smith and Anderson in Cleveland to be used by them in blowing up a building at Akron, Ohio, on July 4, 1910. The witness said he was to have done the "job," but Smith insisted it had been promised to some one else.

"The didn't know how to use the alarm clock arrangement we had for setting off the bombs," said McManigal, "so I was sent to Chicago to forward 100 feet of fuse by special delivery. It arrived in time, and the Akron job was blown up July 4.

"On my going again to Indianapolis, J. J. McNamara said he had talked to President Frank M. Ryan of the Ironworkers' Union about Hockin holding out part of my pay for each job. McNamara said $200 a job had been set aside by the union, and hereafter I would work directly under him. He said he just had received a letter from Frank C. Webb of New York, asking to send me to blow up a Phoenix Bridge Company job at Greenville, Jersey City. I was to return by way of Pittsburgh and look over the McKees Rocks job, and also by way of Scranton, Penn., and get in touch with Michael J. Hannon, local business agent. McNamara told me not to talk much to Hannon, as he wasn't sure of Hannon yet.

"Webb met me in Jersey City and took me out to show me what to blow up. While I surveyed the job he stood back, saying the workmen knew him around there. That night, after waiting two hours to learn that the watchman made a round only once an hour, I placed two bombs in some girders after midnight, July 9. In the morning I saw Webb with a newspaper giving an account of the explosion.

"On the way back I stopped at Scranton, but didn't see Hannon. At Pittsburgh I bought a dozen alarm clocks, and on July 15 blew up the McKees Rock job.

Going to "Clean Up" the Coast.

"When I got back to Indianapolis, McNamara was talking to his brother James B., who said he had received a telegram from Clancy at San Francisco, and that he [James B.] was going to the coast. J. J. said to his brother: 'Look up Clancy as soon as you arrive and he'll put you in touch with the bunch and the old man.' On the way to Chicago, where I left him, J. B. said that he expected to be three months on the coast; that they wanted some one to go out and clean up the coast, particularly Los Angeles; that they had had a couple of fellows working out there, but didn't get any results. Later I received a telegram from J. B. dated at Seattle.

"I went to Omaha and on July 21 blew up a job there with eight quarts of nitroglycerine. I know the explosion occurred, for I heard it while waiting for a Chicago train at the station half a mile away.

"J. J. wanted to know, when I returned to Indianapolis, why I had not caused two explosions on the job. I told him a watchman with a dog was following me around, and I didn't take any chances. I was afraid the dog would scent me out in the dark.

"J. J. gave me fourteen quarts more and told me to go to Milwaukee and get in touch with William E. Reddin, and then to do a job at Superior, Wis. I went to Milwaukee and buried six quarts on West Wells Street. Then I met Reddin, telling him the Milwaukee job didn't have enough material on it to blow up yet, but that he should let J. J. know when the material arrived. I blew up the Superior job on Aug. 1.

Thanks for "A Real Dynamiter."

"I took a Duluth newspaper account of the explosion back to J. J., but he said he had beaten me to it, for Fred Mooney at Duluth had written him a letter thanking him for sending a real dynamiter up there."

McManigal also testified that in July, 1910, J. J. McNamara received a telegram from Eugene A. Clancy of San Francisco asking whether J. B. had started for the Coast. The telegram, the witness said, read: "Has Jim left for here? If not have him come at once. Will I go north? Let me know at once."

"J. B. wanted me to go with him, but J. J. wouldn't allow it," said McManigal. "J. J. said, 'I want to keep you so if they catch J. B., you can blow up some places, and they'll think J. B.'s the wrong man.'"

This is McManigal's story of Hockin's alleged duplicity in the matter of payments:

"After I blew up the power house of a car shop in Mount Vernon, Ill., Herbert S. Hockin came to me at Chicago, and said I had got the wrong job," testified McManigal. "He said I should have blown up a railroad bridge, and the union's executive board wouldn't allow me pay for the job.

"A few days later Hockin returned with J. B. McNamara. McNamara said he had just come from Salt Lake City, where he had blown up the new Utah Hotel building on April 18. He told me J. E. Munsey, the business agent at Salt Lake City, had arranged for the explosion, and Munsey also arranged to prove an alibi when the explosion came off by going to a store and talking to the persons there.

"Showing me a newspaper picture of the Salt Lake City explosion, McNamara said it had been terrific and came near blowing a statue of Brigham Young off a pedestal. Hockin went to Cincinnati in June and wired me to follow. I told him I would do one of two things, work for a living and quit dynamiting, or do nothing but dynamiting. Hockin said he had plenty for me to do. He said I was to go to Indianapolis, get twelve quarts of nitroglycerine, and blow up the Denison-Harvard viaduct in Cleveland on June 22.

"J. B. McNamara accompanied me from Cincinnati to Indianapolis. On the train I told McNamara that Hockin was to pay me $125 for each job. He was surprised, saying the executive board was allowing $200 and expenses for each job. I said Hockin was holding out on me. Mr. McNamara said the big fellow (meaning J. J. McNamara, his brother, who was Treasurer of the Ironworkers' Union) would see that I was paid in full hereafter."

Says Hockin Kept Back $500 of Pay.

"At the Ironworkers' headquarters in Indianapolis J. B. and J. J. McNamara and I compared accounts and found Hockin had held out $500 on me for all the jobs I had done. J. J. said he always suspected Hockin was a double-crosser, and now he knew it. He said he was going to tell President Frank M. Ryan about it; but I was to go right on with the jobs as Hockin planned.

"J. B. and I, with three nitro-glycerine bombs of four quarts each, packed in suit cases, departed for Cleveland, reaching there June 18, 1910, four days before the explosion. Hockin appeared and said he had seen Peter J. Smith, who said everything was all right. When we were ready to pull off the explosion we were to telephone Smith to keep under cover.

"Hockin also said they were preparing to blow up jobs at Detroit, that the Carpenters' Union had put up $100, and the Sheet Metal Workers were willing to do their share. The carpenters, he said, wanted to 'get' a manufacturing company.

Carpenters Contributed, He Says.

McManigal said he was informed that Wachmeister had received the $100 from Hiram Cline, organizer for the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and that Robert G. M. Ross represented the sheet metal workers in connection with proposed explosions at Detroit.

The witness said he and Hockin in July went to Pittsburgh, Penn., where they looked over a job at McKees Rocks, but while there they received a telegram from J. J. McNamara at Indianapolis, saying: "Go no further with present plans. All bets off."

"It made Hockin think that some one was on our trail, and he was greatly worried," said McManigal. An explosion at McKees Rocks occurred two weeks later, but not in connection with this visit.

McManigal was telling of his start for Rochester, Penn., to procure twenty quarts of nitroglycerine for use in an explosion at Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 23 when court adjourned.

Further indications that the Government intends to investigate fully the Pacific Coast explosions were manifest today in the calling of more witnesses from California. Arthur L. Veitch, Deputy District Attorney of Los Angeles County, and Oscar Lawler, who assisted in the Federal Grand Jury investigation at Los Angeles, are to testify.

GOMPERS DENOUNCES DYNAMITE METHODS

Free Workmen Do Not Employ Methods of Slaves, He Declares.

LABOR'S ANNUAL CONVENTION

New York's Commissioner Welcomes Delegates at Rochester as Special Envoy of Gov. Dix.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 11.—The American Federation of Labor opened its thirty-second annual convention here to-day with less than 500 delegates on the convention floor. President Gompers has been quoted since his arrival in the city as saying that no serious conflict of views is likely to take place since conditions in the labor world are comparatively satisfactory.

The big question before the labor world to-day, according to Mr. Gompers, is the extension of the eight-hour day to all industries and the abolition of child labor. It is not unlikely, also, judging from the subjects treated in Mr. Gompers's address, that the Federation may plan to work actively for the initiative, referendum, and recall.

To-night Mr. Gompers was asked to make a statement on the confessions of Ortie McManigal, who is testifying at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial in Indianapolis. He indignantly refused to comment upon the confessions.

"I regard it as an affront to be asked to make any statement on the matter," he said. "I have nothing whatever to say."

No organization of men, President Gompers declared in his address, "represents a greater power for the advancement of humanity along right lines.

"The forms of labor war have been constantly refined. Free workmen do not employ the methods of slaves."

The convention was called to order at 10:30 o'clock by President Gompers. The delegates were welcomed by Chairman Curran of the local committee, Mayor Edgerton on behalf of the city, and John Williams, Commissioner of Labor of New York, for the State. Mr. Williams said he appeared not only as a representative of that branch of government in the State charged with duties in regard to conditions of labor, but also as a special envoy of Gov. Dix.

"This organization of ours is just as you find it," said President Gompers in his address. "We are human. As humans we sometimes err. But our organization is a mighty power for human progress. In all other avocations it will be found that the highest and best is held up as a type, but in the labor movement it is the derelict who is selected as our representative type. Against this we protest. For high motives, for altruism, for the righting of wrongs, for the winning of rights, for human progress, there is no other body in the world, man for man, that will compare with the American Federation of Labor."

Mr. Gompers was frequently interrupted by applause. This was marked when he declared against compulsory arbitration laws, and for the recall of Judges in the States, and the reappointment of Federal Judges every four years.

"We have had enough government by dead men, dead issues, dead principles, and ironclad restrictions," he said. "We must restore to the people the unrestricted power of changing their statutory or organic laws whenever they find the occasion and necessity warrant it."

At the afternoon session a letter from Gov. Dix was read, in which he congratulated the federation on its work and said:

Harburger Enjoys Tammany Venison

Sheriff Julius Harburger dined on a haunch of venison yesterday. He pronounced it fine eating and sent a letter of thanks to Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, who had sent him the haunch through ex-Commissioner Leon C. Weinstock. Mr. Murphy had good luck deer hunting last week. Sheriff Harburger would not disclose where Mr. Murphy shot the deer.

Bazaar in Aid of Lutheran Hospital.

A bazaar will be held from Nov. 18 to 23 in the Twelfth Regiment Armory for the benefit of the Lutheran Hospital of Manhattan, which is non-sectarian. A number of churches of the city are interested in the work of the hospital and are making every effort to insure the success of the entertainment.

WALDO PRAISES POLICE

And Also Defends Appointments for Which He Had Been Criticised.

Police Commissioner Waldo ridiculed the Curran Aldermanic Committee and answered criticisms of his police administration last night when he spoke at Police Headquarters at a special meeting of the Honor Legion, which was organized last Spring.

About 60 of the 350 men who have won membership in the legion by acts of bravery attended the meeting. Commissioner Waldo was cheered when he entered the room accompanied by Chief Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Day of the Lee Avenue Station, Brooklyn. He was introduced by Patrolman John W. Frazer, President of the legion.

"No community in this country, or in the world, has such a fine body of men as the policemen of New York City," he began. "You cannot find any large number of men in which there are not some rascals. Take 11,000 doctors, priests, or clergymen, if you will. When one goes wrong the matter is covered up. But if one policeman goes wrong it is magnified, as you all see. His misdeeds are printed in large headlines in the newspapers, and it is said the whole force is rotten.

"It has been said recently that I appointed murderers and thieves to be policemen. But let that be analyzed. The murderer, as he was called, was a motorman who ran down and killed a policeman by unavoidable accident. One of the thieves was a man who, when he was a small boy, stole an ear of corn. A few days before the Aldermanic Committee drew attention to his case the same man found a diamond necklace and returned it.

"Two or three times when I was charged with appointing criminals it turned out that the men in question had, as children, been arrested for starting bonfires.

Commissioner Waldo said he was in favor of rapid advancement and that he believed in giving the young men in the department every opportunity to show what they were worth and to get ahead.

BRISBANE ADVISES STUDENTS

First Have Something to Say, He Tells School of Journalism.

Arthur Brisbane, editor of The New York Evening Journal, speaking yesterday to the students of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia, told them that their opportunity was the opportunity to "say something," but that this was the most neglected opportunity in the world. The editorial article, Mr. Brisbane pointed out, should teach, attack, praise or defend, and of these things he considered teaching the most important and the most difficult.

"The opportunity of the editorial writer is the greatest opportunity that exists," he said. "For men have developed as men only since language gave to the individual the power to transfer his thought complete to the brain of another. The power to transfer your thought and make it effective is the greatest power, excepting the exceptional power to discover new scientific truth. It is possible for the editorial writer now to talk to at least 5,000,000 every day. That actually happens. With our newspaper machinery, as it exists, it will be possible to talk to the entire reading public every day. No power can be greater than that. The editorial writer's power is the power of suggestion and the power of repetition—very great forces.

"First have something to say. Then say it so that people will see it, read it, understand it, and believe it. These are the four things: the reader must see, he must read, he must understand, he must believe. If you want to write an editorial defending Moses against the attack of Rabbi Hirsch, who denounces some of Moses's teachings, you can put almost any kind of a heading on your editorial.

"If you head it 'Analysis of the Dietetic Teachings of the Ancients,' 90 per cent. of those that 'see' the heading won't read it. You can write the same editorial, head it, 'Be Kind to Poor Moses, He Had No Ice Box,' and 90 per cent. of those that see will read."

CONVICT BECKER PRISONER.

First Gambler in Two Years to be Sentenced in General Sessions.

The first conviction in two years of a gambler was obtained before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday, when Mathew Coyle of 137 East 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., was convicted after the jury had been out half an hour. The defendant was remanded to the Tombs for sentence on Friday.

Coyle was arrested on May 29, 1911, in a raid on a gambling house in West 42d Street made by the Strong Arm Squad under ex-Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, who was later sentenced to death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler. The principal witness against Coyle was Policeman William J. Ferrick, now under indictment for perjury in connection with the Becker case.

Ferrick testified that he entered the gambling house and saw Coyle standing at a table dealing out chips and accepting money in a crap game which was taking place in a corner of the room. later and Coyle was arrested. Coyle said that he owned a laundry in Philadelphia, but was unable to give a satisfactory answer to Assistant District Attorney McCormick's question as to why he was dealing out chips at the crap table.

Profit Sharing

FOR upwards of a quarter of a century Steinway & Sons have been pursuing the policy of sharing their profits with the buying public. The gradual increase of their output and resources, coupled with the concentration of their plants and the employment of the most modern methods of manufacturing, have enabled Steinway & Sons to produce and sell their pianos at a lower rate than ever. A new small grand piano (5 ft. 6 in.) in a mahogany case at the extremely low figure of $750 is the splendid result. Thus the great problem of giving the best article at the most reasonable cost has been successfully solved. Steinway & Sons invite the careful inspection and critical examination by the public of this their latest great achievement in the art of pianoforte building.

National Limousines

are the equal of any Winter car built regardless of price. Assuming that we can demonstrate to you the accuracy of this statement is there any reason then why the National should not be considered before you decide on your limousine car?

If the Poertner Motor Car Co. presented you with a check for $500.00 or $1,000.00 as a present we take it for granted that you would accept it. Yet if you buy a National limousine you will write yourself a check for just that amount. Stop and consider what this means to you.

Examine all the accepted quality cars, make a memorandum of their many refinements and advantages, and after you have seen them all stop in and compare the added features of all the cars you have seen with those of the National.

You're welcome to a copy of our latest catalogue, in which you will find all the information you want concerning both the National "40" limousine and touring car. Write to-day and get it by return mail.

PRINCETON WORKING UNDER HIGH TENSION

Tigers Getting Thoroughly Keyed Up for Yale, Their Last Battle of Year.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—Princeton opened the Yale game week with an hour and a quarter scrimmage and an hour's signal drill to-day, the men remaining on the field until darkness made further practice impossible. "Bill" Tibbott, '08, one of Princeton's greatest half backs, joined the coaches to-day after a month's absence, and will probably remain in the Tiger camp for the remainder of the drills.

Scrimmage to-day was against a combination of seconds, the scrub and a couple of freshmen players, and this team kept the 'Varsity at racing speed. The result was a touchdown for each team, the scrub score coming after the terrific attack of Pete Thompson, the seminary student, and Boland at quarter back. Earle Waller seemed to be the backbone of the Tiger scoring machine and, following the scrub touchdown, saved the day for the first string men with a line buck past Lam Heyniger, the freshman guard, that netted twenty yards and tied the score at 7 to 7.

Goldie Wight, right end, was the only Tiger who laid off this afternoon, Streit taking his place. Andrews returned to the left berth after a few days absence, apparently in fine condition. "Doggy" Trenchard, '97, gathered Wight and the substitute ends around him as he followed the scrimmage pointing out defects in the play. His continual encouragement to the 'Varsity men had much to do with the snap and punch that characterized the entire afternoon's programme.

Princeton is working under high pressure these days, and from the reports that come from the high barriers of Osborne Field the men are standing up well under it. Bluethenthal appeared for work to-day with his face partly covered with adhesive plaster, but from the way he recovered fumbles and led the Tiger line there was little doubt about his physical fitness. "Bush" Dunlap was given a hand in the signal drill at right end, but there is still some question about his appearance against Yale on Saturday.

Princeton's athletic association has obtained the right of way over three immense fields back of the big stands for Saturday, where the spectators that come to the game in automobiles may park their cars. Entrance to these lots may be made from Nassau Street and Murray Place, but no cars may stand on Prospect Street, the home of Princeton's club houses.

Manager Eberstadt has completed the erection of a huge scoreboard, with the names of the players on the Princeton and Yale teams, which will give in detail each play as it occurs. He has placed it at the north end of the gridiron.

YALE'S ELEVEN SELECTED.

Placing of Cooney and Wheeler Completes Team That Will Play Princeton

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—Without scrimmaging for any members of the football squad, Yale to-day opened its week of practice for the Princeton game. The 'Varsity and scrubs were drilled for fully two hours behind closed gates, but the work included no actual football. The squads were coached for positions, "Bo" Olcott, the New York University coach, and "Pa" Corbin manipulating the centres, Carl Flanders and McDevitt handling the guards, Jim Scully the tackles, Harry Vaughan and Tom Shevlin the ends, Arthur Howe and George Adee the quarter backs, Arthur Brides and Fred Murphy the half backs, and Walter Camp and Foster Sanford directing the general play.

Shevlin taught some new shifts, and Sanford worked generally on the defensive, especially for the rush line. Ted Coy paid special attention to Flynn, whose line plunging fills a rôle created by Coy.

More than an hour was spent in signal drill and as much longer in a painstaking way in handling punts, kicking goals from placement, and quick starting, a matter regarded as vital for the success of the line at present.

As forecasted, Russell Cooney went back to his position at left guard by unanimous consent of the coaches, and Nate Wheeler started at quarter back. These two selections complete the team as it will meet the Tigers.

Despite Gallauer's badly battered nose, he was able to play left end to-day, and Avery went to right end. Sheldon and Carter were in unusually fast form as substitutes, and are likely to break into the two big games. The coaches watched carefully for improvement in the guard positions, where there is a scarcity of material. Because Harbison is benched for the season, Pendleton, a tackle, and Read, a centre, have been moved to the guard positions. Read shows remarkable strength on the offense, but on the defense plays the position in centre-rush style.

Pendleton's all-around work is ragged, but he plays high in the line, after the traditional tackle defense. Pendleton is the choice for the position for the final games, however.

Officials for the Yale-Princeton game will be as follows: Referee, William S. Langford, Trinity College; umpire, Niel Snow, University of Michigan; linesman, H. M. Nelly, West Point.

CONFIDENCE AT PENN.

Hope Michigan Defeat Will Be Followed by Victory Over Indians.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Confidence in the Pennsylvania team has been restored in the ranks of the Red and Blue rooters. The result of the Michigan game shows the Quakers in the best light, and a victory over the Indians on Saturday is now looked for. The practice to-day showed the players to be in good physical condition, and the marked improvement in the play of the eleven is expected to be maintained during the remainder of the season.

With Penn playing sensational football and the fact that the Indians also play a dazzling sort of game, Saturday's match is expected to present all the spectacular features that have made the game more popular this Fall than ever before in the history of college football.

Last Saturday, against the Army, a team that Yale was able to defeat by only one touchdown, Thorpe made 15 points by his runs, his great dodging, his use of the straight arm and his wonderful speed. He is the most talked-of athlete in America to-day, and Coach Warner counts on him to bring victory to Carlisle over Penn next Saturday.

The Indians are great favorites in this city, and they always put up a spectacular game, and they generally put up their best game of the season against Pennsylvania. Coach Warner has been bringing them on with the idea in view of winning against Penn, and he has saved a few trick plays that he says will open Penn's eyes to the possibilities of the new game.

Would Break Up Forward Passing.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 11.—Though the need of hard work was clearly indicated by the poor showing of the Naval Academy football team against Bucknell on Saturday, the squad was not on the field until 5 o'clock, and only a short practice was possible before darkness set in. Most of the time was devoted to practice in breaking up various kinds of forward pass plays to which the midshipmen have shown themselves easy victims this season. The scrubs were made to try plays which had proved pitfalls for the midshipmen and the regulars were coached in changing their formations in such a way as met the different kinds of plays. The general poor work of the team on Saturday has left the coaches in something of a quandary as to the make-up of the back field. It is likely, however, that the four men will be picked from Rodes, Ingram, Failing, Harrison, Leonard, and Nichols, who were used during the practice this afternoon.

LONG DRILL AT HARVARD.

Haughton Perfecting Team for Dartmouth and Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11.—All football hands at Harvard reported for to-day's practice in the Stadium. Coach Haughton told the men that there would be only half a dozen more practice scrimmages this year, and impressed on them that there was a world of work to be done for the Dartmouth and Yale games. Dartmouth's big scores against Amherst and Cornell since it played the Tigers have given the Harvard men considerable concern. To-day, however, the work was entirely on the Crimson's own attack. There was no hard scrimmage, but the players were on the field for two hours and working on plays for every minute.

The 'Varsity was made up as it will be in the coming game, and played against the substitutes, who were arranged as in the early periods of the Vanderbilt game.

Capt. Wendell was out again and was not favored. He was in the plays with H. Hardwick and Brickley, except when he occasionally dropped back to watch the working out of the new offensive tactics that are being developed. Bradlee was in Wendell's place when the Harvard Captain was absent, and there was no perceptible difference in the speed of the plays.

The rush line again was in regular formation, except that Driscoll took part in most of the drill. Trumbull, however, has satisfied the trainers that he is all right, and there is no anxiety felt for him. He will play against both Dartmouth and Yale unless he is injured again. H. Frothingham, who did so well against Vanderbilt in Harvard's back field, was promoted ahead of Bettel in the 'Varsity squad, and will follow Bradley into the 'Varsity back field if substitutes are needed in either of the coming big games.

Harvard looks for a very hard game against Dartmouth, which is reported as having developed much more steam than it showed in the game against Princeton two weeks ago. Willettes did some good punting to-day, and so did Felton. The 'Varsity plays were carefully worked out, the regulars holding the ball much of the time. There was no attempt to score from the scrimmages, but Brickley had a chance to make two shots at the substitutes' goal posts by drop kicking, and both of his attempts for field goals were successful.

Dan Knowlton, one of the 'Varsity tackles in 1905, joined the coaching staff this afternoon. Owing to Capt. Hurley's absence that year Knowlton was Harvard's leader in the Yale game. He was not a heavy man, but very aggressive, and the type of player that should be able to give much valuable coaching to both Storer and Hitchcock.

CORNELL'S NEW TASKS.

Coach Sharpe Shaping Ithacans for Battles with Michigan and Pennsy.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—With the Michigan and Pennsylvania games coming as the last two and most important games on the schedule, the Cornell football coaches took up their task this afternoon with renewed courage because of the team's fighting qualities in three periods of the Dartmouth game and the general improvement on the defense that contest brought forth. Expecting an overwhelming walloping at the hands of the Green, the coaches were immensely pleased when the team held the big Hanover men down to three touchdowns, and were ready to-day to build up the offense for the two big games of the season.

Cornell would rather beat Pennsylvania than win every other game on her schedule, and, as Coach Sharpe saw the Quakers play Michigan, he came back with plans all laid for drilling the team for its games with these two teams. At the conference this afternoon he mapped out the new plays to be used, and gave the team a snappy talk on just what they would have to do within the next two and a half weeks.

No outdoor practice was held this afternoon, because the players were late in getting out.

Cornell needs a leader badly, and from present indications Cornell is to have her leader in the last two games of the year. Coach Sharpe said to-day he thought Eddie Butler, Captain of the team, who played only three games this Fall, would be at the head of the eleven in the Michigan game. Butler is rapidly recovering from his injuries, and expects to be able to play this week. O'Connor was not a success as a leader last week, because he had been running the team for only a few days and was not quick enough with the signals nor accurate enough with the forward pass to prove effective. O'Connor and Champaign were both injured in the game with Dartmouth, but neither of them was so badly hurt as at first thought, and they will be able to get back into the line-up by the end of the week. Eyrich and Fritz, who did not play on Saturday, are nearly ready to start in practice again, while the general condition of the rest of the team is good.

The coaches will be able to have the whole squad out for practice at 3 o'clock in the afternoon three days in each of the remaining weeks.

Indians Keen for More Fighting.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 11.—Owing to the omission of signal practice of the new Indian plays and scrimmage from this afternoon's drill on the Carlisle Indian athletic field, secret practice did not begin here to-day. It is seldom, however, that such eagerness has been shown among the Redskins in their practice period. They are going after Pennsylvania's scalp on Saturday with more than their usual determination. Every man on the Indian team realizes that the Quakers have reached their stride.

Spectators at the Pennsylvania-Indian game on Saturday will surely see a marvelous performance from what now promises not only the greatest Indian eleven, but one of the most spectacular aggregations of football players, especially in the back field, ever assembled.

Capt. Jim Thorpe this afternoon aided in coaching, taking charge of the back field candidates. Lone Star gave individual instructions in the correction of faults to line players. Not one Indian was on the hospital list. The Redskins jumped into their work to-day, showing almost exhilarative enthusiasm at the prospects of the week's preparation for the Pennsylvania game. An onlooker at practice familiar with the Redskins and a football authority prophesied that the Indians would produce at Philadelphia, barring accidents, the most perfect brand of football ever seen in America.

Dartmouth Lacking in Stability.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—The Dartmouth football squad is preparing for Harvard on Saturday, swinging into the last lap of the football season this afternoon, with the final outcome still a matter of much speculation. Cornell was downed by a safe score, but the work of the team, especially during the second half, did not measure up to the satisfaction of the coaches. The team has not yet acquired a staying power of championship quality. However, a string of valuable substitutes are being developed. Twenty-three men were used Saturday, and Dartmouth is putting the edge on a well balanced aggregation.

This afternoon's work was light. Although no one was injured in the Cornell contest everybdy was rather tired after the long trip.

Barends and Englehorn practiced place kicks in scrimmage and Hogsett tried his foot at drop kicking. The coaches are planning to outpunt Brinkley if such a style of play seems advisable.

Need Heer, '06, Dr. O'Connor, '02, who coached the 1907 team, which defeated Harvard, 11 to 0, and Charlie Boyle, '00, joined the coaching staff to-day.

Fordham to Spring New Plays.

Familiarity with Fordham's style of game on the part of Stevens Institute, gained through the former contest, made a change in the Bronxonians' play necessary, and yesterday Coach Thorpe instructed the eleven in several new and novel formations. The day's practice was remarkable for the absence of more than half the squad, scarcely a sufficient number of players appearing on Fordham Field to make up a full team. The coaches worked those that did appear until dusk and predicted surprises for the Hoboken collegians on Saturday. Simonetti is showing up very well at left guard and probably has that position cinched for the season, as it is rumored that Wosty Meehan will not return to college. His father's recent death has necessitated the maroon's star punter and biggest lineman giving his attention to business. To-day the new plays will be tried on the High School of Commerce eleven, which comes up to the Bronx for a practice game.

Poly Prep. to Play Erasmus.

Poly Prep and Erasmus Hall will play their annual football game Thanksgiving Day on Hawthorne Field, Flatbush. The contest promises to be one of the most interesting of the metropolitan schoolboy season, and plans are being made to accommodate a big crowd of followers of both schools. The friendly rivalry of the two institutions has resulted in making this annual event an important one, not only from a playing standpoint, but also socially.

HOPPE FIRST VICTOR IN 18.2 BILLIARDS

Champion's Play Erratic in the World's Title Match with Cline at Hotel Astor.

Willie Hoppe, the title holder, was the winner of the first game decided in the world's championship 18.2 balkline billiard tournament, which began last night in the belvidere of the Hotel Astor. He tallied the necessary 500 points while his opponent, Harry P. Cline scored only 190. The winner's average was mediocre, being 11 16-44, while the loser had to be content with a trifle over 4.

Hoppe's best high run of 111 was the one redeeming feature of the match, both players being victims of miscues caused by particles of leafage from the arbor over head, which seemingly had all the elements of soapstone in its make-up, so frequent were the absolute misses of both balls by each. A similar condition prevailed during the progress of the Slosson-Morningstar contest, with the result that all four players were disgusted with the handicap, which will be remedied before to-night's events take place.

A representative crowd of billiard lovers gathered to witness the contests. A distinct innovation, consisting of a series of runways, permitting the spectators to go from one match to the other, met with the approbation of those who had any inclination to witness parts of both matches. Two sets of tier seats flank the ends of the tables and afford capital viewpoints.

The tournament has engaged the competitive attentions of eight of the greatest masters of the cue in the world, as those, aside from the men who played last night, are Calvin Demarest and George F. Sutton, former champions at this style of play; Al Taylor of Milwaukee, and Koji Yamada, a Japanese, who has shown himself to be a wonder in every variety of play possible at 18.2.

The champion Hoppe was plainly not himself when he opened his match with Cline. In the first place, he missed his opening shot and failed on the next two succeeding times at the table. Up to his fifth inning there was that seeming indecision of stroke which marked his play early in the year, but as the contest went on he began to display all of his old-time nonchalance and dash, going after his next shot almost before the spheres had become settled. This phase of his work was particularly noticeable during his best run of 111, which was stopped when he made a foul.

Cline failed to execute in the manner which he has shown in his preliminary work, and was plainly chagrined midway during the game by frequent miscues. Hoppe wanted to have the table cleaned, but Cline demurred, and later on the latter was willing to have the droppings from fern leaves cleared off, but he failed to ask his opponent's permission.

After winning the bank Hoppe failed to make his opening shot, a like fate attending his second turn at table, when he fell down on a comparatively easy cushion carrom. In his third essay a little bad luck argued against his counting, when, after a long draw off the side rail in the middle of the table he found a gap behind the object sphere which was located on the end rail.

Cline was the first to tally a solitary button, being all he obtained in his second inning. In the third he gathered ten, which the champion more than duplicated when, still lacking his dashing style, he netted 17.

Hoppe's fifth time "at the bat" witnessed his accumulation of 84, which set him by the first hundred mark. There was nothing out of the ordinary in his billiards until he had rolled 41, when the spheres lined up on him and he was compelled to resort to a massé, which was a beauty.

Soon after this he was compelled, when the spheres temporarily escaped his control, to make "round the table" drives. After a line-up the balls appearing to roll badly—he made a two-cushion bank into the corner and out for perfect contact. His seventy-fourth tally was a beautiful three-cushion drive. After rolling eighty-four, he came to a stop, the balls lined up and forcing the playing of a bank, which he missed.

Cline's adherents were dismayed when he made a miscue, and left the layout in such shape that his opponent coaxed out forty-four, most of which were made in rapid fire order in the upper centre. Cline stopped after gathering four, and the champion pounded out twenty-one, slipping up on an easy draw. Careless play marked Hoppe's efforts in his eighth and ninth innings, which netted him but five. Succeeding these he rolled twenty, the tenth shot of which was a daring kiss to the side rail, meeting the red ball on the way back.

It was in Hoppe's eleventh turn at table that he struck his real pace, racing on unerringly for a total of 111, which brought him two points over the 300 mark. His onward march was checked by a foul on his next shot, the spheres being very close in position with the cue ball so near the red as to warrant the champion's touching the latter with his cue in drawing it away from the shot.

There was nothing out of the ordinary in this run until the champion had rounded the 200 mark—he had started his run at 191—when he made a slashing masse which needed all the English he could give his cue ball. For his thirty-second point he was compelled to play round the table for three cushions. His followers almost had heart failure at his fortieth shot, which was all but kissed out. He rounded the half hundred mark with a splendidly executed masse, and for his eighty-fifth he showed a deftly played two cushion which brought the balls well together. A nice balk-line was seen from this point on to his foul, with close play the rule. From this stage on to the end, however, with the possible exception of the final inning, in which he tallied 49 for his total of 500, the most commonplace billiards was the rule. The summary:

Hoppe—0 0 0 17 84 44 21 2 3 20 111 5 0 5 5 1 10 7 13 0 2 2 23 1 1 0 2 0 3 2 0 13 20 0 0 3 8 0 3 0 1 1 18 49. Total—500.

Cline—0 1 10 1 0 4 11 11 1 0 7 20 0 1 25 0 2 1 6 9 1 11 0 5 0 1 8 24 6 0 0 0 1 2 2 1 3 0 2 1 0 12 0. Total—190.

High runs—Hoppe, 111, 84, 49; Cline, 25, 24, 20. Averages—Hoppe, 11 16-44; Cline, 4 18-43. Referee—Albert G. Cutler.

George Slosson and Ora Morningstar had a long-drawn-out battle, which was won by the latter, 500 to 474, and which was in progress long after the termination of the Hoppe-Cline match. Morningstar showed the way to the veteran "Student" for the first dozen innings, at which stage the strings were: Morningstar, 122; Slosson, 88.

The Student then asserted himself with a bevy of 140, gained by capital all-around billiards, some of the best shots of the run being masses. Slosson showed his ambidexterity by making a number of clever shots with either hand, eventually slipping up on the best run of the series thus far on a single cushion try.

Nothing daunted, Morningstar pulled himself together and came back with 69 in his share of the inning, the thirteenth. Forty-three points in his next essay again sent him into the lead, which he soon lost when the Student netted 52 and 53 in his sixteenth and eighteenth innings, apparently putting himself out of harm's way. Mediocre play by Slosson, however, for the next nine innings warranted Morningstar in getting within a point of the Student when they had finished their twenty-ninth inning, with the score 385 to 384.

Slosson tallied 19 in his twenty-eighth, but it had all the appearance of hard billiards. Morningstar, then contributed by virtue of good all around play his best tally of the night with 69 for a total of 453. He eventually got up to 492, with Slosson at 447. The latter came along with 27, stopping on a very hard massé in which he just failed of contact. In what proved his final inning, Morningstar tallied his required 8, and beat his man 500 to 474. The summary:

Slosson—2 12 0 9 31 10 0 0 1 2 21 0 140 1 1 12 4 53 5 0 0 1 0 6 6 0 26 19 13 8 7 12 3 27—474.

Morningstar—32 6 32 0 1 0 24 0 22 2 2 1 67 43 9 0 10 55 2 38 0 0 1 0 8 33 60 0 14 23 0 28—500.

High runs—Slosson, 140 53 52. Morningstar, 69 67 43. Averages—Morningstar, 14 24-34; Slosson, 13 32-34. Referee—Thomas Gallagher.

Class C Billiards in Harlem.

Last night marked the opening of the Class C amateur 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, with twenty-eight participants. It is only open for players that average no more than one or two points, and one defeat makes a player ineligible for further participation. The winner will be presented with a silver loving cup, which he will be called upon to defend successfully three times before it becomes his permanent property.

In the first game last night William Mason and D. Nathan were the contestants, the former winning after thirty innings, by the score of 50 to 37. The winner made a high run of ten points and averaged 1 2-3. Charles Abrams defeated L. Kreiseman in the second contest by the score of 50 to 31, in thirty-three innings. Abrams averaged 1 17-33 and made a high run of nine points.

N. Y. A. C. WANTS CHANGE.

Many Members Dissatisfied with Way Their Officers Are Selected.

At the meeting of the Board of Governors of the New York A. C. to-night a petition will be presented asking for the holding of a special meeting of the club in order to decide for or against the enforcement of the present article in the constitution relative to the Nominating Committee.

Fifty members, headed by W. E. McCready and John Byrne, have signed the petition, with the purpose in view of taking a vote on the proposition to ballot for the members of the Nominating Committee, instead of having them appointed by the Board of Governors, as the rules now require.

This action is in anticipation of the annual election of the Winged Foot organization, which is to be held Jan. 14, 1913, and is said to be the first gun in the battle against the present administration, which, according to a number of men in the organization, has been brewing for several months.

The names of the members of the Nominating Committee must be posted not later than the second Tuesday in December, and this committee must consist of five members, no one of whom shall be a member of the Board of Governors.

It has been stated that the present administration has no fears for the antagonism which has been shown. They feel that their action in suspending a number of the men while they were absent at the Olympic games will be upheld at the next election, and that the next yearly report will show a large financial improvement over that of recent years.

TIPPERARY MEN'S CHARGES.

Make Affidavit That Casey Asked for Money in Lieu of a Prize at Games.

It was learned yesterday that the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Aethletic Union is investigating the competition of Tom Collins and J. J. McNamara, both of the Irish-American Athletic Club, at the Mayo Men's games on Sunday last. John J. Daly of the same club was also to have competed, but he failed to start in a race which was advertised as being for the championship of Mayo.

The sports had received no sanction from the Metropolitan Association, A. A. U., and according to Collins were run under Irish Counties Union rules, which are distinctly at variance with the conditions which should obtain when men registered with the Amateur Athletic Union are concerned.

As far as the race being for the Mayo title was concerned, that phase of the contest is regarded lightly, as Daly is a Galway man, while Collins and McNamara are said to have originally come from Tyrone and Clare, respectively.

It was stated yesterday on very good authority that both Collins and McNamara have suspended themselves from further competitions, as they violated that section of the Amateur Athletic Union rules which provides that the Registration Committee has the right to impose penalties upon athletes who compete or exhibit at unsanctioned meets.

The Registration Committee is in receipt of an affidavit from members of the Tipperary Association, in which they affirm that Vic Casey of the New York Athletic Club asked for money in lieu of the prize offered him at the Tipperary games, which was the medium of a recent investigation, and in which it was shown that the prizes awarded were designated by certain of the winners as "junk," the first trophy having been shown to be valued at $3.19 retail.

SCRATCH MEN LEAD IN RUN.

Stanwood and Ives Placed in Two-Mile Run at West Side.

R. G. Stanwood and H. Ives, both starting from the scratch mark, finished first and second, respectively, last night in the two-mile handicap, which featured the bi-monthly games of the West Side Y. M. C. A. held on the gymnasium track. The two back markers conceded handicaps ranging up to 180 yards, and after running abreast for one and one-half miles overhauled the field, finishing in the order named after a brilliant sprint. J. Breen, who started from the 140-yard mark, accounted for third place. The winner's time was 10 minutes 38 seconds.

From a field of fourteen starters C. True, with a handicap of nine yards, romped home the winner in the special event at 600 yards. True ran a good race, and after getting up with J. Franklin, who led the way for the greater part of the distance from the 15-yard mark, followed in his stride until within 35 yards from home, when he uncorked a sprint, winning by three yards.

A. Enroth won the 440-yard novice in easy fashion, leading the way throughout and winning with plenty to spare after he shook off the rest of the field in the last lap.

In the 300-yard dash E. Grant finished first from the five-yard mark, with J. Summermater second and J. Schraff third. The summaries:

20-Yard Dash, Scratch.—Won by C. True; A. Collyer, second; H. Ives, third. Time—0:03.

300-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by E. Grant, (5 yards;) J. Summermater, (14 yards,) second; J. Schraff, (9 yards,) third. Time—0:36.

440-Yard Run, Novice.—Won by A. Enroth; J. Trowern, second; E. Filld, third. Time—0:58.

600-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by C. True, (9 yards;) A. Dolber, (5 yards,) second; J. Franklin, (15 yards,) third. Time—1:20 4-5.

Two-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by R. G. Stanwood, (scratch;) H. Ives, (scratch,) second; J. Breen, (140 yards,) third. Time—10:38.

CHAMPION IS ACCUSED.

H. P. Drew, Negro Sprinter, Charged with Professionalism by Townsman.

James E. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, yesterday received the following communication from W. J. Kane of Springfield, Mass., which casts reflections upon the amateur standing of Howard P. Drew, the 100-yard sprint running champion of America. The letter has been turned over to Frank Facey of the New England Amateur Athletic Union Registration Committee for action. Drew was one of the team of athletes who represented the United States at the Olympic games. He qualified for final honors in the 100-meter race and was fancied as the winner until he broke down just prior to the event. The letter follows:

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 10, 1912.

Secretary of the A. A. U., New York.

Dear Sir: Howard P. Drew of Springfield High School, champion 100-yard runner of America, is going to play professional football with the Atlanta Boat Club. He is playing with professionals and is receiving money, which an amateur is not supposed to do.

Hobbie Johnson, the Springfield High School basket ball player, is also going to play. Hoping you will look into this affair, I remain,

W. J. KANE.

Morningside A. C. Invitation Run.

The Morningside A. C. has invited all athletes competing in the Yonkers marathon race Thanksgiving Day to take part in a special invitation fifteen-mile road run Sunday. The race will be a preliminary to the Yonkers event and will start from the Morningside clubhouse, 400 West 126th Street, at 3 P. M. Automobiles will be placed at the disposal of the runners. The weekly run of the club will be held after the start of the invitation event.

Hare and Hounds on Bicycles.

The Century Road Club of America will hold its annual "hare and hound" chase on bicycles at Manhasset, L. I., on next Sunday. The course will be over a circuitous route of twelve miles over the hills and dales and across the streams and over barbed wire fences. There will be five "hares" with ten minutes' start, each carrying a bag of colored paper, who will lay the trail for the hounds, comprising the balance of the club to follow. The riders will meet at Flushing, the riders from New York starting from Astoria Ferry and those from Brooklyn starting from Prospect Park Plaza.

Drew in Regimental Games.

The Fall games of the Twenty-third Regiment of Brooklyn will be contested next Saturday evening in the armory at Bedford and Atlantic Avenues. Several attractive features have been arranged, among them the appearance in a special open 100-yard dash of Howard P. Drew, the sensational colored boy from the Springfield High School, who won the 70-yard dash from scratch at the games of the St. Agnes A. C. last Saturday evening. Drew will concede handicaps up to five yards to a field made up of some of the best sprinters in the metropolitan district. Another attractive race will be the two-mile bicycle race handicap in which a score of the best local riders will start.

WELSH REGAINS LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

Matt Wells Loses Championship of Great Britain by Only a Small Margin.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Freddy Welsh, the English lightweight, regained his title of lightweight champion of Great Britain in a twenty-round fight to-night with Matt Wells, the British titleholder. The fight went the full distance, Welsh winning on points.

A large crowd gathered in the National Sporting Club, where the contest was held, and witnessed a clever bout, in which honors were fairly even throughout. Welsh was a slight favorite in the betting. There was some holding, and the referee several times ordered the men to box cleanly.

In the early rounds Welsh had slightly the better of it, Wells's work being a little ragged. Both tried desperately in the final rounds to score a knockout. At the end of the twentieth Welsh's right eye was nearly closed, but the referee considered that he had done the better fighting.

LORE WINS ALL THE WAY.

Danny Ridge, However, Lands Some Telling Blows on His Opponent.

Johnny Lore, the west side lightweight, who has been a steady challenger of Ad. Wolgast for many weeks, added another victory to his rapidly growing list at the Olympic A. C. of Harlem last night, when he clashed with Danny Ridge of the east side. Ridge landed several hard punches which jarred the west sider, but his inexperience counted against him, and Lore had the better of practically every round. Ridge was badly marked at the close of the bout.

Both boys weighed in at the lightweight figure, 133 pounds, but Lore was slightly taller than Ridge, and he had a longer reach. He also had the benefit of ring experience. Ridge is 17 years old, and has been earning a strong reputation on the east side by his steady run of victories. Last night he was pitted against the best boxer that he has yet faced, and the assignment proved a bit too much for him. Everything considered, however, he put up a most commendable battle, although he was decisively beaten.

In the seventh round Ridge made a flash that had the crowd on its feet. He tore after Lore with head down and drove in a series of terrific punches to the west sider's head and stomach. Lore retained his coolness during the rapid fire, and then resumed his work of keeping Ridge on the defensive. In the closing rounds the east sider resorted many times to clinching to save himself from punishment.

The six-round semi-final brought together Joe Shears of England and Joe Mooney of Harlem. This bout was as exciting as the one which followed, both boys showing plenty of aggressiveness all the way. First one held the lead, then the other went ahead, and at the finish Mooney was entitled to the honors, though by a small margin. His boxing was superior to that of the more rugged and aggressive Englishman.

EMPIRE A. C. TO REOPEN.

Palzer Probably Will Be a Contestant in First Night's Card.

The Empire A. C., which held forth last Winter at the Manhattan Casino, 155th Street and Eighth Avenue, will be reopened about Dec. 1, and be a strong bidder for the big bouts to be staged in New York during the next few months. The club will again be under the management of Ed and Jess McMahon, who conducted the St. Nicholas A. C. during the Summer months and staged many important bouts.

Al Palzer, candidate for the world's heavyweight championship, has been signed as one of the principals in the opening show, but his opponent has not yet been selected. The management wants to get the best heavyweight obtainable. There are several candidates for the place, but no selection has been made.

Ed McMahon, one of the promoters of the club, declared last night that he did not plan to put on regular weekly shows, but would gladly do so if suitable matches could be made. It is planned to put on only bouts of importance. Another feature of the Empire A. C. will be the return to the old form of one ten-round star bout, a six-round semi-final, and three or four four-round preliminaries. It was at this club that the first of the all-star shows of three ten-round bouts were staged last Winter, but the promoters are falling back to the old system, and the Empire A. C. will join the others.

With the closing of the Garden A. C. and the St. Nicholas A. C., where all the big bouts of the past six months were held, the scene of important bouts shifts to three other clubs, all recently reopened—the Empire A. C., the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club, and the Fairmont A. C.

Day of Rest for Lehigh Victors.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 11.—A complete rest to-day was the reward for Lehigh's 'Varsity football team for their victory over the undefeated Swarthmore team on Saturday. The outcome of that struggle has boosted Lehigh's stock considerably and put the brown and white away up in the race for position in the State standing. While the outcome of the game with the garnet was most satisfactory and the men rested ot-day, to-morrow will find the men hard at work again for the struggle with Muhlenberg. All of the Lehigh men came out of the Swarthmore game without serious injuries. McCaffrey and Capt. Pazzetti were badly bruised, but will be all right in a day or two.

Smith and Queal as Trainers.

Harry Smith, National ten-mile champion, and Billy Queal, the professional distance runner from Alexandria Bay, have been training the cross-country team of DeWitt Clinton High School during the last week for the coming cross-country championship of the high schools of the P. S. A. L. The two well-known athletes will continue work with the schoolboy harriers until within a few days of the run, which will take place on the new Van Cortlandt Park course on Dec. 7. The run was originally planned for the Celtic Park course, but when the officials of the Winged Fist organization refused the use of their park to the schoolboys the committee immediately obtained permission from the park authorities for the new course.

Smith Re-elected Commodore at 82.

G. Waldo Smith, who was yesterday re-elected Commodore of the Bayside Yacht Club, is the oldest yachtsman on Long Island. Mr. Smith, who has been Commodore of the club since it was organized about eight years ago, is 82 years old, and he is still the enthusiastic yachtsman he was sixty years ago. The other officers elected by the club were: Vice Commodore—Elmer G. Story; Rear Commodore—Archibald Nesbett; Treasurer—Frederic Floyd Jones; Secretary—William H. Johns; Measurer—Joseph Hill; Board of Governors—William Teller, James Nash Webb, C. William Bergen, and Russell A. Field. The club's annual dinner will be held at the Hotel McAlpin on Saturday evening, Jan. 25.

VAN CORTLANDT FIELD.

Arrangements Under Way for Building an Athletic Cinder Track.

That Van Cortlandt Park, New York's biggest playground and the scene on any fine day of more varieties of competitive sport than on any other ground in the greater city, will soon have an athletic field and cinder track within its limits has almost been definitely decided upon.

Park Commissioner Thomas J. Higgins of the Bronx is in thorough accord with the plan, and so expressed himself to James E. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, during the progress of the Metropolitan cross-country championship last Saturday.

The Commissioner is very much in harmony with the proposition to improve tho scope of the park for such a purpose, which is in line with his friendliness for athletics, as it was mainly through his offices that the great playground has been made the contest ground for the titular events for the hill and dale experts.

The section tentatively selected is situated just off Broadway, between 239th and 242d Streets. At present it is a field of a swampy nature, with all that is needed to make it an ideal spot for the purpose being a little filling in. The grading on the ground just back of it has very nearly been completed. The intention is to have a quarter-mile ellipse, with all the needed adjuncts for a perfectly equipped athletic plant, which will be open to the public for general track and field use.

A spacious stand, fashioned very much after the style of those built at Curtis Field, Staten Island, and Crotona Field, in the Bronx, is projected. After a few details have been looked into, the plans for the furtherance of the idea will be submitted to the Board of Estimate for approval.

Six years ago plans were drawn for a similarly equipped athletic field, which had within its inclosure, aside from the running track, a swimming tank, certain gymnastic apparatus, &c. This was to have been situated on one of the fields to the north of the spot now selected, but the plan was allowed to go by the board and was almost forgotten until Commissioner Higgins took charge.

NEW JUDGE FOR HORSE SHOW

Robert Graham to Take Place of Joseph E. Widener, Who Is Ill.

Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia, who has been recently operated on for appendicitis, has been forbidden by his physicians to act as judge in the points-in-harness, pony tandems, four-in-hands, and pony-breeding classes at the National Horse Show, which opens Saturday in Madison Square Garden. Mr. Widener has judged in these classes in the Garden since 1904, and he is one of the most prominent amateur whips in the United States.

The classes Mr. Widener was to judge will be taken by Robert Graham of North Toronto, Ontario. He is an exhibitor of Clydesdales, and in 1909 judged the Percherons at the Garden. He is an all-around judge for all types of heavy harness and driving ponies.

Capt. P. A. Kenna, V. C., D. S. O., and Lieut. R. H. Stewart Richardson of the trio of English officers who arrived on Sunday for the horse show, are at Lakewood as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, at Georgian Court. Capt. Mervyan Crawshay, Fifth Dragoon Guards, and Mrs. Crawshay are at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The Belgian officers, Capt. Baron de Blonmert, Lieut. E. van Dooren, and Lieut. Delvoie, are due on the Ryndam to-day. Baron Gino Di Morpurgo of Rome, Italy, one of the judges in the classes for harness horses, appointments, tandems, and four-in-hands, is expected on the steamer France, due Friday.

Early Run of Hunting Pack.

Special to The New York Times.

LOCUST VALLEY, L. I., Nov. 11.—A "Bye Day" afforded an extra session of sport for the Meadow Brook fox hunting enthusiasts this morning. The hounds met at Piping Rock field, at 6:30 o'clock, and found immediately. They ran through the Black woods, where they seemed to strike a slow trail. Then the fox doubled and was tracked right back to the starting point, but was lost in the woods. Those who were out included Miss Eugenia May Ladenburg, and Mrs. Ralph N. Ellis, Mrs. Paul D. Cravath, Mrs. Harry Nicholas, and J. A. Rollins. Mrs. Emily Ladenburg and her friends are finding some good sport in paper chasing. They held a small chase yesterday and on Wednesday a chase is scheduled from the gate of "The Oasis," Mrs. Ladenburg's country place at Westbury.

Lipton Still Challenging.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 11.—Sir Thomas Lipton announced here to-day that he would build two challengers for the America's Cup, if the New York Yacht Club amends the rules so as to allow him to build on this side of the ocean. Previously he offered to build one boat. Two boats, it is estimated, would cost $1,000,000.

Xavier A. C. to Hold Reception.

The Xavier Athletic Club will hold its Twenty-fourth annual entertainment and reception at Terrace Garden Monday evening, Nov. 18. The entertainment this year will be in the form of a minstrel show, which will be rendered by the Xavier Minstrels. A number of the prominent athletes of the club will act as officials, while many of the metropolitan champions have been inivted and expect to attend.

George B. Post, Jr.'s, Beagle Wins.

SHADWELL, Va., Nov. 11.—The National Beagle Club of America held its sixth annual bench show here to-day. Polly, an imported bitch, owned by George B. Post, Jr., of New York, won the championship cup for the best single hound. Watchman, also from the Post kennels, was adjudged the best dog.

Notes of the Golfers.

To celebrate a highly successful season on the links, members of the Montclair Golf Club will hold an informal dinner at their clubhouse next Saturday night. At the same time the prizes won in competitions lasting throughout the season will be presented to the winners.

Work has been begun on the building of the new fourth punchbowl green opposite the clubhouse and on the hillside. This is looked upon as the most important change that has been made in some time. The green when finished will be entirely surrounded by traps.

In keeping with a host of changes on other courses the Nassau Country Club will add a few bunkers and enlarge the home green to about twice its present size. The turf there is difficult to handle, which may make it necessary to entirely reconstruct the green. Down at Fox Hills considerable improvement will be made in the fairway over the Winter.

IRISH-AMERICANS IN HOCKEY.

Become Members of Amateur League, Succeeding Wanderers.

The Irish-American Athletic Club will be represented in the Amateur Hockey League this season, taking the place of the Wanderers. This was decided at a recent meeting of the Hockey League. The Irish-American Club for several seasons has been trying to gain admittance to the league, but has been unsuccessful until this season.

The withdrawal of the Wanderers last season has given the Irish-American Club their chance, and they will put a team in the future on the ice which they believe will sustain their athletic standard.

Montrose W. Houck and Gus Hornfeck, who represent the Wanderers on the Executive Board of the Amateur Hockey League, will give waivers on the services of such of the Wanderers' former players who were not involved in the trouble last Spring which resulted in the expulsion of several famous stick wielders. The probabilities are that a few of these will don the green-and-gold uniform of the Irish club and play under the banner of the Winged Fist.

James C. O'Brien, who has been active in forming the new team and will act as coach and manager, is one of the oldest and most experienced players in the United States and an excellent judge of players. He has been successful in getting together a fair team to begin practice, including several Canadians who have never played here, but he says there is room for a few more. Aspiring puck chasers who want to try for a place on the team will find Manager O'Brien at the St. Nicholas Rink every evening.

TINKER IS STILL A CUB.

Cincinnati's Deal for Chicago Shortstop Strikes a Snag.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Shortstop "Joe" Tinker of the Chicago Nationals is tonight unable to say what the outcome of his efforts to join the Cincinnati Nationals as manager will be.

Early to-day, when Manager John J. Evers of the Chicago Club arrived in Chicago, the report was current that with the settlement of a few minor details Tinker would be released to Cincinnati, but before Tinker had time to learn when the first train left for Cincinnati the word came that he still was a member of the Chicago team and might remain one for some time. After that Charles W. Murphy, President of the club; Manager Evers and Tinker went into conference.

"What is the status of the Tinker case?" Murphy was asked at the close of the conference.

"Superlative typographical hysteria," he replied.

Translated, it is explained that means Tinker is not yet a manager. Evers has the case under consideration. He wants players in exchange for Tinker.

Minor Leaguers' Annual Meeting.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Two hundred men identified with both major and minor leagues left Chicago to-night for Milwaukee to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which opens there to-morrow. The Board of Arbitration, which has been in session here deciding disputed cases, finished its work to-night. Discussions on salary limits and reclassifications of leagues will be the pricipal questions for settlement at the Milwaukee convention. Nashville, Tenn.; Omaha, Neb., and Columbus, Ohio, are trying to get the meeting of the association in 1913.

Athletics Win by a 7 to 4 Score.

HAVANA, Nov. 11.—The Philadelphia Americans defeated the Almendares baseball team here to-day by a score of 7 to 4.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, NOV. 12, 1912.

PROMPT REVISION OF THE TARIFF.

The first referendum on the question of an extra session of Congress to revise the tariff was held on Nov. 5, when the people gave a vote of confidence to a party and a candidate virtually pledged to immediate reduction of the taxes imposed by the tariff law where they are excessive, unnecessary, and burdensome. Since the election a second referendum has been held through the newspapers, which have obtained and published opinions from many members of Congress, including the Democratic leaders in that body, from business men of both parties, and from many other men who speak with some authority upon public affairs. There is a striking unanimity of opinion in favor of prompt action.

The Democratic Party would make but a poor use of its new power should it postpone for more than a year the work of revising the tariff, which its chief men throughout the campaign insisted should be taken up at the earliest moment. It would be unjust to the party, which expects prompt revision, it would be a denial of justice to the country's consumers for whom relief cannot come too soon. More than that, it would be the worst possible service to the country's industries to postpone to the regular session, which does not begin its work until December, 1913, the great number of changes in the laws by which, in a greater or less degree, all business will be affected. As soon as the new tariff schedules are enacted, importers and manufacturers will be able to make contracts and commitments upon the basis of the revised duties. They will be different in many cases, but at least they can be made. If revision should be "hung up" until the Summer of 1914, there would necessarily be hesitation. Delay and suspense are a far greater impediment to business than would be any tariff changes the Democratic Party will make. For that matter, it would be better for business if the tariff schedules could be taken up during the coming regular session for a sound process of revision. It would be better, because the result would be more speedily known. That is out of the question, however, first, because the bills prepared by the Democratic House would necessarily undergo a good deal of amendment in the Senate, where the Republicans and the Progressives together have control; and there is no reason to suppose that such changes as the country expects and has commanded to be made would receive the approval of the Republican President.

It is evident that the country desires and expects that Mr. Wilson will cause Congress to meet in extra session very early in his term. The work of preparing the bills is already far advanced. The measures that have already passed will probably require no material change. It is within the range of possibility that the work of revision may be completed by midsummer. Then business will know where it stands. We do not believe that any intelligent business man expects "panic" or industrial depression to follow in the wake of the moderate revision the Democrats will undertake. That cry has lost its force, for the country has too many times been assured by high authority, by men who have had a long experience in tariff-protected industries, that in most if not all the branches of our manufactures we can without injury dispense with the extravagant measure of protection hitherto enjoyed, and that many of them need no protection. And it must be borne in mind that the dominant interest now to be considered is that of the consumer, who has waited long.

THE BRITISH LIBERAL DEFEAT.

The defeat of the Asquith Government in the House of Commons is an annoying experience, but by no means conclusive. In a thin House, only 60 per cent. of the members present, the adverse majority of twenty-two was hardly more than an accident, the outcome of a device of the Unionists to catch the Ministry napping.

It does not seem to be a very patriotic device. It is not conducive to the influence of England in the serious international crisis now pending that the authority of the Government should, even slightly and temporarily, be impaired. Certainly an appeal to the country at this moment, when the Government needs to give all its time and strength to its international duties, would be a misfortune, and we can see no good reason why the Unionists should even suggest it. The mere fun of annoying the party in power is not such a reason. Nor can it be that the Unionists seriously desire to come into power immediately.

Nevertheless, it is probable that the Asquith Government will fall before the Home Rule bill can be enacted, and that it will fall on the financial provisions, which formed the issue yesterday. There is much discontent in the Liberal ranks over the financial control given to Ireland, and still more over the burdens imposed upon the taxpayers of England. The incident, or accident, of yesterday is ominous of the final result.

THINKING IT OVER.

The shiver of alarm that ran through the Chancelleries of Europe last week has passed, and though there is still cause for grave anxiety, the danger from hasty action is distinctly less. The situation is watched with closest interest in the United States. Not only do our people earnestly desire peace and abhor war, but that sentiment has grown in force and intelligence with the passage of time. The old fallacy that a neutral State can find its advantage in time of war no longer obtains as in former times, and the general sense of common interest in peace is clearer and firmer. In the more advanced States of Europe there has been a like change, and even in the countries where the militant sentiment is strongest there is a keener realization of the terrible cost of war. Naturally there is a deeper sense of responsibility in the minds of the statesmen with whom the decision lies.

The latest word from Vienna confirms this judgment. A conference is reported between Count von Berchtold, the Austrian Premier, and Dr. Danef, the President of the Chamber of Deputies of Bulgaria, and between the latter and the German Ambassador. As Bulgaria is the chief State in the federation of the Balkan States, it is certain that its Government will be loyal to the rights and interests of Servia, and that these will be clearly presented to Germany and Austria. That they are now undergoing discussion is a distinctly promising fact. Last week we heard that Austria was moving its armies and the German Emperor was holding councils of war. It is a very different outlook. Again, the Austrian Government allows a Vienna paper to publish a statement of the Austrian position which is far more moderate than recent utterances. Only one point in it is extreme, "the integrity of Albania." But that is a vague phrase, which will not stand in the way of peace if agreement exists on other grounds.

One force that makes for peace is the fact that the decision practically rests in the hands of Germany, and that the prestige of the empire—and especially of the Emperor—would be greatly and lastingly enhanced by preserving peace. Those who have been near the Emperor report frequent utterance on his part of a deep desire to be known in history as "William the Peace Keeper," and in his public speeches he has constantly insisted that the tremendous armament of the empire was intended to defend the empire, and, if necessary, to compel peace, and he has pointed out that for more than forty years Germany has maintained peace. He now has the opportunity to make secure the place in history he courts, for it is plain that if this crisis can be passed in safety, none of like magnitude will present itself in his lifetime.

THE RETIREMENT OF MR. BRYCE.

It is more than merely polite to say that the announcement of the retirement of Mr. James Bryce from the post of British Ambassador at Washington has been received with regret by the American people. Mr. Bryce was held in high esteem here before the Government of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, departing from the custom of making all appointments to Ambassadorships from the established Diplomatic Corps, appointed him in succession to Sir Henry Mortimer Durand. His book on "The American Commonwealth" had revealed him to us many years before as an Englishman who understood the aims and aspirations of the people of the United States, who not only comprehended but admired our institutions. In a sense he has enjoyed a larger measure of popularity here than any other British Ambassador, but the popularity has been due rather to the man than to his office. In the view of Americans he has performed his official duties with tact and zeal and fidelity to his Government. An Ambassador's work, however, does not tend to make him popular in any large sense among the people to whose Government he is accredited. As a matter of fact, he is not an Ambassador to the people but to their Government.

It is frequently said that the United States sends an Ambassador to the British people. A citizen of great distinction, who has justly gained great popularity in his own land, is customarily sent to the Court of St. James's. This practice was followed in England when Mr. Bryce was appointed. As long ago as the death of Lord Pauncefote Englishmen in and out of Parliament favored the adoption of the American plan in choosing an Ambassador to the United States, but other influences prevailed and Michael Herbert and Durand were appointed in turn from the diplomatic service.

The announcement that Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, now British Minister at Stockholm, will succeed Mr. Bryce at Washington indicates that Mr. Asquith intends to return to the old custom. A sound argument in favor of the adoption of this custom by the United States is that it would tend to make our diplomatic service more attractive to men of the best quality, and that to open to all members of our diplomatic service the chance to succeed to its highest post would be no more than fair. It is true, also, that in case of a serious international disagreement a thoroughly trained diplomat might be more useful than a man of affairs without much diplomatic training.

Nevertheless, without dwelling further on the rather fine distinction between an Ambassador to a people and an Ambassador to a Government, it must be admitted that Mr. Bryce has done something, as a British citizen resident in the United States, to strengthen the relations of this country and Great Britain. It is gratifying to know, also, that he will not leave Washington until the question raised by the bill exempting American coastwise trade from Panama Canal tolls is settled. This is positively stated in London dispatches, and reported as the belief of Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice in a dispatch from Stockholm. In the circumstances it seems likely that the British Government believes that the question will soon be settled. Mr. Bryce will carry away with him the affectionate esteem and best wishes of the American people.

RAMON CORRAL.

Ramon Corral, for a number of years regarded as the most powerful statesman in Mexico next to Porfirio Diaz, whose chief lieutenant he was, has died in exile. In his last hours he had the grim satisfaction of knowing that the country in which order had been preserved, and an outward semblance of respect for authority maintained, largely through his own efforts, was overrun by outlaws, with revolutions of the old Mexican kind in progress in many States. As Governor of Sonora Corral may have been high-handed, but he secured peace, and the business interests of the State thrived. As Governor of the Federal District he kept order in the capital and helped to promote public improvements. Many stories were told of his cruel and quite unconventional ways of punishing offenders against the law, and probably most of them were untrue, echoes of strange old tales of an earlier Mexico. He certainly impressed the lawless element with a wholesome sense of his authority and his ability.

He was transferred to the Cabinet and put forward as Vice President by the will of Diaz, who believed that in case of his own death Corral would be the fittest man to take up the cares of the Chief Executive. The unpopularity of Corral, from this point in his career, was probably due to the growing resentment of the assumption of supreme authority by Diaz. His retention of the Presidential office in his lifetime had come to be accepted as desirable if unconstitutional. But his appointment, against all public remonstrance, of his own successor, aroused angry disapproval, and Corral rather than Diaz was forced to bear the brunt of the people's wrath. His very name was hated, all sorts of calumnies were uttered against him, he was pictured as a monster of greed and cruelty.

Yet he seemed, in the year of the Government's downfall, a modest, courteous gentleman, obviously suffering from physical malady, and it is not likely that he would have failed to serve his country to the best of his ability in any emergency. He is the first of the exiles to die, but his death was not unexpected. It is likely enough that the Mexicans will speak more kindly of him in the future. Even Santa Anna is remembered as a heroic soldier, and the Mexicans almost always extol their dead leaders. But they are not unlike other peoples in that particular.

THE TELEGRAPH PENSION PLAN.

The provision of a fund of ten million dollars for the relief of old and infirm telegraph and telephone workers is entitled to be considered upon its merits as a measure of social and financial justice. It is not a charity, nor a sop to the discontented, nor a mere bribe to loyalty. In a democracy like ours it is essential to the general welfare that labor and capital should be agreed. Otherwise there is danger of class wars, and even encouragement for attack upon our institutions of government. This is the American way of settling such problems. The alternative is that provided by Government insurance, which had its beginnings in the way indicated as desirable for us to avoid. It was the Socialist threat which led to the establishment of Germany's insurance schemes as an insurance of the German Empire. It is the working class threat which is undermining British institutions. The alternative is such broad and wise policies as that adopted by many American corporations.

In order that their benefits may be realized it is essential that such schemes should be neither charitable nor patronizing. As such they would have no justification. They are the conscientious employer's tribute of loyalty to employés from whom he has a right to expect a tribute of similar devotion to his own interests. The wage earner has a natural right to expectation of an advancing wage, of permanency of employment if the enterprise is successful, and of provision for the future in which his earning powers have decreased or disappeared. It is to the interest of the wage payer that those who receive his money should have these sentiments because they make for efficiency. Welfare work of any sort is not a matter merely of good-will and humanity, although those sentiments are largely contributory. On purely economic grounds it is desirable that the employés should be in the best physical and mental condition, and have the best equipment. Similarly the wise employé will desire that his employer should be successful and strong, for no other sort of employer can deal thus with his men.

Democracy has a right to expect this rational altruism, this enlightened selfishness. And democracy has a just grievance against those of either class who betray both the class and the combination of classes. The workingman who fixes his wages by the boycott and the club or the bomb is in the same class with the employer who withholds the just wage, or who neglects to care for those who have cooperated in earning the dividend. Each class has a right to expect efficiency from the other. Both have a responsibility to society for the humane conduct of the joint business. The institution of Government insurance schemes is a confession of failure of Government to enforce this responsibility of the capitalist and the wage earner to each other. The inefficient workman, the workman who will not let other workmen work, the workmen who co-operate for inefficiency in the name of humanity, deserve no sympathy. The capitalist who fails to appreciate that humanity is true economy, and that best results are obtained only by best conditions, should have the lesson borne in upon him by society, unless it is sufficiently taught him by failure.

The Telegraph and Telephone Company is able to make this noble provision for its prosperity because it is an example of efficiency, and cannot afford to be served by the inefficient. Its workers must earn their wage, and having earned it for long, they have also earned consideration when their earning power is spent. Those who use the telegraph and telephone will pay the cost, as they ought, and not the taxpayer. It is a truer vindication of democracy than the enactment of laws to similar effect, or even than compliance with them.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Nothing Dreadful Happened.

Not everybody who watched Saturday night's parade viewed it with an approving eye, but nobody, however antagonistic to the cause which the marching thousands had at heart, could have denied that as a spectacle it was the equal of any similar demonstration the city has ever seen and much superior to those by which politicians of the other sex have tried to express purposes, make converts, or celebrate victories.

Not only did a majority of the women march well, but they exhibited the same organizing and executive power that was shown when they paraded by daylight, and they showed that keener appreciation of form and color with which they were generally credited. That women really have a higher aesthetic sense than men is a contention that could not be supported by references to the history of art, but there is no doubt that these women managed to make their procession more—well, more processional, than do the men who usually have charge of such affairs in this country. The men of other countries, particularly those called Latin, do much better than our own and at least as well as our women did.

In the lines and out of them it was noted that they were false prophets, and quite unnecessarily apprehensive, who expected that the crowds along the streets would take advantage of the darkness and carry jest and persiflage to lengths—or depths—offensive to delicate ears. Nothing of the kind happened. Insults were as rare as assaults; there was none of either, and the Young Person took no more harm than the veterans. This may have been due in part to the excellence of the police protection, but, for all that most observers could see, the policemen had nothing to do except to prevent the interested and sympathetic crowds from occupying space needed for the marchers.

The parade differed from its predecessor in that it came nearer to being one of men and women, a fact indicating wisdom on the part of the organizers, for their cause will never be successful if it requires, or even allows, a rigid drawing of sex lines.

Objectionable as it seems to some of us to have women parading the streets at night, it is only fair to state that the selection of the hour was, in part at least, the result of a request from the Fifth Avenue shopkeepers that their business should not be again subjected to the losses incidental to a day parade. That an argument so practical should have had weight with the sex that is really the more practical of the two is not, after all, surprising.

Calling the Class in Geography.

One has to look far to find anything except horrors in the war now waging between Turkey and the Balkan States, but one can at least say that it has fixed public attention at last upon a part of the world about which even well-read people have hitherto, as a rule, known very little, and that little neither accurate nor definite.

It would take, of course, more than a war as terrible as this to familiarize western ears and tongues with the place names of that wild region. Now and then we recognize among them one near enough like those that appear in ancient history to enable us to guess at its origin, and a few others, like Adrianople and Constantinople itself, present no difficulties, and even tell us an intelligible story. Most of them, however, are and probably will remain as hard to remember as they are to place or to pronounce. This is an obstacle to an intelligent following of the war's progress, but it has not prevented a general overhauling of geographies and encyclopedias, and the newspaper maps as well as the newspaper dispatches are diffusing so much information about the "Near East" that it is ceasing to be a vague land of mystery.

Even the least advanced of the scholars taught in this way are beginning to understand what is going on. They can, for instance, smile—cynically or contemptuously, according to taste and inclination—at the preposterous Austrian cry of "Albania for the Albanians," and see that there is just about as much sense in it as there would be in the cry of "Africa for the lions." Many are coming to see, also, for the first time, the peculiar rôle which the jealous Powers have allowed the Turks to play so long down in that corner of Europe, and even to glimpse the dreadful penalty which those same Powers will probably or possibly have to pay for letting themselves be governed by their greeds and their fears instead of by the considerations of common honesty and decency.

The nature of the next settlement of "the Balkan question" depends a good deal upon the number of people who become informed as to what that question really is, and it looks now as if the number would soon be pretty large. Wars are reported nowadays not from the standpoint of diplomacy and dynastic policy but from that of humanity, and that tends to deprive even victory of some of its old glamour.

Christmas Is What We Make It.

A correspondent who quite needlessly asks that an old man be forgiven for indulging in reminiscence tells us that he remembers when he thought he had a fine Christmas if he found in his stocking that morning a doughnut and an apple, and that his joy knew no bounds if he received in addition a sled made by father in the woodshed after bedtime and a woolen muffler of mother's knitting. As for gifts among neighbors, they never, he says, went in those good old days beyond something simple and inexpensive, like a ham, a box of home-made candy, or a subscription to some magazine or paper. And he feels sure that many others, like himself, would be glad if the old-time limitations on Christmas giving could be revived and observed.

We are entirely willing to grant this correspondent's request to give publicity to his regrets and his aspirations, but we do so with little hope that it will have any effect—and as little belief that it should. He is mistaken, and much mistaken, in assuming that his own boyhood experiences were general enough to be characteristic of a better age. Of course they were not uncommon then, but neither was more extensive and elaborate giving, both among people who could, and among people who couldn't, afford it. Perhaps not as many people then as now thought that they had an excuse for calling Christmas an orgy of blackmail and extravagance, but perhaps as many did it in proportion to the total population, and he should remember that, then as now, the excuse for the use of such epithets in describing Christmas was a miserably poor one.

There isn't, and there never was, any real compulsion to give unwillingly or extravagantly. Whoever admits that he does the one or the other simply confesses to moral or mental weakness, or to both, and the first thing he should do toward reforming Christmas is to reform himself. Let him abandon the idea that either the giving or the accepting of a Christmas present creates a debt, and he will be well on the road toward giving only what he can afford and only to those who have a legitimate claim on his generosity.

THE COAL SHORTAGE.

F. W. Saward Blames Insufficient Labor Supply.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the editorial article on "The Coal Market" you state: "Forehanded dealers should have been at pains to make up for it [shortage] before the approach of Winter."

Certainly every effort possible has been made to decrease the shortage. The excess tonnage for June, July, August, September, and October amounted to 3,051,657 tons, compared with production for same months last year. Labor conditions, as well as physical conditions appertaining to the mines themselves, have prevented further increase.

You state: "It [shortage] is somebody's fault." It is very largely the fault of the miners, who have engaged in unauthorized strikes, and, moreover, prevent the augmentation of the working force. To obtain employment as a miner in the anthracite mines it is necessary to obtain a certificate from the Miners' Examining Boards. These boards are composed of members of the United Mine Workers, who see to it that the number of miners is not unduly increased.

You state: "There is plenty of coal at the mines." If this means piled up at the mines ready for shipment your statement is incorrect. There is plenty of coal in the mines, but it is quite another proposition to get it out, and equally a proposition to properly prepare it for market.

You say: "There are plenty of men to handle it." This is equally incorrect. There has been a shortage of labor for months.

You state that the Balkan war has nothing to do with the coal market. The trouble referred to has considerable to do with the coal market. While the number of men who have gone away may be small, the loss of one or two men at a colliery is a matter of some consequence when there is already a shortage existing.

You state that the places of the comparatively few mine workers who have gone could soon be filled. There are many reasons, notably the miners' certificate law, why the places cannot soon be filled.

A Prophecy in Fulfillment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The following youthful effusion was printed in a local newspaper on Feb. 15, 1877, at a time when England and America were much stirred by the reported Turkish atrocities in Bulgaria, and Russia was preparing to enter upon a campaign which culminated in the taking of Plevna. If the author is willing that it should now see the light, it is not because of any poetic value which he attributes to it, but because it is a kind of prophecy of what has befallen the Turks in these latter days, though by no means at the hands of Western Europe:

A NEW CRUSADE.

A voice of war across the wind-swept plains
Where Ural watches, and the Volga flows;
The Janus-eagle poising o'er his foes,
While far adown the bloody crescent wanes.
"Lo, God is God!" the shout from Moslem fanes;
But more and more a shrill denial grows
From babes and mothers in their dying throes,
Ascending to the throne of Him who reigns.

O Asian despot, arming in affright
Beside the waters of the Golden Horn,
The long-delaying hand at last shall smite!
O Europe, lead against the land outworn
Thy fiery soldiers facing to the Morn,
Their million sabres leaping into light!

Demand for Lower Duties.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Prof. Hart, in his communication in The Sunday Times, deduces some things from the election figures with which all fair-minded men will agree. But another contributor, in the same issue, flies wide of the mark in his effort to bolster up a badly discredited cause when he urges "the results seem to show that the largest number of voters favored protection," and suggests in consequence that Mr. Wilson should go slow in any action to reduce the duties on our manufactured goods at a special session of Congress. Evidently he has not read the platform of the Progressive Party, where the Payne-Aldrich bill is denounced, and immediate lower revision in favor of the workingman and consumer demanded. The platforms of the Progressive and Democratic Parties, though differing in theory, are practically and in spirit not so far apart.

CLARENCE S. JOY.

WILSON AS PRESIDENT

Would Fit Party to Handle Affairs of a New Age.

In the opinion of Woodrow Wilson, government is Darwinian rather than Newtonian in character—"modified by its environment, necessitated by its tasks, shaped to its functions by the sheer pressure of life. It is not a system of checks and balances, like the solar system, but one of growth and evolution.

The office of President is in considerable degree what the man who holds it makes it; not that the President is a law unto himself, not that he is free to exercise his own will completely in the discharge of his official functions, but that his position gives him necessarily a commanding position in making public opinion and in bringing the legislative branch of the Government into active sympathy and co-operation with him. He is the leader of his political party; but he is at the same time the guide and counselor of the whole Nation, his voice by virtue of his office being the voice of authority which all respect. He is the leader of his party by the very force of the circumstances attending his nomination. He is never the candidate of the people, as such; he is invariably the partisan until he becomes the President. It is impossible, however, for him to throw off party leadership after entering upon the discharge of his official functions, be he ever so just and fair-minded in the administration of his office. All the Presidents—certainly since their nomination by political conventions—have been party men.

Mr. Wilson gave a prophetic account four years before his nomination of the proceedings of the convention at Baltimore. Describing the methods of selecting the candidate for President, he said in one of his lectures at Columbia University:

> Many influences play upon nominating conventions, which seem mere winds of feeling. They sit in great halls, with galleries into which crowd thousands of spectators from all parts of the country, but, chiefly, of course, from the place at which the convention sits, and the feeling of the galleries is transmitted to the floor. The cheers of mere spectators echo the names of popular candidates, and every excitement on the floor is enhanced a hundredfold in the galleries. Sudden gusts of impulse are apt to change the whole feeling of the convention, and offset in a moment the most careful arrangements of managing politicians. It has come to be a commonly accepted opinion that if the [illegible] Convention of 1860 had not met in Chicago it would have nominated Mr. [illegible] and not Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Seward was the acknowledged leader of the new party; had been its most telling spokesman; had given its tenets definition and currency. Mr. Lincoln had not been brought within the view of the country as a whole until the other day * * * but the convention met in Illinois, amid throngs of Mr. Lincoln's ardent friends and advocates. His managers saw to it that the galleries were properly filled with men who would cheer every mention of his name until the hall was shaken. Every influence of the place worked for him, and he was chosen.

So that while the method of selecting the candidate for President may have resulted in the making of an excellent choice, it has not blinded thoughtful critics of our political practices to the danger of the method. The choice of the nominating convention, however, is not so haphazard as it would seem, according to Mr. Wilson:

> The party that expects to win may be counted on to make a much more conservative and thoughtful selection of a candidate than the party that merely hopes to win. The haphazard selections which seem to discredit the system are generally made by conventions of the party unaccustomed to success. Success brings sober calculation and a sense of responsibility.

This was not written, of course, about the Baltimore convention; but no better account of what occurred there was given by the army of trained writers who described its proceedings, and it is particularly interesting just now because of what happened there four months ago and what followed last week.

⁂

Mr. Wilson's view of the Presidency and its relation to the people and the part which the President is to play in the administration of the Government and in regard to the political party of which he is the titular head, is of consuming interest, now that he is about to succeed to this office. "What the country will demand of the candidate will be, not that he be an astute politician, skilled and practiced in affairs, but that he be a man such as it can trust, in character, in intention, in knowledge of its needs, in perception of the best means by which these needs may be met, in capacity to prevail by reason of his own weight and integrity. Sometimes the country believes in a party, but more often it believes in a man; and conventions have often shown the instinct to perceive which it is that the country needs in a particular Presidential year—a mere representative partisan, a military hero, or some one who will genuinely speak for the country itself, whatever be his training and antecedents. It is in this sense that the President has the rôle of party leader thrust upon him by the very method by which he is chosen." "He cannot escape being the leader of his party except by incapacity and lack of personal force, because he is at once the choice of the party and of the Nation." But he is more than party leader—"he is also the political leader of the Nation, or has it in his choice to be." "He may be both the leader of his party and the leader of the Nation, or he may be one or the other. If he lead the Nation, his party can hardly resist him. His office is anything he has the sagacity and force to make it."

⁂

Mr. Wilson's view of the part played by political parties in the government of this country is significant. Since his election he has been flooded with letters telling him how to manage and advising him of his responsibility to the political party whose chosen leader he was in the contest which has just ended; and if he had the power to fill all the offices in the country he would find a host of the neglected or disappointed for whom he could not provide, so much greater is the supply of office-filling material than the demand. There are not enough offices to go around. "The organization and operation of parties in the United States are a survival of the Whig era in our politics, and they have been continued to this day. The Whigs of England sought by every means to curb and regulate the power of the Crown, and the Revolution in America was a part of the same contest and has resulted in making for this country but one National voice, the voice of the President. "His isolation has quite unexpectedly been his exaltation"; "only the President represents the country as a whole," and he is bound to the legislative branch of the Government "only by the machinery and discipline of party, not as a person and functionary, but as a member of an outside organization which exists quite independently of the Executive and Legislature." "Local offices are indispensable to party discipline as rewards of local fidelity." "Whatever their faults and abuses, party machines are absolutely necessary under our existing Electoral arrangements, and are necessary chiefly for keeping the several segments of parties together." "We have made it necessary that we should have 'bosses' and that they and their lieutenants should assign offices by appointment, but it is a very difficult and precarious business which they undertake." The President can, if he choose, become a National boss by the use of his enormous patronage; but he is restrained by "his conspicuous position and the fact that opinion will hold him responsible for his use of his patronage," and "such open responsibility sobers and restrains even where principle is lacking." "Party organization is no longer needed for the mere rudimentary task of holding the machinery together or giving it the sustenance of some common object, some single cooperative motive. The time is at hand when we can with safety examine the network of party in its detail and change its structure without imperiling its strength. * * * We are coming now to look upon our parties once more as instruments for progressive action, as means for handling the affairs of a new age. Sentimental reminiscence is less dominant over us. We are ready to study new uses for our parties and to adapt them to new standards and principles." As Capt. Bunsby would say, "The bearings of these observations lies in their application."

MODERN RED INDIANS

Have Broken with Past Ages, Says Dr. Eastman, Sioux.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Being an Indian myself, I must say Amen in a general way to what Mrs. Wilbur F. Wakeman says upon the Indian situation. I have sometimes been considered a severe critic of the management of the Indian by the Federal Government. Yet I affirm that the policy and ultimate purpose of Americans toward my race has been admirable, Christian in tone and theory.

It may be asked why, then, we have not obtained better results. I answer, you expect not merely good but phenomenal results. Your own progress during the past fifty years has been so wonderful that the really remarkable development of a simpler race appears insignificant by comparison.

We were living the nomadic life a few years ago, with the skin or bark tepee and the dog travois. We had not even domestic animals or permanent homes. Some of us are to-day engineers and firemen on the great transcontinental lines; others are advocates of no mean ability, and yet others are ministering to the sick of your own race in the approved ways of modern medicine. There are scores successfully engaged in business and the skilled trades, and many hundreds in stock raising and agriculture. You will find men of Indian blood in the Congress of the United States and in several of the State Legislatures. Many of these men were born in the tepee. Is this not much to achieve in half a century?

As an Indian I cannot as yet think of dispensing with any of the different classes of Indian schools—the day schools, reservation boarding schools, and non-reservation schools, both Government and mission. We need them all until the day comes when the public school system of the United States is found sufficient for our wants. It is to the schools that we owe most of what has been accomplished. To break away in a decade or two from the usages and philosophy of untold ages is no small achievement.

There is a wrong impression abroad that the returned students have failed or that there is no work for them to do. Statistics prove that a larger per cent. of the graduates actually "make good" than in institutions of similar grade among the whites. You must bear in mind that the curriculum of these schools, such as Carlisle and Haskell, is below the high school, and that many of the pupils come with no knowledge of the English language or of books. Many are compelled to leave after two or three years on account of weak eyes, failing health, or for some other reason. Yet they are spoken of in the press as "graduates," and the public is wont to expect as much of them as if they were college graduates! This is unfair and misleading. It is really astonishing how many of this class of Indian students have succeeded in life, though naturally there have been many failures.

As to the diseases, it is true that the situation on many reservations is serious, especially as regards tuberculosis and trachoma. Yet it is only fair to say that much of this was the inevitable result of a complete change in mode of living and the ignorance of the Indians of the simplest sanitary precautions necessary under the new conditions. Where Indians are instructed and are not suffering from extreme poverty, they are as robust as any other class of people, and are increasing in numbers. There has been some neglect in schools and on reservations. I am sorry to say that. While there are conscientious doctors in the service they are handicapped by too large fields and poor equipment, while others are careless and indifferent.

As regards the dishonesty so often charged in the management of the property and funds of the Indian, it must be admitted that, while many of our politicians and office holders are in the business for what they can get out of it, the same malady that undermines other branches of State and municipality will affect the Indian Department. To my personal knowledge the last five Presidents of the United States have had at heart the righteous treatment and care of our Indian wards. The remedy for existing evils lies, first, in lifting the Indian service out of politics, not only in the minor but the more important offices; and, second, in freeing the Indians as rapidly as possible from bureaucratic control, individualizing and paying over their trust funds, freeing their lands, welcoming them into full citizenship, and thus giving them what has been your and my inspiration—hope and freedom.

"OUR PARADE."

[In answer to Mr. Morewood.]

"What are the bugles blowing for?" the Man from Home essayed.
"To push you on, to push you on," the Marching Women said.
"What makes you look so strong, so strong?" the Man from Home essayed.
"We know we're right, we know we're right," the Marching Women said.
"We are marshaling our forces; you can hear the music play.
"We're tired of your methods and time-worn creeds to-day.
"And we're marching here for justice in the evening."

"What makes that man who watches so pale!" the Man from Home essayed.
"He's afraid of what he thinks we'll do," the Marching Women said.
"What makes that man afraid, afraid?" the Man from Home essayed.
"His hobbled mind, his hobbled mind," the Marching Women said.
"We're marching on in spite of that, and we're covering the ground
"He has blundered over many times, to his shame may it redound!
"And we're marching now for justice in the evening!"

"Your lot's as good a lot as mine," the Man from Home essayed.
"Perhaps it is, perhaps it is," the Marching Women said.
"Then why want more? You've got enough," the Man from Home essayed.
"It isn't what we hope to get," the Marching Women said.
"You judge us by yourselves, in your selfish fight for place
"You forget that we who march are the Mothers of the race!
"And 'tis that which makes us march for justice in the evening."

"What is that painted phantom there?" the Man from Home essayed.
"It's what men called their chivalry," the Marching Women said.
"Why does it whine and grovel now?" the Man from Home essayed.
"Because we know it as it is," the Marching Women said.
"We are no longer blinded; our eyes are open wide.
"You try to do your duty, and we'll stand right by your side.
"For we're marching here for justice in the evening."

'BELLA DONNA' HOLDS IN GLOOMY SUSPENSE

With Nazimova a Fascinating, if Somewhat Peculiar, Heroine of the Hichens Tale.

PASSION IS ITS KEYNOTE

Charles Bryant Well Liked as Dr. Isaacson—A Handsome Production of Fagan's Dramatization at Empire.

BELLA DONNA, a dramatization in four acts, by James Bernard Fagan, of the novel by Robert Hichens. Empire Theatre.

Dr. Meyer Isaacson	Charles Bryant
The Hon. Nigel Armine	Frank Gilmore
Mahmoud Baroudi	Robert Whitworth
Dr. Hartley	Edward Fielding
Sir Henry Grebe	William Hassen
Ibrahim	A. Romaine Callender
Hamza	Claus Bogel
Monks	Arthur Hurley
Mrs. Chepstow	Mme. Nazimova
Mrs. Marchmont	Mrs. Leslie Faber
Marie	Lela Lee

Persons who know their best-sellers must be the best judges of how much of Robert Hichens's "Bella Donna" comes through in the acted version of the story which served to bring Nazimova to the stage of the Empire Theatre last night. But he would be greedy for sensation who asked for more. And, though it is obviously impossible to make anything of such a tale but picturesque melodrama, it must be said to Mr. Fagan's credit that he has so arranged the scenes and the incidents that the result will be intelligible to those who have not read the book and, moreover, holding in a way which, as Nazimova acts the very unpleasant heroine of the story, is of a fascination akin to that which holds many people in front of the glass cases behind which poisonnous serpents crawl and squirm.

For this Bella Donna, though she refers tenderly to her people at home, England, could not by any account be mistaken for a product of the land of fogs and tea and Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Which, by the way, serves to suggest the grim humor of Robert Hichens when he takes his Englishman so far away from home to be killed with poisoned coffee when he might be so easily disposed of by daily consumption of the kind they have at home.

However, that is a digression, and possibly an unnecessary one.

The main thing to be noted now is the fact that this Hichens-Fagan melodrama does create a condition of rather unpleasant suspense from the time one first encounters the beautiful Donna in the office of the fashionable London physician, Dr. Meyer Isaacson, to that moment, four acts later, when, spurned by Mahmoud Baradi, whom she has persistently pursued, she finds the door of her husband's villa closed in her face, and, broken in spirit and body, rights about to stagger into the night and the gloom of the far-reaching desert wastes.

To say that she will be followed on any occasion by even a faint glimmer of sympathy would be to exaggerate the charity of even the most thoughtlessly sentimental, for as Nazimova acts the lady she is from first to last a vampire creature thirsting for men, and not especially averse to letting the fact be known. Indeed, were the matter worth arguing, it might be remarked that next to its wholly exotic flavor the woman's obvious sensuality is the greatest flaw in Nazimova's performance of the rôle. That she could have deceived her English husband —silly as he was—or that so patent a bid for favor would have held the Oriental lover—seems most unlikely. But, leaving these points aside and dealing with the actress's performances along the lines she herself has marked out, Nazimova's playing of the rôle is most remarkable. It is, in fact, as complete and convincing an exposition of overpowering passion as could be imagined. And as such it is both impressive and fascinating. Here is a woman sick with unfulfilled desire for one man and oppressed by her enforced association with another. And in a thousand and one expressive symbols, in facial play, in sudden nervous twitchings of the body, and in speech which is always keyed to the mood to be expressed, the contrast between these attitudes is most sensitively conveyed.

If the actress has soought to convey the sense of an unclean, unhealthy state of mind—which presumably she has—she succeeds on all points.

Moreover, in the purely pictorial element, in fluidity of pose and gesture, she presents a study which is wonderfully effective, if at times it is overcolored with special consideration for its theatrical effect.

Of the play in general the best that may be said of it is that it does provide two or more hours of a sort of suspense. Not a ray of light is to be observed anywhere to lighten the general gloom. The most effective scene is that in which Dr. Isaacson insists upon taking charge of affairs on board the Loulia when Nigel Armine, Bella Donna's husband, is being slowly poisoned to death. Here the presence of a younger looking attendant physician would give greater plausibility to the ultimate surrender.

The play is very well staged, with several scenes of much beauty.

As Dr. Isaacson, Charles Bryant has authority and repose, without, however, a great deal of that particular sort of distinction which one likes to ascribe to a medical man of such pre-eminence. A. Romaine Collender colors the rôle of Ibraham splendidly, and Mrs. Leslie Faber plays a brief rôle pleasantly. Mr. Gilmore suggests the husband's sentimentality and his physical breakdown with understanding, if with much angularity of gesture and uneasiness of pose. But the lover of Robert Whitworth is not of overpowering strength.

SCHREINER—WEGMAN.

Mrs. Virginia Schreiner of 104 West 121st Street has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Genevieve Schreiner, to D. Charles Wegman of New York and Jersey City, son of Mrs. Charles D. Wegman and the late Dr. Wegman. Miss Schreiner is the daughter of the late George Schreiner. No date has been set for the wedding.

WILSON—SHERWOOD.

The engagement is announced of Miss Evelyn Wilson of Portland, Oregon, and Arthur Murray Sherwood, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Sherwood of this city. Mr. Sherwood, Jr., went to the Northwest two years ago and engaged in fruit raising with his cousin, Gordon Forbes, of Morristown, N. J. Their ranch is located at White Salmon on the Columbia River, Washington. Miss Wilson is a daughter of Dr. George Flanders Wilson of Portland.

ANNIE RUSSELL IN OLD ENGLISH COMEDY

Is Well Received in "She Stoops to Conquer" at 39th Street Theatre.

PLAY OF ETERNAL YOUTH

Goldsmith's Humor as Fresh as if Just Written — Excellent Cast, with George Giddens as Lumpkin.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER, a comedy in four acts, by Oliver Goldsmith. Thirty-ninth Street Theatre.

Sir Charles Marlow	Edward Longman
Young Marlow	Frank Reicher
Hardcastle	Fred Permain
Hastings	John Westley
Tony Lumpkin	George Giddens
Diggory	Littledale Power
Roger	Clifford Devereux
Dick	Holland Hudson
Thomas	Paul Bern
Stingo	Harold Meltzer
Jeremy	Sidney D. Carlyle
Slang	Arthur Barney
Muggins	William Scott
Twist	Edgar Ware
Aminadab	Philip Edwards
Servant to young Marlow	Robert Murray
Mrs. Hardcastle	Beatrice Herford
Kate Hardcastle	Annie Russell
Constance Neville	Henrietta Goodwin
Dolly	Mary Murillo

Whenever "She Stoops to Conquer" is produced anywhere near adequately, the strongest impression is that of the eternal youthfulness of the comedy. And that was the impression last night, when Annie Russell and her Old English Comedy Company began their season at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre with Goldsmith's play. The humor of the story was as fresh as if it were written a few days ago, and even the old-fashioned idea of "asides" and unconsidered exits and entrances was forgotten.

Last night's performance was something of a society event, although the opening of the opera season probably made the society feature less marked than it would have been. Miss Russell's season at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre is to be under distinguished patronage, and the list of subscribers includes many of the prominent people in New York who are interested in the best of the theatre. The performance last night indicated that their faith in Miss Russell and her advisers had not been misplaced.

Very little attempt had been made to have the staging of the play ornate. The scenes were simple and entirely satisfactory, and the acting, even with first night nervousness considered, was delightful. There was an apparent uniformity of spirit among the players that made all of the scenes of the play move on the same plane of excellence. The audience seemed to like best of all the first scene between Kate Hardcastle and Marlowe, when the young man is overwhelmed with bashfulness, and the last scene between the two, in which Marlowe believes he is speaking to the poor relation whom he dare not offer to marry. But these two scenes possess the daintiest humor of the play and are always liked.

Annie Russell as Kate, in both the character of the mistress of the house and the supposed bar maid, seemed to find her audience always in sympathy with her, and her playing of the scenes with Marlowe were always delightful. Her supporting company was generally excellent, though the acting of some stood out considerably above the performance given by others. George Giddens as the Tony Lumpkin, a rôle he has played many hundreds of times in England; Frank Reicher as young Marlowe, John Westley as Hastings, Fred Permain as Hardcastle, Beatrice Herford as Mrs. Hardcastle, Henrietta Goodman as Constance, and Littledale Power as Diggory were particularly good.

"She Stoops to Conquer" will be played for two weeks and "Much Ado About Nothing" will be the second play of the engagement.

"C. O. D." IS A FUNNY FARCE.

Three Picaresque Husbands and Deceiving Wives in Chapin's Comedy.

"C. O. D.," a four-act farce by Frederic Chapin, opened at the Gaiety Theatre last night. "C. O. D." is O. K. and A-1, and, judging by the persistency of laughter it drew forth at every stage of its portrayal last night, it ought to "take" P. D. Q. and run L. O. N. G.

"C. O. D." hasn't a thing to do with the cash-on-delivery idea you experience every time your wife buys a hat or dress at a department store. The name has to do only with the trinity of picaresque heroes of the farce—C. O. Darlington, a coffee salesman; C. O. Drudge, a millionaire, and C. O. Dusenberry, a college professor of (dead) languages. This "C. O. D. Club" finds itself suddenly launched, without a constitution or clothes, from a railroad wreck five miles distant from a hotel in the Adirondacks where their wives are summering, and a good deal nearer to the farm of one Hiram Jones, who has three pretty ingenue daughters.

Led to that farm and those daughters, the three husbands, transformed straightway, according to the habit of husbands, into three widowers, greatly impress the three country lasses, and are in turn impressed into service by the country lasses' irate father to rake hay at $1.50 a day—a very hot day. In the heyday of their pastoral gallivanting, however, there chance upon the farm the three wives—grown widows for the Summer, according to the fashion of wives—in company with three very young and very foolish chappies, preempted sweethearts of the farmer's three daughters.

The flirtation which the country girls thereupon devise with the elderly Summer widowers as an artifice to win back the loyalty of their really quite loyal trio of silly chappies brings on all the complications of the farce, including an uproariously comic scene in which the three "widowed" couples, caught benighted in the farmhouse in a thunder storm, are obliged, each three without the knowledge of the other three, to seek shelter in the same three rooms, and, as a matter of fact, in the wrong three rooms.

It won't give you much to think about; it doesn't tackle any problem nor pretend to any "idea." But it'll make you laugh almost every minute of it, and that's something in these days of woe and suffering in the Balkans.

The play was well acted throughout. If it were not belittling the acting of the other members of the cast, it might be said that Charles Brown as Prof. Dusenberry, in his pitiful plights throughout the play, proved especially ludicrous and amusing.

MINNIE DUPREE IN A PLAYLET.

Acts Wife in a Cynical Comedy Dealing with the "Eternal Triangle."

Minnie Dupree appeared at Keith's Union Square Theatre yesterday for the first time in a cynical one-act comedy called "The Man in Front," that is said to have been written by Alfred Sutro, although no author's name appears on the programme. The characters are a dramatic critic, his wife, and their common friend. The critic husband rails at the stage for presenting the "eternal triangle," as if such a thing were true, and then starts off for the theatre conscious of his superior knowledge, leaving his wife and friend at home. The wife and friend turn out to be lovers, and to have loved for two years without the husband's knowledge. He returns unexpectedly, the play having been postponed, and learns their secret. He demands a written confession from the friend and threatens all sorts of violence until the wife tells him that he is simply be ing tested as to the sincerity of his knowledge. The husband accepts what he thinks is the joke and settles back complacently into his original ignorance.

Miss Dupree played the wife, the rôle of the husband was taken by Arthur Maitland, and the character of the friend by James Cooley.

Other numbers on the Union Square bill were Jesse Lasky's production of a new musical sketch called "The Little Parisienne," Reine Davis, John P. Wade and company, the Sully family, Johnny Ford, Harry Breen, Pealson and Goldie, and the Ballots.

"Swift & Company's sales of Fresh Beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, Nov. 9, averaged 10.42 cents per pound."—Adv.

OLD PLAYMATES TO MARRY.

Mrs. Van Storch, Widow, 63, and G. R. Collingworth, 65, Get License.

Mrs. Zelia S. Van Storch, widow of Harry Van Storch, a Yonkers jeweler, obtained a license from City Clerk O'Brien in Yonkers yesterday to marry George R. Collingworth, a mechanical engineer, of 82 West 181st Street.

Mrs. Van Storch said she was 63 years old, and Mr. Collingworth said he was two years older. He is a widower.

From Yonkers the aged couple went to the New York City Hall, where they got another license. The wedding is to take place on Nov. 20 at the Episcopal Church of the Intercession, Broadway and 158th Street.

Mr. Collingworth is a member of the firm of the Garvin Machine Company, at Spring and Varick Streets, and is wealthy. Mrs. Van Storch is also wealthy, having inherited the best part of the estate of the late Bailey Hobbs, who had adopted her as his daughter.

More than half a century ago Mr. Collingworth and Mrs. Van Storch were playmates in Yonkers. When he reached his majority he married Miss Rockwell, and afterward Mrs. Van Storch was married.

Mr. Van Storch died twenty-four years ago and Mrs. Collingworth six years ago.

A wedding reception will be held at the Overlook, the residence of Mrs. William Darling, the bridegroom's daughter.

MISS GRACE JENNINGS WEDS.

Married to Frederick Glade Wacker in Brooklyn—The Attendants.

Miss Grace Cook Jennings, daughter of Mrs. Spencer Augustus Jennings, was married to Frederick Glade Wacker, son of Charles H. Wacker of Chicago, last evening in the First Presbyterian Church, Henry Street, Brooklyn Heights. The Rev. Dr. L. Mason Clarke performed the ceremony at 8:30 o'clock, and afterward there was a reception at the home of the bride's mother, 226 Henry Street.

Miss Jennings's brother-in-law, Robinson Leech, gave her in marriage. Her gown was of chiffon velvet broocade, with long open angel sleeves of lace and a full court train lined with silver. Her veil was of tulle and lace, and she carried lilies of the valley and orchids.

Miss Gertrude Howell Jennings, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a gown of pale green brocade, with panniers of green tulle and trimmings of silver, and carried gardenias. The bridesmaids were the Misses Sybil Young of this city, Rosalie Wacker, a sister of the bridegroom; Thyrza Benson of Brooklyn, and Charlotte Nott of Minneapolis. They appeared in frocks of brocade in a delicate orchid shade, having velvet girdles in the American Beauty tints. Their bouquets were of American Beauty roses.

Charles H. Wacker, Jr., was his brother's best man, and the ushers, who, like the bridegroom, were graduated from Yale in 1910, were Tappin Gregory of Chicago, Lyman N. Hine, Edward W. Seymour of New York, Harry T. Curtis of Greenwich, Conn.; Earle T. Williams, and Charles M. Bull, Jr., of Brooklyn.

White roses and chrysanthemums decorated the church, and at the house there was a profusion of pink roses, chrysanthemums and greenery.

Mr. and Mrs. Wacker are to make their home in Toledo, Ohio.

MISS STODDARD'S WEDDING.

Plans for Her Marriage to Eugene B. Reynolds on Nov. 26.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Evelyn Garretson Stoddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Stoddard, to Eugene Beaumont Reynolds, which will take place on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 26, at 4 o'clock, in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin will officiate.

Miss Ruth Reynolds of Wilkesbarre, Penn., a sister of the bridegroom, will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids selected are the Misses Mary L. Kee and Elsie M. Schmitt of this city, Carol T. Coe of Englewood, N. J., and Dorothy Ethridge of Rome, N. Y.

Warren M. Reynolds will be his brother's best man, and included among the ushers are Percy C. McLean, Neil Chrisman, Harold A. Nugent, Harold B. Fell, Duke N. Banks of Evanston, Ill., and John D. Reynolds of Wilkesbarre, another brother of the bridegroom.

The reception will be held at the Ansonia, Broadway and Seventy-third Street.

Roberts-Moffett Wedding Plans.

The marriage of Miss Renie de M. Moffett, daughter of Mrs. William Henry Moffett of 40 East Eightieth Street, to Sidney Lewis Roberts of Malvern, Penn., will be celebrated Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in Grace Church, only the relatives and intimate friends being present. The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Slattery, rector of the church, will officiate. Miss Nancy Hough and John Newbold Hough, the children of Judge and Mrs. C. M. Hough, will attend the bride as flower children. Warren M. Wright, a classmate of Mr. Roberts at Harvard, will act as best man. The ushers chosen are Herbert McIlvaine, John A. Frick of Allentown, Richard Bowen, and Richard B. Daniel of Philadelphia.

Frank Von Briesens on Honeymoon.

When Mr. and Mrs. Frank Von Briesen return from the South, where they are spending their honeymoon, they will live at Madison Avenue and Ninetieth Street. The wedding took place last Saturday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Solomon Baruch, 136 East Seventy-sixth Street, in the presence of the immediate family. Dr. Baruch gave the bride in marriage and the ceremony was performed by Judge Zeller of General Sessions. Mrs. Von Briesen, who was Miss Agnes Wirth, has lived at the Baruch home since she came to this country.

Miss Moss, Bride of Louis Flatto.

The marriage of Miss Etta Moss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rose Moss, to Louis Flatto, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Flatto, took place at 5:30 o'clock on Sunday evening at the Hotel Savoy. The Rev. Dr. Eiseman officiated. Mrs. Benjamin Moss was the bride's matron of honor and only attendant. I. T. Flatto was his brother's best man and the ushers were Paul Moss, M. J. Moss, William Flatto, George Flatto, Rudolph Landfelder, Leo Dreyfus, Leonard Rothenstein and Benjamin Levy. Mr. Flatto and his bride are spending their honeymoon in the South and will live in this city upon their return.

Miss Romeike to Wed H. E. Mowen.

The engagement is announced of Miss Henriette E. Romeike, daughter of the late Henry Romeike, to Harry Eugene Mowen of this city. Mr. Mowen is a graduate of the New York University and a member of the Zeta Psi and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. No date has been set for the wedding.

Johnson-Brown Wedding on Nov. 30.

Invitations have been sent out by Davison Brown for the marriage of his daughter, Miss Edith Sophia Davison Brown, to Manuel J. Johnson at Christ Church, New Brighton, S. I., at noon on Saturday, Nov. 30. After the ceremony a reception will be given for relatives and a few friends, by Miss Stewart Brown, the aunt of the bride.

Eginton-Auchincloss Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Eginton of 180 West Fifty-ninth Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace Eginton, to John Auchincloss of this city. Mr. Auchincloss is a son of Mrs. Henry B. Auchincloss, and was graduated from Princeton in the class of '95. The wedding will take place in December.

BLANCHE RING IS MARRIED AGAIN

Actress Weds Charles J. Winninger, Actor, Following Her Divorce from Fred E. McKay.

IT IS HER THIRD MARRIAGE

News of Her Divorce from Former Dramatic Critic Learned with the Announcement of Her Wedding.

Blanche Ring, the actress, is again a wife. She was married in Boston last week, but the fact was kept secret until yesterday, when she wrote to friends in this city announcing that she had been wedded to Charles J. Winninger of Wausau, Wis., an actor in her production of "The Wall Street Girl." This is the third marriage of the well-known actress. Her first husband was James Walker, Jr., who obtained a divorce.

Her second husband was Frederick Edward McKay, former dramatic critic and now a theatrical manager. The actress was playing in Boston last night, where she admitted the marriage, and added:

"Yes, I have received my divorce from Frederick McKay, and was married to Charles J. Winninger last Tuesday in Boston at the home of his mother."

Frederick Edward McKay said last night that he had received a letter from Miss Ring announcing that she had remarried. "I sent her my congratulations," said McKay. Mr. McKay declined to give any particulars of the divorce suit.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD DEAD.

Head of the Famous Edinburgh Publishing House of Blackwood & Sons.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—William Blackwood, the publisher, died to-day.

William Blackwood, grandson of the founder of the publishing house of Blackwood & Sons of Edinburgh, and of the famous Blackwood's Magazine, was born in Lucknow, India, in 1836. His father was a Major in the Fifty-ninth Native Infantry. The son was trained for a literary profession, and after his graduation from Edinburgh University, was sent abroad to study, first at the Sorbonne in Paris, and then at the University of Heidelberg.

At the age of 21 years William Blackwood entered the publishing business under his father and uncle, and in 1861 became the head of the house. Outside of his business, he was interested in military affairs

W. S. PENLEY, COMEDIAN, DIES

Noted for His Acting in "Charley's Aunt" and "The Private Secretary."

LONDON, Nov. 11.—William Sydney Penley, one of the best-known comedians on the British stage, died to-day. He became a professional actor in 1871 and later toured the United States. Since 1901 he had practically retired from the stage.

William Sydney Penley was born at St. Peter's, Margate, England, in 1852, the son of a schoolmaster.

Mr. Penley toured America in 1880 with the Hanlon Lees, and returned to London a year later to take part in "The Vicar of Bray" at the Globe. When "The Private Secretary" was moved from the Globe he succeeded Beerbohm Tree in the rôle of the Rev. Robert Spalding. After acting in several other plays he took the management of the Royalty Theatre in 1892 and produced "Charley's Aunt," which ran for 1,466 nights at the Royalty and the Globe. He rebuilt the Queen Street Theatre in 1898 and revived "Charley's Aunt." In 1900 he appeared in "Little Sunshine," but retired from the stage shortly after the production of this piece.

Through "The Private Secretary" and "Charley's Aunt" he amassed a considerable fortune.

SIR REGINALD BEAUCHAMP.

Fifth Baron of the Title, a Soldier and Traveler, Dies.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Sir Reginald William Proctor-Beauchamp died to-day. He is succeeded in the baronetcy by his brother, Col. Horace George Beauchamp, who married Florence Leavitt, daughter of H. M. Leavitt of New York.

Sir Reginald Beauchamp was the fifth Baronet of the title which was established in 1774. He was born in 1855, and, after being educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, entered the army, being present at the battle of Spika Pass against the Turkish forces. From 1879 on he spent most of his time in traveling, visiting China and Japan in that year, a journey which was considered dangerous then on account of the animosity of Orientals toward Europeans. His clubs were the Carlton, Marlborough, Travelers and Bachelors.

ED. M. C. FITZGERALD DEAD.

Long Island Pioneer Real Estate Speculator a Victim of Heart Disease.

Edward M. C. Fitzgerald, a pioneer real estate speculator of Long Island, died on Sunday from heart disease at the home of his sister, Shore Road and Seventy-fourth Street, Brooklyn. He was 49 years old. His wife and daughter, who are absent in Europe, were notified by cable. With his family, Mr. Fitzgerald lived at 22 West Fifty-ninth Street, Manhattan, but his home has been closed for two months during the absence of his wife and daughter.

In suburban real estate circles Mr. Fitzgerald had long been a conspicuous figure. Early in life he was associated with the old insurance firm of Benedict & Benedict. He entered the real estate field twenty-five years ago as an operator in Long Island acreage ready for suburban development.

THE HOME OF THE DAUGHTERS OF JACOB APPEALS.

The above Institution, located at Nos. 301-302-303 East Broadway, is housing 185 poor and infirm aged men and women. Its annual expense is $35,000, collected by voluntary contributions.

The constantly increasing number of worthy applicants that have to be turned away because of lack of space in the present Home has induced the officers and directors of this Institution to purchase 36 lots in the Bronx to build on it a Home for 500 inmates.

The sum of $10,000 is still needed to take title to the above named property, and unless this sum can be raised title cannot be taken, and a most deserving cause will suffer.

An appeal is made by this Organization to the charitable public, who have the cause of the poor and homeless aged at heart, to come to their aid at this time of their financial embarrassment.

Draw checks to the order of the Home of the Daughters of Jacob, and send to Joseph Zelenko, Treasurer Building Fund, 301 East Broadway, City.

Mrs. Harriet B. Coolidge Dead at 96.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Through the death here yesterday of Mrs. Harriet Bowen Coolidge, widow of Dr. Richard H. Collidge, U. S. A., and daughter of the late Commodore Charles Morris, U. S. N., Washington loses one of its remarkable women. Mrs. Coolidge died of pneumonia in the ninety-sixth year of her age. She was one of the very few persons who knew the Marquis de Lafayette, "Dolly" Madison, and Commodores Bainbridge, Tingey, and Stewart of the old navy. Her father, Commodore Morris, who died in Washington four years prior to the outbreak of the civil war, was one of the heroes of the old navy. Mrs. Coolidge was a woman of interesting personality, and, despite her advanced age, retained all her mental faculties practically until the hour of her death.

Obituary Notes.

LAWRENCE TROUDFOOT BOSTWICK, formerly a Custom House official at the Port of New York, died last night at his home, 100 West Seventy-sixth Street. He was 88 years old. Mr. Bostwick retired from active work twenty years ago. He was a trustee of St. Andrew's Methodist Episcopal Church. He is survived by a son and two daughters.

Dr. THOMAS S. HENRY, said to be the last surviving grandson of Patrick Henry, died yesterday at Red Hill, the famous ancestral home of the Henry family. He was 80 years old.

The Rev. Dr. J. T. PLUNKETT, pastor of the South Highlands Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Ala., and one of the most widely known ministers of the South, died suddenly on Sunday of heart disease, just as he entered his home. He was 64 years old.

Dr. L. B. GRADDY, for sixteen years a resident of Nashville, and one of the best known eye, ear, and throat specialists of the South, is dead at Lexington, Tenn. He was 67 years old. Dr. Graddy for 12 years filled the chair of ear, eye, and throat of the University of Nashville. have at times surplus money that they would invest to secure good interest if it could be converted into cash immediately.

Issues regarded as speculative by one generation have become the investment securities of another generation.

Your business may be such that at certain times you have more cash than you need and others you may be forced to use all available assistance. There is also a possibility of business depression, at which time you would have to have the cash. Stocks or bonds can be sold at once.

Let us help you make your investments. Our records are thorough and complete, so that we can readily furnish you an accurate report on any security, and will be glad to on request.

Our Letter This Week Is On
U. S. STEEL

Each week we issue a weekly letter dealing with one particular stock, which after careful study we believe a good investment, yielding a good return, and also one which should increase in value. This will be sent on request. Remember, we are brokers for the small as well as the large investor. We make a specialty of executing small lots of stock, either to be bought outright, on margin, or on our monthly payment plan.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Close Weak After Hour of Heavy Selling—European Situation Still Unsettling.

Sensitiveness of the financial markets, due to the European political situation, served yesterday to restrict the support which the market received in the face of a very aggressive selling movement in the last hour of trading, with the result that prices under this pressure broke sharply and closed at the lowest. For the fourth successive day, following the sharp upturn on the day after election, the market closed at a net loss, the series of declines carrying the general level of quotations to a figure an even half point under the average on the eve of the election. Intermingled with the actual liquidation yesterday was a good deal of selling, which seemed to be prompted by a desire to give it as much adverse influence upon prices as circumstances permitted. Conditions favored the success of this bear pressure and its success in turn served to further unsettle general stock market sentiment.

Much stress was laid on a statement by Mr. Wilson, which was interpreted in the financial district as foreshadowing an early announcement from him that he was in favor of a special session of Congress to take up the revision of the tariff. Why such a logical development as this should be offered in explanation of the weakness which prices showed is hard to surmise unless it be accepted as the excuse for rather than the reason of the break. A reasonable view of this matter and one which is taken in high banking quarters is that early revision of the tariff will be preferable to the long postponement of the readjustment which is an inevitable result of the outcome of last week's election. Undoubtedly there is uneasiness in the minds of some regarding the influence which reduction in import duties will have upon business, but this uneasiness would be increased rather than diminished by putting off the framing of a new tariff law. It is fortunate that the country already sees ahead of it such a very large volume of business not dependent upon any changes which are to be made in the tariff and which will in all probability maintain activity in industry and commerce during the time that will necessarily be devoted to the casting of a new tariff law. From no point of view can the early settlement of this question be fairly regarded as reason for stock market unsettlement. The views entertained in some quarters regarding the expected revision of the tariff may, however, be lessening the disposition of some interests to add to their security holdings. To this extent the probability of a special session of Congress soon after the inauguration of Mr. Wilson may have helped along with the European situation to leave the market yesterday afternoon open to the successful conduct of an aggressive bear movement.

In respect to the foreign situation much more than the facts warranted was made of the defeat of the Government in a vote taken in Parliament yesterday on a clause of the Home Rule bill, for the news of this vote was quickly followed by assurances that it was altogether improbable that this snap vote would lead to the resignation of the Government at a time when the general European situation is giving cause for concern. Of the international political situation it was still felt in the highest banking quarters here—and the day's advices from our bankers' associates abroad concurred with this view—that while the situation for some time longer may remain one suggestive of caution to all the financial markets, the ultimate outcome will be a peaceful settlement of the problems which the overthrow of Turkey in Europe by the Balkan allies had brought up in a way calling for immediate settlement. The money and securities markets must inevitably reflect uneasiness so long as the possibility of a conflict overhangs Europe, but each day of further exchanges among the great powers renders just so much more probable an ultimate settlement without a conflict.

Arrangements made yesterday indicated that a further considerable amount of stock would be shipped to this market from London during the fortnightly settlement which began there yesterday, but these shipments promise to be smaller than those made at the two previous settlements. The present foreign dealings in this market are small, yesterday's sales for London and Continental account being too limited to be a factor of any consequence on the Stock Exchange here. The European markets, it would appear, have already disposed of so large a part of their floating supply of American securities that under all ordinary circumstances further liquidation from the other side must, it would seem, be in very limited volume. On the other hand there seems sound warrant for the belief voiced in banking circles that as soon as the European political situation clears, foreign buying on a considerable scale will make its appearance in this market.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 5¼@6 per cent., with the last loan at 5½ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 5¼ per cent.

Time money rates were 5¾@6¼ per cent. for sixty days and ninety days, and 5½@5¾ per cent. for four months, and 5¼@5½ per cent. for five and six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5½@6 per cent. for the best names.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $239,725,581; balances, $14,298,660; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,105,763.

The local banks have lost $861,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 4 15-16@5 per cent. for short bills, and 4 15-16 per cent. for three months' bills; Paris, 4¾@4⅞ per cent., and Berlin 4 per cent. Money was 3@3¾ per cent. in London and 4 per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25f. 23c., and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 54 pfennigs.

Foreign exchange rates at the points noted were quoted as follows at the close of business yesterday:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

An Unsuccessful Venture.

Some fine material for the Socialist orators, who address a crowd on the burning issues of the day almost every forenoon in front of J. P. Morgan's office, was manufactured under their very eyes yesterday, but, unfortunately for them, no orator was at hand to take advantage of it. A half-sized foreigner, who may have heard of Wall Street as the place that makes men rich, had been watching the destruction of the old Equitable building and the removal of the junk with covetous eyes. When it seemed that none of the workmen were looking his way yesterday, he wrenched loose a piece of zinc cornice and tried to slip away. A hue and cry was immediately raised, and a crowd started in pursuit of a terror-stricken wretch who was running down Nassau Street past the Sub-Treasury building. He had almost reached Wall Street when he was headed off and apprehended. A mounted policeman who had heard that some one had looted the Sub-Treasury came galloping up, and the criminal was escorted back to the office of the contracting firm by an escort of several hundred men and boys.

⁂

A Slump in Averages.

At the low point yesterday the average price of the railroad issues was 93.43, which compares with the high point of 97.28 on Oct. 4. The break in the final hour brought about a decline of 1.04 in the railroad average, with a net loss at the close of .65. For the industrials the low point yesterday was 65.91, which compares with a high average of 74.50 on Sept. 30. The industrials lost 1.08 points from the high point of the day, and closed with a net loss of .68.

⁂

Beet Sugar Off Further.

The prospect of injury to the beet sugar industry through the removal or modification of the tariff on sugar is still being reflected in American Beet Sugar prices. Yesterday the issue lost another 1⅜ points, closing at 55⅝. While the stock has sold as high as 77 this year, it is still 2⅜ above its low point touched in February.

⁂

A Big Gain for Granby.

Sales of Granby Consolidated Copper do not occur often, but when they do they are likely to attract attention. The issue sold yesterday at 74⅛, which represents an advance of 24⅛ points from the previous sale. That, however, was made on April 10.

⁂

The Poor Express Companies.

Time was when an investment in an express company's shares was looked upon as about as safe as one in a first mortgage bond. No one seemed to realize the fragile nature of the undertaking until the Postmaster General prepared to institute a test of the parcels post scheme. Yesterday there was a sale of Adams Express Company stock at 164¾, a drop of 10¼ points. Early in the year Adams sold at 205, and the lowest price at which 100 shares sold in 1911 was 235. Wells Fargo sold yesterday at 119 and 115, the lower quotation showing a drop of three points from the last sale. United States sold at 67, the last previous full sale having been made at 71, while odd lots of American changed hands at 180 and 175, as against a previous quotation of 182.

⁂

Activity Unevenly Distributed.

In late weeks the stock market has had a trick of moving quietly along until near the close, and then ending the day in a sudden spurt that completely changes the aspect of the list. Yesterday the opening was strong, and the subsequent dullness made it appear that the close would prove uneventful. In the first two hours of the session total dealings amounted to only 159,000 shares, as against the 390,000 shares done in the two-hour session last Saturday. In the first four hours yesterday the total was but 242,000 shares. In the last hour, with prices rapidly declining, the sales were almost as large as for the four hours preceding, making the day's total 470,000 shares. Up to the beginning of the final hour 21,900 shares of Union Pacific had appeared on the tape, and 22,300 more changed hands by 3 o'clock. In Steel 52,900 shares were dealt in during the first four hours, and 56,400 in the final hour. In Reading the figures were 47,100 and 36,100, respectively, and in Amalgamated Copper, 13,700 and 16,800 shares. Margin clerks who had suffered from ennui throughout the day found it necessary to work overtime as a result of the break that occurred in the last hour. The drop was greater than indicated by the net losses at the end of the day, for most of the issues opened firm and made some advance before the downward movement was initiated.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

London Market Irregular—Prices Heavy in Paris—General Fall in Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 12.—The Times in its City article this morning says:

"The supply of money was reduced a little, owing to the maturing of bills held by the Bank of England. Day-to-day advances were quoted a shade higher, but fixtures were barely maintained.

"The discount rate rose slightly for two and three months' bills, with only a moderate business doing.

"The Bank will probably secure the bulk of the South African bar gold this week.

"Continental exchange was generally steady, but Paris cheque fell ¼.

"On the whole the tone of the stock markets was rather steadier during the first hour, there being a general disposition to put prices a shade higher on the Prime Minister's speech at the Guildhall on Saturday. This improvement was not maintained long, and the tone became dull, owing to a feeling of nervousness with regard to the foreign political situation and the fact that the settlement was in progress. The tendency was to still further restrict business.

"There was a little selling on Continental account, which adversely affected foreign stocks.

"In the afternoon Wall Street supported American securities at the lower level established on this side, although the buying was not sufficiently keen to wipe out the whole of the initial decline.

"The news of the defeat of the Government on the Home Rule bill did not arrive until after the house was shut."

The Times, discussing the stock market, says:

"New York is evidently inclined to take an optimistic view of the American situation and seems restrained from expressing it in the form of active and firm markets only by the fear of future trouble in Europe. Prudence in this respect is well advised, for New York would not be strong enough to run a bull campaign of its own in the face of the really bad markets here and in Paris."

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 89 francs 25 centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Realizing caused a general fall in prices on the Boerse to-day.

Manufacturing and Industrial Securities

Our offerings comprise the stocks of well established and successful corporations. They are tax exempt. Their dividends are regular and satisfactory and they are strongly safeguarded.

They can be purchased at prices that will yield from 5 to 7%.

They are equally well adapted to the requirements of trustees and small investors and can be substituted, to good advantage, for issues giving a relatively low yield.

Our November circular gives full information as to their merits.

Surplus	*398,701	985,474	1,769,088

*Deficit.

These figures exclude Panama Canal and public debt transactions.

The condition of the United States Treasury at the beginning of business to-day was: Working balance, $94,380,090; in banks and Philippine Treasury, $30,485,151. Total of general fund, $149,318,122.

EXPLAINS FOR COTTON OIL.

President Says Passing of Dividend Will Lead to Greater Prosperity.

Robert F. Munro, President of the American Cotton Oil Company, in his annual report to stockholders yesterday, explained the failure of the Directors to declare a dividend on the common stock as follows:

"The Directors have carefully considered the question of disposition of the surplus earnings of the year, $1,314,582, and have reached the conclusion that the interest of the shareholders and the permanent prosperity of the company will be best served by utilizing these earnings in the development of the business of the company.

"The cotton crop, upon which your company depends for the supply of the major portion of its raw material—cotton seed—for the season 1911-12 was the largest in the history of this country. The large cotton crop did not, however, yield to the oil mills a proportionately large quantity of cotton seed because in some sections considerable quantities became damaged while being held by the planters for higher prices, and a larger quantity than usual was used for fertilizer and cattle feeding purposes, being relatively cheaper than commercial fertilizers or other available feedstuffs.

"Stocks of oil brought over at the beginning of the year were comparatively small, and owing to a scarcity of other edible fats abroad there was an urgent demand for cottonseed oil during September and part of October, with a sharp advance in price, which led to excessive prices being paid for cotton seed. When the demand was satisfied, prices for oil and cotton seed receded to considerably lower levels than obtained in the previous year."

MONEY TRUST INQUIRY WAITS.

Committee Meeting on Nov. 20 Is Only for Mapping Future Work.

The taking of testimony in the Money Trust investigation, it is understood, will not be resumed when the Pujo Committee meets in Washington on Nov. 20.

The committee has been called together for that date for the purpose of conferring with its counsel, Samuel Untermyer and E. H. Farrar, in order to consider the data that have been prepared by its agents during the Summer and to map out plans for its future procedure.

To Holders of the

ATLANTIC & GULF PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY'S

FIRST MORTGAGE 6 PER CENT. 20-YEAR GOLD BONDS:

The Bondholders' Committee, formed under the Agreement of Deposit dated May 1, 1912, calls your attention to the fact that the ATLANTIC AND GULF PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY has been thrown into involuntary bankruptcy on the petition of certain general creditors filed in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Alabama, (Middle Division,) that the Fidelity Trust Company, Philadelphia, trustee of the mortgage by which the "First Mortgage 6 Per Cent. 20-Year Gold Bonds" of the ATLANTIC AND GULF PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY are secured, to the amount of $1,500,000, has intervened in the bankruptcy proceedings for the purpose of having the entire plant and property of the company sold according to the terms of the mortgage, and that under the orders of the Court such a sale will in due course take place.

The Bondholders' Committee, controlling over 90 per cent. of the entire issue of $1,500,000 first mortgage bonds, and being of the opinion that an early adjustment of the affairs of the company can best be effected by terminating the time for deposit, has designated November 15, 1912, as the last day upon which deposits will be accepted by the depositary, the

PHILADELPHIA TRUST, SAFE DEPOSIT AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
413 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

The right is reserved to the Committee after that date to admit or reject any or all bonds which may be offered for deposit.

REORGANIZATION OF SOUTHERN IRON AND STEEL COMPANY.

Referring to the Modified Plan for the Reorganization of Southern Iron and Steel Company, dated July 13, 1912, notice is hereby given that John W. Platten has been elected as Chairman of the Committee in succession to Cecil A. Grenfell, who has resigned as a member of the Committee, and Alfred A. Cook has been added to the Committee.

There have been deposited and are now subject to the Modified Plan of Reorganization over 89% of the bonds, 88% of the secured notes, and over 91% of the debentures of Southern Iron and Steel Company.

In view of the large amount of deposits already received and the probability of an early sale of the properties of the Southern Iron and Steel Company, the Committee has extended the time for the deposit of bonds, secured notes, and debentures until the close of business on NOVEMBER 30, 1912.

Pursuant to the powers in that respect conferred upon the Committee by the Modified Plan, the Committee has determined to permit the holders of claims against the Southern Iron and Steel Company (in addition to the bonds, secured notes, and debentures) to participate in the benefits of the reorganization upon the deposit of said claims or a statement thereof, and, in either case, with an assignment thereof in form approved by the Committee, with the Depositary under the Modified Plan, to the extent and in the manner provided in an agreement dated November 4th, 1912, which the Committee has executed and filed with the Depositary, copies of which may be obtained upon application to the Depositary or to the Secretary of the Committee. Certificates of deposit will be issued upon the deposit of all such claims which may be made until the close of business on NOVEMBER 30, 1912.

All deposits must be made with BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, the Depositary under the Modified Plan, at its office, No. 16 Wall Street, New York City.

No deposits will be received after November 30, 1912, except with the consent of the Committee and upon such terms as it may approve.

GRAND TRUNK DEAL WITH MELLEN IS ON

Canadian Railway Negotiating to Carry Its Business Into All Stations of New Haven System.

BOSTON & MAINE INCLUDED

Byrnes Admits Agreement for Use of Certain Tracks—Halt in Work on Subsidiary Line Explained.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—The Grand Trunk Railway of Canada is negotiating with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad for the right not only to reach Boston and Providence over the lines of the latter road, but also to carry its business into all the stations of the entire New Haven system, including the Boston & Maine road, from a statement given out to-night by Timothy E. Byrnes, Vice President of the New Haven.

The statement is issued to explain the reasons for discontinuing work on the Southern New England Railroad, the Grand Trunk's subsidiary, which step was announced yesterday.

Mr. Byrnes says an agreement has been reached for the joint use of the Central Vermont tracks between Windsor and White River Junction, Vt. The withdrawal of the petition by the Boston & Maine for a branch road from Claremont to Lebanon, N. H., paralleling the Central Vermont line, was announced last Saturday.

Although it is said the exact reason for ordering a suspension of work on the Southern New England Railroad is not known to President Mellen, it is admitted that joint negotiations are under way looking to a joint use of the New Haven lines by the New Haven and Grand Trunk roads.

The statement by Mr. Byrnes follows:

> Vice President Byrnes has talked over the telephone this evening with Mr. Mellen at his residence in Stockbridge and has been assured by Mr. Mellen that there has been no agreement of any description yet arrived at with the Grand Trunk Railway, except as to the joint use of Central Vermont tracks between Windsor and White River Junction.
>
> That Mr. Mellen has been at various times in communication with Mr. Chamberlin and thinks it probable an agreement as to traffic will also be made, but that there has been no understanding, expressed or implied, with regard to the Southern New England extension, and if the Grand Trunk has discontinued this work, as stated in the newspapers, it was because the Grand Trunk believed it advisable from its own standpoint, and not from any understanding between itself and the New Haven Road.
>
> That the facts are, the New Haven Road has not paid and will not pay one dollar to the Grand Trunk to stop the construction of the Southern New England Road. All negotiations with the Grand Trunk have been open and above board from the beginning and will so continue until the end, and have been conducted as would similar negotiations between any other two companies. The negotiations referred to as pending have been with a view of putting the Grand Trunk into all of the territory reached by the New Haven and Boston & Maine lines—the conferences particularly being with a view to working out the divisions of joint rates and the arrangements for interchange of through traffic. The effect of such an arrangement, if finally made, will be to put the Grand Trunk business not only into Boston and Providence, but into all the stations of the entire New Haven system.

Gov. Eugene N. Foss, who last June signed a bill permitting the Grand Trunk Railway to enter Boston, caused the following statement to be isssued to-day:

"The Governor regrets that for any cause whatever the Grand Trunk Railroad should cease building its line to Boston, but lack of official information other than what appears in the morning papers prevents him from making further comment at this time."

Mayor Fitzgerald called on Gov. Foss at noon with a request that a conference be arranged between the financial and business men of the city relative to taking action on the Grand Trunk situation. The Mayor also asked Secretary McKibben of the Chamber of Commerce to call a meeting of his organization on Wednesday next for the same purpose.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 11.—A committee to investigate the cause of the cessation of work by the Grand Trunk on its proposed Rhode Island branch was authorized by the Executive Council of the Providence Board of Trade at a special meeting to-day.

The board sent the following telegram to President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk:

"The Providence Board of Trade desires explicit statement as to whether suspension of construction work on the Southern New England Railway Company within the State of Rhode Island is merely temporary or whether it means ultimate abandonment of the Southern New England Railway lines within this State."

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 11.—The announcement that work has been suspended on the Providence extension of the Central Vermont has caused much comment and speculation here. E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk Railway, refused to throw any further light on the situation this morning, explaining that E. H. Fitzhugh, President of the Central Vermont Railway, was the proper authority to make an official statement.

Mr. Fitzhugh, seen in his home by a TIMES representative, referred the visitor back to the offices of the Grand Trunk, where the order for discontinuing the work had been issued by the President. A statement on behalf of the company was made by C. Y. Warman of the Grand Trunk, who returned from Boston yesterday. He said:

"The general tendency on the part of the people and those who speak for the people, both in the United States and Canada, is to put pressure on the railways, to load them with burdens, and to increase their difficulties, as well as the expenses of operation, all of which tends to discourage capital to such an extent that new railway construction is by no means attractive to investors. Rates are lower on the Continent than anywhere else in the world. Now, instead of hoping for better conditions, the indications are that they will be made more burdensome. We have seen this here in the demand for lower rates in the West. Up here they already are lower than across the border."

A Director of the New Haven, who was in New York yesterday, said that the cessation of work on the Providence line was likely to be permanent, and would result to the advantage of both the Grand Trunk and the New Haven companies.

ASK CANADA, SAYS SMITHERS.

Grand Trunk Chairman Refers Inquirer to Chamberlain for Information.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Alfred W. Smithers, Chairman of the Grand Trunk, to-day declined to discuss the discontinuance of work on the Canadian system's extension into New England.

"I never take up here a question that is in negotiation on the other side," he explained. "You must ask President Chamberlin in Montreal."

Pressed for a statement, he insisted he had nothing to say.

CUDAHYS PAY $1,300 FINES.

Government Cult, Involving 273 Counts, Is Compromised.

ATLANTA, Nov. 11.—Indictments against the Cudahy Packing Company, charging violations of the law governing the sale of oleomargarine, have been nolle prossed, as the Government and the company have agreed upon a compromise.

The indictment contained 273 counts, and had the case gone to trial and the company been found guilty the fines would have aggregated $500,000. The compromise was made on a cash basis of $1,300, the company paying court costs.

The indictments grew out of the alleged discovery that Thomas Hopkins, a local dealer, was selling as butter some oleomargarine, which he colored. It was found that the oleomargarine was bought from the Cudahy Company. It was represented that the company's violation of the law was technical and unintentional. The case against Hopkins is still pending.

COST OF HANDLING COAL.

Specialists Give This as Reason for Proposed Increase in Price.

The price of coal to consumers remained at $6.75 a ton in some parts of the city yesterday, but it was predicted that it would go up 25 cents a ton all over the city in a day or two. There is less coal than usual coming in, and the effort to give it wide distribution increases the cost of handling. It was this increase, it was said, that might result in the increase in price.

It was declared again by the coal operators that there would be no suffering from lack of coal. The independent dealers said they doubted this statement. The operators insisted that the price of domestic sizes would remain at $5.25 a ton at tidewater, thus allowing the retailer $1.50 for carrying and handling charges and his profit.

The coal operators, who handle more than 90 per cent. of all the coal mined in the anthracite region, issued another statement yesterday in which they said that some of the independent operators were selling their output at a premium above the circular price, and that whenever a retailer increased his price it was because he bought his coal from an independent operator. This part of the statement incensed one of the big independent operators yesterday.

"The term 'coal operators,'" he said, "simply means the combination of mine owners who have a practical monopoly of the carrying facilities. They are supposed to work together and to adhere to an agreed price for their coal. But as a matter of fact it is understood that a few thousand tons slip away at stated periods for sale at an advance of anywhere from 25 to 75 cents a ton. In a time of scarcity, real or assumed, this coal is sold readily at the advance, and when there is an outcry about it, it is declared that the coal was sent to market by an independent.

"The big operators have plenty of coal, but they send it to Buffalo, and from there ship it by water to the West. New York is the big market, and here is where the squeeze will come. A good deal of coal is being held until the demand is acute. There is not one thousand tons of stove size in this city."

A representative of one of the big coal roads said there was no danger of a coal famine here, nor anything like it.

F. W. Saward, the Business Manager of The Coal Trade Journal, said there was some truth in the statements of both sides of the coal-producing concerns.

"There was an excess tonnage," he said, "in June, July, August, September, and October to the amount of 3,051,657 tons, as compared with the same months last year. The labor conditions, as well as the physical conditions appertaining to the mines, prevented a larger increase. Twenty per cent. of the total product was sent West. The smaller quantity of coal makes it more difficult for the retailers to handle. It makes more handling. The operators' charge at tidewater is $5.25 a ton for stove size, while the price of the independents' is higher. The operators have adhered to their schedule."

HEARING ON TERMINAL PLAN.

Tomkins Insists City Should Declare Itself—Support for Him.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins discussed his plans for the South Brooklyn freight terminal at the public hearing yesterday in the Aldermanic Chamber. The Commissioner dealt only with a marginal freight way along the water front between the Brooklyn Bridge and the Pennsylvania Terminal. Regarding the plan Commissioner Tomkins said:

"The road need not be constructed at once throughout its length; nor need all of the private links in the system be immediately acquired. It is sufficient if the city shall make clear its intention of maintaining the line as a public highway by formally adopting it as the essential public feature of the terminal system at South Brooklyn. No expense or appropriations are involved in the declaration of the city's policy by adopting this plan. But the city's intention of ultimately acquiring and completely controlling this railroad highway should be conclusively established now.

"The city's potential ability always to provide the best inter-connecting railway service for its existing and prospective docks will tend progressively to make its water front properties self-sustaining and so promote the continuous public acquisition and development of all the water front as a prudent and profitable use of city funds."

William H. Gibson, Chairman of the Committee on Water Front Improvements of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, read the committee's report, which indorses the general proposals of the Dock Department. The hearing was then adjourned until Thursday, when it will reconvene in the offices of the Dock Department on Pier A.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Prisms, Drinking Straws, Soya Bean, and Sesame Oils Considered.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled a protest by Siegman & Weil on cut glass prismatic pendants for chandeliers. The pendants were attached to other glass by metal rings. Collector Loeb returned the goods under Paragraph 98 at 60 per cent. The importers sought to bring them in under Paragraph 109, as "manufactures of metal," at 45 per cent. ad valorem.

A protest sustained was by the Hygeia Antiseptic Tootpick Company on drinking straws returned under the Act of 1909, at 35 per cent. ad valorem, as "manufactures of straw." The importer made several claims, one for duty at 20 per cent., as "unenumerated manufactured articles." Judge McClelland held that while the goods were not "manufactures of straw," they were "straws manufactured." As there was no specific provision for such, the goods were relegated to the "catch-all" paragraph of the law as asked by the importer.

Lower duty on decorated china, assessed at 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 93 of the Act of 1909, was denied. The cases were submitted without evidence. The importers included C. B. & J. Warner, Ovington Brothers, G. Frankel & Sons, L. Straus & Sons, and W. C. Horn, Brother & Co.

The board overruled a claim filed by K. Hirade & Co. on soya bean and sesame oils mixed and taxed at 25 per cent. under Paragrah 3 of the present act, as a combination oil. The importer asked free entry under Paragraph 639 on the plea that if the oils had been imported separately no duty would accrue.

SHOE DEMAND INCREASES.

Spot Buying Resumed Here After Last Month's Lull.

The last few days have brought increased activity in the local shoe market. Buying that had been interrupted by the election and by unfavorable weather was resumed, and indications pointed to a recovery of the business lost in the last two weeks of October. The demand in the houses selling to the middle class trade was confined to more staple styles than usual, and there was little call reported for the few freak shoes offered. Export trade kept up well. Spring business was active.

There is an excellent demand for women's satin and calf boots, satin lined, in greens, pinks, blues and other colors for evening wear. These are shown for the first time this Fall, and are already supplanting the evening slipper. A novelty in the shape of a satin evening slipper with lace overwork has taken well with the better class trade.

CLOTHING TRADE ACTIVE.

Improvement Reported in Last Few Days—Overcoats Wanted.

Business in the clothing trade continues active, and a slight improvement in the volume of orders received during the week is reported. Out-of-town buyers are in the market after goods for immediate delivery, and the demand for overcoats is particularly good. Belted backs in basket weaves and diagonals are especially popular this season. Manufacturers of blue chinchilla coats are finding it difficult to fill orders. Shawl collars are selling well. Many factories are running to full capacity, and, in general, the trade seems satisfied with existing conditions. Orders for Spring 1913 are coming in well. Worsteds are in good demand throughout the South, and an increase in the call for these goods from other parts of the country is noticeable.

A Silver Anniversary.

Brill Brothers, the clothiers, are celebrating to-day the twenty-fifth anniversary of their entry into business. Starting with one small store in November, 1887 at 45 Cortlandt Street, the business has grown to five large shops, occupying several of the best sites on the leading thoroughfares. The original capital of the firm was only $300.

12,000 QUIT BELLEVUE A YEAR NEEDING AID

Alienist Tells Mental Hygiene Conference Many Are Ready for Serious Breakdowns.

ASKS FOR SOCIAL WORKERS

Who Would Follow Discharged Patients and Help Them Back to Normal States of Mind.

Dr. M. S. Gregory, resident alienist of Bellevue Hospital, speaking before the Conference on Mental Hygiene at the College of the City of New York last night, made the assertion that 12,000 patients, including insane, neurotics, alcoholics, and patients who had attempted suicide, were turned out of Bellevue Hospital every year, fit subjects for mental breakdowns, and often for insane asylums, and that nearly all of these 12,000 patients might be saved from hopeless ends by having trained visiting social workers look after them after leaving the hospital.

Dr. Gregory's whole lecture was devoted to social service work as a preventive of mental breakdown, and he advocated the establishment by the city of social centres from which trained nurses might work under competent leaders and in conjunction with the hospitals of the city. The object of such a system, he said, would be to keep informed on the mental condition of every man, woman or child that had ever been a patient in a hospital. He cited many cases that had come under his observation as head of the psychopathic ward in Bellevue, and which had been followed outside the hospital by the hospital's staff of social workers. In each case he showed the work of the social worker was as material or more material than the medical treatment accorded the patient, and sufficed to place the patient on his feet and to make him self-supporting.

"A large number of patients," said Dr. Gregory, "annually came to the psychopathic wards and the clinics who, while not sufficiently diseased to require hospital treatment, are yet not well enough to adjust themselves without some aid and assistance. This includes the neuroses, neurasthenias, obsessions, phobias, fixed ideas, and a host of allied conditions which offer the most fertile field for the social worker. Many of these patients are repeatedly returned to our wards in a more aggravated condition; it is my belief that were every one of these cases followed up by a competent social worker, and looked after in a systematic and intelligent manner under the direction of physicians, a more serious breakdown could be averted in the great majority of cases.

"Another group which requires social service is that of the really mentally ill, who at present are sent to the State hospitals. I believe that several hundred out of the 2,500 who are annually committed to State hospitals could be cared for at home, and support themselves and families under systematic and intelligent social service direction."

Here the speaker gave a number of instances of persons who had been saved from asylums.

"Among alcoholics," he continued, "the field for social service work is a broad one, and I believe many who have not undergone marked deterioration might be reclaimed, and perhaps in no other way as effectively as by social service.

The programme for to-day includes moving pictures of State hospitals at 4 P. M. in the main building of the college and lectures in the Townsend Harris Hall at 8 P. M. by Dr. George H. Kirby, Director of Clinical Psychiatry at the Manhattan State Hospital; Dr. A. J. Rosanoff of Kings Park Hospital, Everett S. Ellwood of the State Charities Aid Association, and Prof. Thomas N. Balliet, Dean of the School of Pedagogy, New York University.

BLIND MAN ADMITTED TO BAR.

Two Women Also Took the Lawyer's Oath in the Appellate Division.

One hundred men and two women were admitted to the bar yesterday, when they took the Constitutional oath in the presence of the Justices of the Appellate Division of the First Department.

One of the men admitted to practice law was Benjamin Berinstein of 102 West 115th Street. Berinstein is blind and has been so from infancy, but notwithstanding this great handicap, he completed the course required for the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Columbia College, receiving that degree in 1910. He was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society, for high scholarship. Last June, Berinstein was graduated from the Columbia Law School, and on his first attempt, passed the bar examination.

The two women who became lawyers yesterday were Miss Jean E. Burnet of 120 West Fifty-seventh Street and Miss Sophie Kleban of 14 West Eighth Street. Those admitted to practice were:

SAYS EVERY SCHOOL IS SAFE.

Board of Education May Appeal from Order for Escapes to the Roofs.

"We do not consider that we have an unsafe public school building in the city," said Charles B. J. Snyder, Superintendent of Buildings of the Department of Education, replying yesterday to the report of violations discovered by the Bureau of Fire Prevention and the accompanying orders of Fire Commissioner Johnson requiring better protection for school children.

Supt. Snyder challenges the action of the Fire Commissioner with this statement regarding the order for fire escapes to the roof:

> In building the schools provision has been made for stairways enough to empty the class rooms in five minutes, the fire drill showing that pupils could form and march out in a little more than half this time. This is one of the points to be taken up at a conference to be held in a few days. If they decide that such provision should be made, it will be done. If not, an appeal from the Commissioner's recommendations will be taken.

A regular committee of the Board of Education, he said, would pass upon the report. This committee, he said, had already passed upon some matters mentioned as "violations" in the Fire Commissioner's report. Referring to the general safety of the school buildings, Superintendent Snyder said:

"If there was an unsafe building you can be sure that we would not open it or allow it to be used. Neither I nor any one of my associates would dare to assume such responsibility."

One of the principal violations found by the Bureau of Fire Prevention was doors opening inward. Mr. Snyder said of this:

"The recommendation that fire buckets be installed is an entirely new one, and for that reason we have not had them in the schools. Our equipment conforms in every particular to the requirements of former Fire Commissioners, and the new rules of the present head of the department are being met as fast as possible."

HABERDASHERY MART ACTIVE.

Shirts, Collars, and Neckties Continue in Good Demand.

The week in local haberdashery circles brought little change. The shirt and collar makers received a good volume of orders in spite of the retarding influence of election, and duplicate business in these lines continued close to record levels for this time of the year. There was, if anything, a slight increase in the call for semi-dress and other fancy shirts, and the improved consuming demand for short bosom effects was reflected in the wholesale market. Collars furnished little feature.

There is apparently no let-up in the call for flat silk merchandise in the men's neckwear trade. The popular-priced grades of knitted scarfs are moving slowly in comparison with last year's demand, but there is still a fairly heavy call for the better grades. Imperials are returning to favor.

BANGKOKS MORE POPULAR.

Local Hat Business Slow, but Road Orders for Spring Good.

While spot business in the hat trade has been rather dull of late, orders from salesmen on the road have been more than satisfactory. There has been an improvement in the demand for stiff hats for immediate delivery, and sales are now about normal for this time of the year. The call for velours and other soft hats has increased, and several manufacturers report the best volume of duplicate business in some time.

The straw hat outlook is particularly promising. Many salesmen have returned from their Fall trips after booking the largest orders in several seasons. Straws of all descriptions received a good call, but it was said that 90 per cent. of the orders were for sennets. The demand in the Southern States was largely for splits of the better grade. Panamas and bangkoks were also wanted. The latter is rapidly gaining in popularity.

NEW IDAHO POWER COMPANY.

Delaware Corporation Plans for a Public Service Business.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Del., Nov. 11.—Articles of incorporation were filed here at the State Department to-day for the Idaho Consolidated Power and Utilities Company, Limited, of New York City, the objects being to do a general public service utility business, such as the construction of railways, telephone and telegraph lines, and water power plants.

The incorporators include Raphael Brill, Simon Gross, and Byron H. Hooper of New York. The capital stock is $3,500,000.

STORM GOES WITH REID.

George L. Storm has resigned as an officer and Director in the United Cigar Manufacturers' Company, George L. Storm & Co., and the Spietz & Worch Company of Detroit, and at a meeting of the Directors of the Tobacco Products Corporation yesterday he was elected a Director and Vice President.

Mr. Storm's accession to the Reid Company, it was said, did not portend an extension of the field of the Tobacco Products Corporation to include the manufacture of cigars or any change in the relations of the three companies from which he resigned.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat and Cotton Collapse—Coarse Grains Close Steady—Coffee Weak.

Wheat broke on the weakness in Liverpool and the bearish European and American statistics. Corn declined early, but closed steady, with limited country offerings. Oats were steady on the large distribution. Provisions were quiet, with small net changes. Cottonseed was easier, with greater selling pressure. Cotton slumped after early strength. There was general liquidation. Foreign conditions are unsettled. Spot markets were firm. Coffee was easier, at small declines.

WHEAT.

Wheat was weak all the morning, rallying a little at the close on evening up in fear of some possible political complication before the opening Tuesday. The market opened weak at about 1c decline, and at one time prices were 1c to 1¼c off from the final of Saturday. The weakness was due to a sharp decline in Liverpool, that market closing at equal to 1¼c to 1⅜c per bushel decline. The Continental markets were generally a little better. The foreign statistics were depressing. World's exports were 13,088,000 bushels, including 7,272,000 bushels from America, against 12,604,000 bushels total last week and 10,800,000 bushels last year. The amount afloat for Europe increased 2,448,000 bushels, and is 37,952,000 bushels. Argentine news was of very favorable weather conditions, and harvest is expected to begin by the end of the month. Free offerings of wheat abroad were reported. The American statistics were also rather bearish. The Northwest cars were 1,981, including Chicago, against 983 last year; Winnipeg, 960 cars, against 565 last year. The interior receipts at American points were 2,696,000 bushels. The domestic visible supply increased 3,654,000 bushels, and the bonded stock increased 316,000 bushels, making a total gain about three times as large as last year. A report on the Canadian supplies by Secretary Fowler of the Canadian Grain Dealers' Association claimed that after full allowance for seed, home requirements, and home milling of all kinds, there was still a surplus of 95,000,000 bushels back in farmers' hands in the Canadian Northwest. No export business was reported either of American or Canadian wheat. No. 2 red was quoted at $1.07, free on board; No. 1 Northern, 98⅛c; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.00½; No. 1 Manitoba, 98⅞c.

OTHER GRAINS.

Corn was easier most of the session, but rallied and closed at a small net gain for the day. Early selling was influenced by the lower wheat market and good weather, but offerings were light, and there were some reports of disappointing husking returns in Illinois. The Ohio crop report makes the crop 105 per cent. of condition, compared with normal. The visible supply showed a decrease of [illegible] bushels. World's exports were 5,640,000 bushels, against 8,164,000 bushels last week. The amount afloat for Europe decreased 1,275,000 bushels. No export sales were reported. Export corn was quoted at 65¾, free on board.

OATS.—Trading was again slow all the session, and continues to be almost exclusively against the handling of cash property. Western receipts were heavy, 1,326,000 bushels, but shipments were nearly equal to the receipts. The visible supply of oats increased 1,022,000 bushels, against a decrease last year of 349,000 bushels. Cash oats were steady, with No. 3 white, 38 to 38½c; standard white, 38½c; No. 2 white, 37 to 37½c, and white clipped 37 to 40½c.

PROVISIONS.

Hog products were quiet, with very small fluctuations, closing at a small net gain for the day. Prices were a little lower early on an easier hog market and larger hog receipts, 83,000, at all points, but contract offerings were small and the close was steady.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Supplementing an irregular opening, the undertone was heavy, due to the prevalence of selling orders for the account of recent buyers. Hedge pressure was also in evidence, and, while there appeared to be some fresh demand, partly for the account of leading refiners and for Western interests, inquiry was more readily supplied. It was averred that crude came out quite frequently on the advance, and toward the close of the session the gossip was that bids had been reduced. Sales of crude during the day were reported at 5.07 at the Valley. Southeastern crude was quoted at 4.94 to 5.00 and Texas at 4.87 to 4.94. Most authorities are obsessed with the belief that a slight betterment has occurred in the consuming trade, but some of the large local bears adhere to their previous expressed opinion that crude is accumulating at the South, that the speculative buying is not concentrated, that the technical position of the market is more vulnerable and that consumers will be indisposed to consider the enhanced values, excepting where requirements are needed for immediate use.

COTTON.

A vigorous liquidating movement received its inception in the late part of yesterday's session, and as a result the first substantial reaction of several weeks was witnessed. The market after having ruled at new high levels, recovering small early declines, set back sharply; the recession measured by about 40 points. There was a difference of opinion as to the motive of the selling, many believing that the decline had been overdue and was to be anticipated with the startling advances of recent date, while others attributed the weakness to the news. Gossip was current that the leading spot houses were unloading. Strong commission houses which absorbed contracts freely of late also sold, with the Waldorf contingent conspicuous.

There was a simultaneous decline in the stock market, which led to the belief that the defeat of the British Government on the Home Rule bill impelled the liquidation. It was apprehended that the result of the balloting in the Parliament would cause further unsettlement, coming upon the chaotic conditions brought about by the Balkan dispute. After the close of the market, however, there were cables received which were more reassuring as to the state of affairs in Great Britain.

Foreigners sold quite freely during the day. It was the disappointing cables from Liverpool and several private cables commenting on the critical situation in Southeastern Europe which induced quite a little selling in our market, but for a long period the support by powerful speculative interests and spot concerns was the dominating factor. Moreover, the tenor of the spot dispatches from the American South was not altered, and there were many wires to the effect that demand for actual cotton was almost insatiable at the raised basis. It remains to be seen what effect the decline in futures will exert on the spot markets.

The weekly correspondence from the other side suggested a mixed sentiment. It was declared that there had been cancellations because of the war in the Balkans, but there was no disposition to minimize the generally favorable trade outlook. There was confirmation of the reports that the Egyptian crop promise was less hopeful, with the prospects for an outturn of 7,500,000 cantars, against 8,000,000 some time ago, and approximately 7,250,000 last year. This would represent an outturn in that country of only slightly more than 50,000 bales above last season. The Russian crop was said to be 20 per cent. better than a year ago, when 1,200,000 bales were raised, while the prospects in South America were reported to be good. There has been no information received recently concerning the good crop of India.

Weather conditions in the American South were again very favorable. The movement of cotton was moderate, with port receipts of 70,000 bales, against 88,000 last year, and to-day's movement estimated at 110,000 bales, compared with 106,000 in 1911. The exports to date approximate 2,835,000 bales, against 2,985,000 to this period last season. Officially Southern spot markets were reported 1-16 to ⅝c higher, with New York spot cotton .05 decline; middlings, 12.20c.

COFFEE.

Total sales were 111,500 bags, but of this 43,000 bags were exchanges from near to the distant positions, and, in consequence, prices were irregular, closing at 15 points decline to one point advance. The undertone was easier. Cost and freight offers from Santos were again at a slightly lower level. Havre closed ¼f. lower to ¼f. higher; Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ pfennig lower, and the Rio market declined 125 reis, while Santos lost 100 reis.

Spot coffee, 14⅝c, for Rio 7.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Heavy selling came upon the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange in the last half of the day. Prices gave way easily under the pressure of offerings. Early in the session there was a tendency toward recovery from Saturday's decline. Less nervousness was displayed regarding the European international situation. Prices on the 9:30 o'clock opening call very generally reflected gains, compared with Saturday's closings. In most instances the call quotations were higher than the 2 P. M. cabled range of prices from London for the internationally listed shares. Transactions for the day totaled 61,310 shares, including 5,000 shares in the half hour before business began elsewhere in Wall Street, distributed among fifty different stocks.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

HEAVY GOODS SELLING.

Duplicate Business Improves After Election—Smooth Goods Returning?

Duplicate business on heavy weight fabrics, held up pending election, is now coming forward in the local men's wear market. Prices are generally firm and stocks low. Spring business is rather light, but an immediate improvement is looked for. Rough fabrics still lead, but there is a suggestion of the return of kerseys, meltons and other smooth finished goods. Worsteds are in fair demand. The demand for heavy, shaggy goods has apparently culminated in the chinchillas, and it is thought that, as in former years, a radical change will soon take place. Prices continue firm, owing to the high price of raw material. Although the season has been warm, dealers report an exceptional business in overcoatings.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Fur imports entered at the Port of New York in the week ended Nov. 2 were valued at $488,747, a slight increase over the value of similar imports in the previous week. Hatters' fur imports were valued at $5,937, and feather receipts at $93,179.

Announcement is made that Hershfield & Cohan, cloaks and suits, 84 University Place, will move into new quarters at 158 West Twenty-ninth Street about Dec. 15.

The fifteenth annual Business Show opened yesterday at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, and will continue through the week. Several typewriter contests will be held during the course of the show, principal among them the international professional championship.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

At a recent convention of ladies' tailors in Pittsburgh mannish vests of brocaded silk were suggested for women's wear, and belts were favored. Cutaway effects in jackets, with deep collars and full revers, were also recommended.

Patent leather, pearl-buttoned boots with various colored tops have sold well to the Southern trade this Fall. Consumers in that part of the country are using them extensively for street wear. Northern women have not taken them to any great extent, however.

Fancy waistcoats, particularly in rough effects, will be the proper thing this Fall and Winter. For evening wear novelty waistcoats with satin bindings and cord edges are offered.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

A total of 7,632 tons of scrap iron and 2,597 tons of pig iron were imported into Leghorn in 1911, against 4,309 tons of scrap and 3,675 tons of pig in 1910. Most of the scrap iron was received last year from the United Kingdom, Netherlands, Germany, and Norway, and most of the pig iron from the United Kingdom.

A contract has been entered into between the Government of Venezuela and Manuel Leon Quintero for the establishment of one or more paper factories in the States of Aragua and Carabobo within a period of one year after the National Congress shall have approved the contract.

A manufacturing terminal is to be established at Montreal, Canada, by a $7,000,000 company just organized to construct fireproof buildings with facilities for various manufactures. It will enable direct loading on ocean-going steamers.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Operators Buy Row of Eighteen Houses Near Sherman Square for Apartment Improvements—$575,000 Loan on New Beaver Street Building—Fine Roslyn Estate Sold.

A striking illustration of the changing residential conditions on the west side and with particular reference to the Seventy-second Street locality, was shown yesterday in the sale of a row of eighteen private houses on the south side of Seventieth Street, just west of Broadway. The row includes the three-story dwellings from 206 to 240 West Seventieth Street, each covering a plot of 16.8 feet front, giving a total frontage of 300 feet and 100.5 feet deep. They take in about half of the block, the corner, which is really Amsterdam Avenue, as the Nevada Apartment, to the east, has the Broadway frontage, being occupied by the seven-story Georgia Apartment, and the six-story Atlanta at 204 West Seventieth Street. Opposite is the Sherman Square Hotel fronting on the lower part of Sherman Square.

The houses were bought from the estate of Charles Frederick Hoffman by I. Randolph Jacobs and Everett Jacobs. The buyers, particularly I. Randolph Jacobs, have been heavy operators in desirable parts of the city. They purchased the big plot for investment, and when the existing leases expire the plot will be sold off in good-sized apartment house parcels to builders.

The brokers in this transaction, which is the largest on the west side in some time, were Louis B. Preston, Connor Lawrence, and Charles F. De Casanova & Co. The only other transaction in the vicinity equaling it was the sale over a year ago of the Nevada Apartment, covering the block bounded by Amsterdam Avenue, Broadway, Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Streets, by the Alliance Realty Company, from the estate of D. Willis James, giving in exchange twenty-two private houses, including 151 to 163 West Eighty-sixth Street, and 144 to 172 West Eighty-seventh Street.

$575,000 Beaver St. Building Loan.

A building loan of $575,000 has been obtained by the New & Beaver Arcade Company from the Metropolitan Trust Company on the new structure to be erected at 23 and 25 Beaver Street and 58 to 62 New Street. The plot was acquired last season by Brody, Adler & Koch in a trade for the Lassano Apartment House on the north side of Seventy-ninth Street, west of Broadway. The Beaver Street property was transferred to the New & Beaver Arcade Company, of which Joseph M. Brody is the head, yesterday, subject to mortgages of $425,000. The plot to be improved is 103.10 by 49.4 and irregular.

W. W. Astor Leases Tenements.

William Waldorf Astor has leased to Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum the ten four-story tenements, with stores, 74 to 92 Avenue A, occupying the block front, 194 by 75, on the east side of the avenue, between Fifth and Sixth Streets.

The lease is for a term of twenty-one years, with two renewals for a similar period. The total rental will aggregate about $1,000,000. It is reported that negotiations are pending for re-leasing the property.

Buyers for Tenements.

The estate of Conrad Stein has sold to an investor the five-story tenement, on lot 25 by 100.5, at 507 West Fifty-second Street. The parcel is situated on the north side of the street, 100 feet west of Tenth Avenue.

William Hutten has sold to Martin B. Hoffman the five-story tenement, 635 First Avenue, for investment.

Bronx.

The August Jacob Construction Company has sold the new five-story apartment house on the south side of Tremont Avenue, corner of Morris Avenue, to an investor for cash.

Julius Prattner has sold for B. Benenson 601 East 140th Street, a five-story tenement, 40 by 100, to Mrs. Mary Gerlich, who gave the lot, 43 by 100, on the north side of 153d Street, 300 feet east of Morris Avenue, in exchange.

Brooklyn.

The Jerome Property Corporation has sold the three-story and basement brownstone private dwelling, 379 Third Street, on a lot 20 by 95, for Amelia Tuck to Alice Piper, for occupancy.

Long Island.

The large residence, with seventy acres of land, belonging to Walter G. Oakman, at Roslyn, and known as Oakdene, has been sold by Henry D. Winans & May to a client for occupancy. The property is adjacent to the estates of F. Gray Griswold, Gen. Lloyd S. Brice, and Mrs. Louis L. Stanton, and commands a view of Hempstead Harbor. The residence is a modern Colonial mansion built from designs by Grosvenor Atterbury. Many of the fireplaces, doorways, columns, and woodwork was brought from abroad or purchased from the residence of the late Stanford White. The seller was represented in the negotiation by Worthington Whitehouse.

The McKnight Realty Company has sold on the Estates of Great Neck to Percy F. Jerome a plot having a frontage of 137 feet, at the junction of Sycamore Drive and Myrtle Drive, for $6,000. The location is in the woodland section of Great Neck, and the purchaser will erect a Colonial private dwelling. The same company has also sold to Sam S. Hanway, George P. Dickson, and John W. Miller a plot having a frontage of 60 feet on Willow Drive.

Commercial Leases.

Pease & Elliman have leased the store at 44 West Thirty-ninth Street to Robert Whyte, represented by W. A. Phipps, for a long term of years.

Frederick Fox & Co. have leased for Philip Lewisohn 28,000 square feet in the twenty-two-story building being constructed upon the site of the old Mendelssohn Hall, on Fortieth Street, to the Fownes Brothers Glove Company. The lease involves $200,000.

Supreme Court Justice Newburger has signed an order approving a lease of the Hotel Endicott, Columbus Avenue, Eighty-first and Eighty-second Streets, for twenty-one years, beginning in September. Mrs. Susan L. Vivian and John F. Patterson, as trustees under the will of Marshall O. Roberts, lease the hotel to the Co-operative Apartment House Company at $25,000 a year for the first ten years and $27,500 for the last eleven years.

Wilber C. Goodale has leased for the Madison Square Mortgage Company the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street to John Farrelly for a café and restaurant.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased to Wolff & Barend the store at 113 and 115 Spring Street, and the store at 102 John Street for Alexander Findlay to Charles Wallash.

City Takes Title to Small Plot.

The City of New York has taken title to the triangular strip of land at Long Island City Plaza of the Queensboro Bridge, on which there is now an unsightly wooden building. On or about Nov. 15 the structure will be removed and the spot paved in conformity with the remainder of the plaza.

Foster-Schmitt Auction Sale To-day.

To-day at 11 A. M. in the Vesey Street Salesroom Joseph P. Day will start the absolute sale of the combined Foster and Schmitt properties, comprising 464 lots and nine dwellings, in the Riverdale section.

The properties are situated between Broadway and Riverdale Avenue, 259th to 261st Street. On Broadway the southerly boundary of the lots to be sold is Mosholu Avenue, a continuation of which forms one of the principal drives through Van Cortlandt Park.

The houses include the Schmitt residence, an attractive dwelling occupying a commanding site near Broadway, as well as several two-family houses of unique design and of recent construction from plans by E. S. Childs. Several unusual features surround the offering of these properties. Seldom has an effort been made to dispose of property at auction so late in the season. In fact, when the sale was first suggested, Mr. Day advised against it, in the belief that, if offered as late as mid-November, the holdings were almost bound to be sacrificed.

Hearing on Big Terminal Plan.

A public hearing which bears an important relation to the industrial development of Long Island City will be held to-morrow afternoon at the office of Dock Commissioner Tomkins, Pier A, North River, Manhattan.

The Degnon Realty and Terminal Improvement Company, which owns a large tract of land along Dutch Kills Creek in the vicinity of Hunterspoint Avenue, Long Island City, has made application to the Dock Department for authority to develop a part of its property as a freight terminal somewhat along the lines of the Bush Terminal in South Brooklyn.

Tenements for New Jersey.

The New Jersey Board of Tenement House Supervision approved of the following plans for the week ending Nov. 9:

Jersey City.—Charles Van Hoff, 127 Laidlaw Avenue, one 2-story brick, $6,000; Mary E. Whelan, 146 and 148 Woodlawn Avenue, two 3-story brick, $16,000; Simon D. Zienisieke, 83 Morris Street, one 3-story brick, alteration, $800.

Newark.—Samuel Krieger, 61 Avon Place, one 3-story frame, $10,000; Bessie Raiken, 240 West Kinney Street, one 4-story brick, $12,600.

Trenton.—Morris Brothers' Realty Company, Stuyvesant Avenue and Hoffman Street, one 3-story brick, $9,000.

East Orange.—Empire Construction Company, northwest corner Washington and Essex Streets, one 4-story brick, $65,000.

Realty Notes.

The E. E. Paul Company has secured the general contract from James H. Cruikshank and William D. Kilpatrick to erect the new 9-story building, size 184 by 100, on the west side of West Fourth Street, between Horatio and Gansevoort Streets, for the Riker & Hegeman Company.

The lien filed against the Midwest Realty Company, at 34 to 40 West Sixty-fifth Street, by Daniel E. Skelton, has been bonded.

The Harlem Property Owners' Association will hold a regular meeting Thursday evening, Nov. 14, at 147 East 125th Street.

Only one plan for new buildings was filed yesterday in the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings. This was for a 3-story dwelling and stable on the north side of Thirty-seventh Street, 400 feet west of Ninth Avenue, a plot 25 by 98.4. George Kern, Incorporated, of 496 Ninth Avenue, is the owner. G. K. Van Auken of 30 East Fourteenth Street is the architect, and the cost is placed at $10,000. No plans were filed in the Bronx.

Results at Auction.

Yesterday's offerings in the Real Estate Salesroom, 14 and 16 Vesey Street, resulted as follows:

ESTATES APPRAISED.

Deputy State Controller Wallace S. Fraser transmitted the following appraisals under the inheritance tax law yesterday to William H. Loughran, Chief Clerk of the transfer tax office of the Surrogates' Court.

BEMIS, FANNY E., (died Jan. 21, 1910;) left total personal estate everywhere, $41,476.04; of this only $1,853.83 is taxable in this State.

BROD, PHILIP, (died Feb. 8;) left total personalty, $7,500.79, from which $6,053.93 was deducted for debts, leaving a net estate of $1,447.83, all personalty.

CHACE, LUCRETIA G., (died Nov. 19, 1910;) left no realty; total net personal estate, $46,373.26, which consisted of stocks, the largest holding being $14,200 in the American Telegraph and Telephone Company.

CONKLIN, SARAH S., (died Dec. 26, 1910;) left no realty and a total net personal estate of $8,369.95, consisting of bank deposits, stocks, and bonds.

CUNNINGHAM, RICHARD, (died Oct. 5, 1911;) left no realty; net personalty, $4,705.25.

DAVIS, T. B., (died Nov. 26, 1911;) left no personalty or realty within this State; total amount of estate outside of State not given, but items enumerated indicated more than $1,000,000; estate includes "mansion house in Town of Keeper," "tract adjoining Molly Wood's property," "racetrack field in some town"; $20,000 was given to Katherine Holden and E. M. Holden, children of his brother, William P. Davis; $20,000 to Davis Trust Company; rest of estate to be distributed among the other living children of William P. Davis, his niece, children of his deceased niece, Blanche B. Pierce, and his executors.

DODDS, SUSANNA WAY, (died Jan. 20, 1911;) left no realty in the State; net personal estate in State, $2,374.63; entire personal estate wheresoever situated, $16,660.39; personalty includes copyrights to books on health and hygiene.

FISCHER, MARY D., (died April 24, 1911;) left net personalty in State of $75,200, all stock certificates of American Press Association.

KITSCHKE, WILLIAM, (died Oct. 3, 1911;) left net estate of $8,607.69, all personalty, mostly savings bank deposits.

WILLS FOR PROBATE.

AGAN, DAVID HENRY, (died Nov. 6;) left more than $5,000 personalty and no realty; his widow, Jennie Agan, sole legatee.

GILLIGAN, JOSEPH, (died Sept. 4;) left more than $500 personalty.

KILBRETH, SOPHIE, (died Oct. 27;) left more than $25,000 realty and $25,000 personalty; left $30,000 in trust to her son, Joseph A. Oudin; $12,000 to her son, Charles P. Oudin, for life; $12,000 to Maurice Oudin, her son; $12,000 to her son, Lucien Oudin; residue and $20,000 remainder to her son, James T. Kilbreth.

PAOLI, ALESSANDRO DELLI, (died Nov. 6;) left more than $10,000 realty and more than $10,000 personalty; left $1,000 to Concetta Delli Paoli, his widow; $3,000 to Maria Delli Paoli, his daughter, and $3,000 to Emilia Delli Paoli, another daughter, and the residue to his five sons, Francesco, Raffaele, Giuseppi, Francesco, and Amerigo Delli Paoli.

STINE, WILHEMINA, (died Nov. 7;) left more than $10,000 personalty; $1,000 to John Barschall, son of deceased daughter; one-third of residue apiece to Marcus Stine, his son; Nellie Ehrich, his daughter, and Lillie S. Zulzer, another daughter.

UNGER, ANNA, (died Sept. 20;) left more than $10,000 realty and more than $10,000 personalty; $1,000 to Carl Voelcker, her executor; $300 each to Paul and Gretchen Deisler, and an undetermined amount to her five daughters, Clara Voelcker, Elsa Muschenheim, Linda Kretschmer, Frida de Liagre, and Olga Hale.

VANECEK, LOUIS C., (died Nov. 1;) left $5,000 realty and $100 personalty, to be divided equally among his wife, Minnie Vanecek, and his two daughters, Grace and Mildred Vanecek.

WALKER, CHARLES, (died Oct. 11;) left $3,150 realty and $3,000 personalty; to his first cousin, Isabella Myers, $3,275, and $2,875 to Matilda M. Walker.

Referees' Notices

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, plaintiff, against WESLEY THORN et al., defendants.

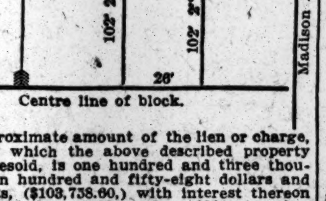
In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, and bearing date the 28th day of December, 1911, and orders of resale entered in the above entitled action on the 1st day of April, 1912; the 6th day of August, 1912, and the 31st day of October, 1912, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment and orders named, will sell at public auction at the Exchange Salesrooms, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 2d day of December, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Bryan L. Kennelly, Auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment and orders of resale to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that lot of land in the City and County of New York, with the buildings thereon, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the southerly side of Eighty-second Street, distant one hundred and nineteen feet westerly from the intersection of the southerly side of Eighty-second Street and the westerly side of Madison Avenue; and running thence southerly parallel with Madison Avenue and part of the way through a party wall one hundred and two feet two inches to the centre line of the block; thence westerly along the centre line of the block twenty-six feet; thence northerly again parallel with Madison Avenue one hundred and two feet two inches to the southerly side of Eighty-second Street; and thence easterly along the southerly side of Eighty-second Street twenty-six feet to the point of beginning, said premises being now known as No. 18 East 82d Street.

Dated New York, November 7th, 1912.
ALFRED STECKLER, Jr., Referee.
GEORGE W. HUBBELL, Attorney for Plaintiff, 346 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold. Its street number is 18 East 82d Street:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above described property is to be resold, is one hundred and three thousand seven hundred and fifty-eight dollars and sixty cents, ($103,758.60,) with interest thereon from the 3d day of November, 1911, together with costs and allowance amounting to three hundred and twenty-six dollars and fifteen cents, ($326.15,) with interest thereon from the 28th day of December, 1911, together with the expenses of the sale and resales. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens, which are to be allowed the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the Referee, is eleven thousand two hundred and fifty-seven dollars and thirty-seven cents ($11,257.37) and interest.

Dated New York, November 7th, 1912.

ASSIGNEE SALES.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW York, to all persons interested in the estate of the Marrowfood Co., assigned to William L. Hills, for the benefit of creditors, send greeting:

You and each of you are hereby cited and required personally to be and appear at a Special Term, Part I., of the Supreme Court, New York County, to be held at the County Court House, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 17th day of December, 1912, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to show cause why a final settlement of the accounts of William L. Hills, as assignee of the above-named Marrowford Co., insolvent debtor, should not be had, and, if no cause be shown, then to attend a final settlement of the assignee's account.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto caused the seal of the said court of the County of New York to be hereunto affixed.

[Seal.] Witness Hon. Samuel Greenbaum, a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, this 25th day of October, 1912.

WM. F. SCHNEIDER, Clerk.
CHARLES HARRIS LUSCOMB, Attorney for Assignee, No. 41 Park Row, Manhattan Borough, New York City.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A trough of low pressure extends from West Texas northeastward to Ontario with the principal centre over Southwest Kansas.

Abnormally high temperatures prevail to the eastward of the depression, but without rain, while to the north and west pressure has risen decidedly with a decided fall in temperature and with rains and snows in the Rocky Mountain region.

The western disturbance will continue eastward attended by rains and snows Tuesday to the Lower Ohio and Upper Mississippi Valleys, followed by generally fair weather Wednesday, by which time the rain area will have extended into the Middle Atlantic States and probably New England.

It will be colder Tuesday in the Central States. It will continue warm to the eastward, followed by falling temperatures Wednesday from the Ohio Valley east and northeastward.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be moderate southwest becoming variable by Wednesday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south.

Steamships departing Tuesday for European ports will have moderate southwest winds with fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York—Increasing cloudiness Tuesday; rain at night or Wednesday; colder Wednesday; moderate to brisk south and southwest winds.

Southern New England—Fair Tuesday. Wednesday cloudy, probably rain; colder at night; moderate to brisk south and southwest winds.

New Jersey—Fair Tuesday; rain and colder Wednesday or Wednesday night; moderate southwest winds.

Western New York—Local rain Tuesday; colder in western portion. Wednesday rain and colder; brisk southwest to northwest winds.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair, continued warm Tuesday. Wednesday probably rain; colder at night; moderate south and southwest winds.

Northern New England—Increasing cloudiness and warmer Tuesday; rain at night or Wednesday; moderate variable winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1911.	1912.		1911.	1912.
3 A. M.	45	47	4 P. M.	58	62

EDUCATION NOTES.

The City Record, in its issue of Nov. 8, contains belated Board of Education news, including the minutes of the meeting held on April 24, 1912. The City Record explains that they were not received at its office until Oct. 26.

Sealed bids or estimates will be received by Patrick Jones, Superintendent of School Supplies, at his office in the Board of Education Hall, until 11 A. M. on Nov. 19 for furnishing and delivering special and general supplies as follows: Domestic science, drawing, janitors', kindergarten, mimeograph, miscellaneous, neostyle, physical training, records, science, sewing, stationery, typewriting, and workshop supplies for the day and evening high schools and day and evening elementary schools. The time for the delivery of the articles, materials, and supplies and the performance of the contract is by or before Dec. 31, 1913. The amount of security required is 50 per cent. of the amount of the bid or estimate.

The Board of Education at its meeting tomorrow will probably grant leave of absence without pay to Margaret A. Hughes, a teacher in Public School 171, and to Lillie Mott Wheeler, a teacher in Public School 1.

It is planned to make the following groupings of public schools: No. 74 with the organization of No. 75, Queens; No. 53 with the organization of No. 62, Queens; No. 36 with the organization of No. 37, Queens; No. 10 and 15 with the organization of No. 19, Queens. It is also planned to make Public School 19 an independent school and to abandon the annex of Public School 15 in the Grinnell Mansion.

There is talk of co-operation between the public schools and the American Museum of Safety for the purpose of reducing the yearly loss of life and limb among the children of the public schools.

Dorothy E. MacGregor and Jennie T. Frabbito have been nominated by the Board of Superintendents as model teachers for training schools.

The Van Siclen Taxpayers' Association has asked the Board of Education to erect at once a modern school building on the site adjoining Public School 100, West Street, near Park Place, Brooklyn.

The Committee on Finance has approved of the appropriation of $22,500 for the purchase of the proposed school site in Poplar Street, Prospect Avenue, and Benton Place, Douglaston, Queens, and property included within the proposed school site on 158th Street, Jackson and Trinity Avenues, the Bronx.

The Graduate Association of New York University, which held its second meeting on Saturday in the University Building, will have another meeting on the afternoon of Nov. 23 at the same place, when the report of the Constitutional Committee will be considered and officers will be elected. The objects of the association are to promote co-operation between the Faculty and the students and greater fellowship among the students, also to promote the interests of the students and to obtain wider recognition of the university in the community. The Secretary is Joseph Jablonower, 1,390 Clinton Avenue, the Bronx.

CHANGES OF NAME.

RABMOWITZ, ABRAHAM, to ROBBINS, ABRAHAM, 765 Trinity Avenue, Bronx. His sons previously changed their names to Robbins, and he desires to keep famly name uniform. City Court; Judge Schmuck.

PETRICK, FREDERICK W., to WILLIAMS, FREDERICK W., 10 Manhattan Avenue. His father-in-law's name is Williams, and he has been known as Williams for several years and wants to change name to avoid confusion. City Court; Judge Delehanty.

GOLOBORODSKY, GEDALE, to GOLDBERG, GEDALE, 9 East Third Street. His present name too long, too hard to spell and to pronounce. City Court; Judge Delehanty.

FIGAEZEWSKI, MAX, to GRAMS, MAX, 2,471 Eighth Avenue. Grams is the maiden name of petitioner's mother, who has remarried and has consented to his adoption of the name. Difficulty occurs in addressing him orally and by correspondence as Figaezewski, and some persons have given him the nickname "Fig," an offensive contraction. City Court; Judge O'Dwyer.

LEFKOWITZ, MAX, to LOWITT, MAX, 836 Beekman Avenue, the Bronx. His three uncles and two brothers have changed their names to Lowitt, and petitioner finds difficulty in identifying himself as related to them; also, his name is mispronounced by Americans. City Court; Judge Schmuck.

FREUND, SAMUEL JUDEN, to JUDENFREUND, SAMUEL, 296 Second Street. Employed in the engineering department of Public Service Commission. On Dec. 14, 1911, an order was made by this court permitting him to change his name from Samuel Judenfreund to the one he now bears, but strenuous objections to this change were made by his father and other members of the family. The citizenship papers and diplomas which he has still bear his old name, which he now seeks to resume. City Court; Judge Delehanty.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The receipt of applications for the position of Dump Inspector, Grade 2, will be closed at 4 P. M. to-morrow. The physical examination will precede the mental. The dates of the examination will be announced later. The minimum age is 21 years. There is one vacancy in the office of the Queens Borough President at $1,200 a year.

The receipt of applications for the position of Register of Records, Grade 5, will be closed at 4 P. M. on Nov. 15. The examination will be held on Dec. 6. Candidates should be thoroughly familiar with statistical methods and should have a reading knowledge of French or German. The minimum age is 21 years. There is one vacancy in the Tenement House Department at $3,000 a year.

The receipt of applications for the position of Assistant Engineer, Grades D and E, will be closed at 4 P. M. on Nov. 19. The examination will be held on Dec. 12. Candidates must be civil engineers of at least three years' experience. The minimum age is 21 years. There are four vacancies in the Finance Department at $1,800 a year, and six vacancies in the Queens Borough President's office at the same salary.

The receipt of applications for the position of janitor-engineer will be closed at 4 P. M. on Nov. 20. The date of the examination will be announced later. The medical examination will precede the mental. The minimum age is 21 years. Vacancies are constantly occurring. The salary is $600 a year and upward.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination on Nov. 25 for men only to fill a vacancy in the position of chemical engineer in the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, for service in the Western States, at a salary ranging from $1,800 to $3,000 a year, and vacancies in positions requiring similar qualifications as they may occur. The duties will be to conduct laboratory investigations in physical chemistry, in its relations to smelter operations. Competitors will not be required to appear at any place for examination, but will be rated on the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated: General education and scientific training, 40; professional experience and fitness, 35; published or manuscript reports, 25.

An educational training equivalent to that required for the degree of Ph. D. from a university of recognized standing, such training including special courses in physical chemistry, and at least one year's practical experience in a chemical or metallurgical industry, are prerequisites for consideration for this position. Applicants must have reached their twenty-fifth but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination. Applicants will be admitted to this examination regardless of their place of residence, but under an act of Congress only those who have been actually domiciled in the State or Territory in which they reside for at least one year previous to the date of the examination will be eligible for appointment to any vacancy which may occur in the apportioned service in Washington, D. C. Those who cannot show such residence and domicile will be eligible for appointment only to vacancies which may occur in the field service—that is, to vacancies in positions with headquarters outside of Washington, D. C.

Censored Want Advertisements

"Only advertisements fit to print."

Confidence is the cornerstone of every business structure.

Advertising, verbal and printed, is the mortar with which it is possible to build, stone by stone, to the greatest height.

But with a shaky foundation no amount of mortar will make the building permanent.

The New York Times accepts only those advertisements that are worthy of confidence. Others will not pass the censor.

Readers of The New York Times believe in the advertisements in The New York Times. Results follow.

Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

Another new opera season opened last night with all the pomp and ceremony which distinguishes this night at the Metropolitan Opera House from other nights. Again Broadway and Seventh Avenue were lined with carriages and automobiles, and at certain hours traffic was almost blocked about Thirty-ninth Street.

The theatre, of course, was packed. There were no empty seats. There had been none for weeks. The speculators had obtained a few, and offered them at very fancy prices indeed. The standing room also was fully occupied last night. The line for standing room formed about 3:30 in the afternoon, and by 5 o'clock it reached way around the corner of Thirty-ninth Street toward Seventh Avenue. The box office closed at 7:30.

However, practically no one but the standees were in the house at 8 o'clock when the opera was announced to begin. The curtain, as a matter of fact, did not rise until fifteen minutes later, and it was not until the end of the first act that the boxes were completely filled. Then the audience represented, Treasurer John Brown said, a matter of $13,000.

It was noticeable that there was more than the usual amount of enthusiasm at a first night. Mr. Caruso was welcomed on his first entrance, and so was Miss Bori, the new soprano. The course of the opera was frequently interrupted by applause, and there were many curtain calls and flowers, especially after the third act.

During the entr'actes the audience moved about and talked about the new singer and Mr. Caruso's voice. "Manon Lescaut" is a short opera, and as a consequence the intermissions were made longer than usual to give the first-nighters a chance to talk.

Back of the scenes good humor and order reigned. Mr. Caruso stood on the landing by his dressing room door and posed for a great many photographs between the acts, and in the lobby leading to the stage many of the prominent singers gathered. There also in the intermissions was Mr. Gatti-Casazza, who was thoroughly pleased with the way things were going.

Clarence H. Mackay, Acting Chairman of the Board of Directors, in the absence of Otto H. Kahn, said:

"I am delighted with the auspicious manner in which the season has opened. It is most gratifying to know that the subscription is the largest in the history of the institution, a fact which reflects high credit upon the manner in which Mr. Gatti-Casazza has managed the affairs of the opera company from an artistic as well as from a practical point of view. He has proved himself an impresario of fine judgment, quick appreciation of popular taste in this country, and a rare talent for organization."

There was the usual throng, the usual brilliancy, the usual atmosphere of eager expectancy at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The auguries at the opening of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House of an opening night of the opera are always favorable; and in the present state of the public mind toward operatic matters in New York, the auguries are always justified by the event, so far as concerns material prosperity, and even generally so far as concerns matters more immediately important to the public from an artistic point of view than material prosperity.

Mr. Gatti Casazza enters now upon the third season of his sole management of the Opera House, and he seems likely to carry on the tradition of success which he inherited from his predecessor as he has carried it on in the last two seasons. He has at all events given unmistakable evidence of his intention to keep the institution at a high artistic level.

The opera with which the season opened was Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," substituted for the one originally appointed for this occasion, Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots," in which Mme. Frieda Hempel was to make her American début. But Mme. Hempel has been kept in Germany by illness, and Meyerbeer's opera was not to be given without her. In her stead another of the new sopranos of the company, Miss Lucrezia Bori, made her first appearance in Puccini's opera, and it also served for re-entrance of Messrs. Caruso, Scotti, and several more well-remembered members of the company of recent seasons. Likewise a new conductor, Mr. Polacco, who is to have large responsibilities till Mr. Toscanini returns, appeared for the first time to direct the performance.

Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" is pretty well known to the opera-going public of New York, though it had not been heard here for four years and a half. It was first performed in New York, most incompetently, by one of those wandering "Royal" Italian opera companies whose visits were formerly more frequent than they are now, at Wallack's Theatre in May, 1898. The first performance at the Metropolitan Opera House was given, while Mr. Conried was manager, on Jan. 18, 1907, with Messrs. Caruso and Scotti and Mme. Cavalieri in the cast and Mr. Arturo Vignas conducting. In that season it was heard three times, which was not a record of great success, considering the composer's popularity and the public interest in the leading singers. In the following season, the last of Mr. Conried's régime, with the same singers in the cast, it made a better record, being given five times.

There is something in "Manon Lescaut" that would seem to deserve a higher public esteem that has been bestowed upon it. It has much of Puccini's fresh and free melodic inspiration, though it may not be of a kind that lasts and lingers in the memory, and with few of the sophistications of style that have come into his later work. It abounds in melody and adroitly constructed ensembles. The orchestra has much of the transparency and charm that his orchestral writing has at its best, although he has not yet attained in it all the finesse, still less the extremely modern harmonic feeling of his later work, and he relies less in it on effects of instrumental and harmonic color for gaining his ends. And yet the characteristic style that is familiar in those later works is already well developed—that of making the orchestra the life blood of the whole drama, bearing on its current all the incidents and passions of the story; but the composer has put a more sustained development into its utterance than he has in some of his works as he has into the utterance of the singers.

The libretto has its faults, notably a lack of connection between the four acts, which present a grouping of four striking scenes from the story of the Abbé Prévost, upon which the opera is based, sometimes lacking a necessary explanation of what has happened between them. They are, in fact, scarcely intelligible to the listener who has not previously become acquainted with the course of the narrative.

But the scenes are vivid and striking and full of life and movement. The musical touch is light and brilliant. There are opportunities for the exercise of Puccini's special skill in representing musically scenes of animation and bustling action upon the stage, as in the first act, with the crowd of townspeople and the arrival of the diligence; in the second act, with the various incidents of the hairdresser, the musicians, and the admiring friends, where the madrigal sung by the choristers is treated with fine skill. Most effective of all is the third act, distressing and distasteful as the subject, is—the deportation of a crowd of evil women to the French possessions of Louisiana, with Manon among them. In this Puccini has achieved moving pathos and picturesque realism.

The moments of passion and articulate emotion in "Manon Lescaut" are numerous, and for them there are mellifluous and sonorous airs, expressive of such emotion, notably Des Grieux's appeal to Manon in the first act and the succeeding duet, and the duet in the second act between Des Grieux and Manon, and certain portions of the solos in the last two tragical acts.

The performance of the opera was an excellent one, reflecting credit on the new conductor, Mr. Giorgio Polacco, who is new to the Metropolitan Opera House, though he has had American experience with opera as presented by Mr. Savage. He put energy and life into the performance and characteristic expression into the playing of the orchestra. There was finish in the performance, but there was too often an excess of tone that weighed heavily against the singers.

Miss Lucrezia Bori, who made her first appearance as the heroine before a New York audience, made a distinctly favorable impression. She has a true soprano voice of clear and brilliant timbre that is especially good in its upper notes. She did not show last evening great power in giving it dramatic color and variety of expression, but she sang with commendable spontaniety and freedom and with vocal skill. She is attractive in appearance, and of a pleasing personal presence, and she has plenty of vivacity and spirit, but her acting shows some immaturity and was not altogether convincing.

Mr. Caruso came back to the stage of the Metropolitan quite as he has been in recent seasons when he has been at his best. His voice had much beauty, and there was much to admire in it. He sang with a good deal of continence at the outset, and with all the more beauty of style on that account. It was not till the third and fourth acts that he afforded the most frenetic of his admirers opportunity for their most frenzied applause of his stentorian and lachrymal high tones. Mr. Scotti gave an admirable and characteristic interpretation of Lescaut, and he was in good voice in his singing. Messrs. de Segurola, Bada, Ananian, and Reiss contributed to an excellent ensemble. The opera was handsomely mounted, and the scenes of the square in Annens, of Manon's room in Paris, the square in Havre, and the "vast plain on the New Orleans territory" were all as they were in the previous performances at the Metropolitan, excellent in their picturesqueness.

There was much enthusiasm for the principal singers, who were many times recalled before the curtain at the end of the acts. Miss Bori in particular received a first-night welcome of no uncertain tenor.

A SOCIAL SPECTACLE.

Audience Rivaled All First Nights in Display of Jewels and Gowns.

Society was out in brilliant array last night to start the first week of the opera. No function of the year serves to bring out a more scintillating display of elegant costumes and jewels than the première night at the Metropolitan. As viewed last night the audience rivaled all former first nights as a social spectacle.

The gowns worn were unusually handsome, and showed more originality than ever before. Oriental effects in headdress or coiffure ornaments, and also in a number of the richest gowns displayed, were in evidence. Gorgeous brocades of deep amethyst, gold, deep violet, coral, intermingled with pastel tints, transformed the golden horseshoe and grand tier into a riot of splendor.

The jewels were notable for their profusion and brilliancy, diamonds and pearls predominating, and jeweled and huge feather fans, which were in constant use, owing to the warm weather, lent the effect of kaleidoscopic colors and dazzling resplendency of jewels, which sparkled in a thousand different hues when the lights were turned on during the intermissions, and which glowed like fireflies in Egyptian darkness when the lights were low.

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia was probably the most resplendent in jewels, wearing a magnificent diamond tiara, a wide dog collar of diamonds, and eardrops, and her double rope of pearls showed jewels as large as marbles.

The diamond pendants and superb diamond corsage plastron worn by Mrs. Payne Whitney were also among the magnificent jewel displays of the evening.

In the Diamond Horseshoe.

The parterre circle has always been known as the Golden Horseshoe, but last night it became the Diamond Horseshoe in reality, and every box, save one, was filled. The empty box was No. 7, owned by Vincent Astor, and made vacant owing to mourning. It was a general outpouring, from a social viewpoint, from the stalls to the Grand Tier, and every seat and every box was occupied by a quarter to 9. The parterre remained unoccupied for half an hour after the curtain rose, and then began to fill rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ormond G. Smith, who occupied Parterre Box 22, had as their guests Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Tams, W. Gordon Fellowes, Charles Sampson, and Frederick Townsend Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee were in Box 13, and had with them the Ambassador to Belgium and Mrs. Lloyd S. Brice and Miss Evelyn Witherbee.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Haggin in Parterre Box 34 had Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Preston as their guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierrepont Gilbert in Parterre 24 had as their guests Mrs. Randolph Rogers Santini (Miss Vera P. Gilbert), Elisha Dyer, and James De Wolfe Cutting.

Miss Belle Gurnee in Parterre 9 had Mrs. Walter S. Gurnee, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. L. V. Hoppin, Moncure Robinson, and Albert Eugene Gallatin as her guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, who occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Delancey Kountze and Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas. Mrs. Luther Kountze, on account of her accident at Newport, will be unable to attend the opera the early part of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pratt, in Parterre Box 33, had as guests Mr. and Mrs. John G. Milburn and Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel B. Potter.

Box 32, owned by Luther Kountze, was occupied by Mrs. Delancey Kountze and Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas. Mrs. Luther Kountze, on account of her accident at Newport, will be unable to attend the opera the early part of the season.

Mrs. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, in Grand Tier Box 48, had Mrs. George R. Sheldon, Mrs. Sheldon Fuller, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stransky as her guests.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Gordon Norrie, in Box 43 in the Grand Tier, had with them Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, William Alexander, and St. George Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary had Box 8 for the opening night and had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant of Atlanta, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Nixon.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry had with them Miss Mabel Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. W. Payne Thompson, Robert Wrenn, and Clement March.

Guests in the Boxes.

Clarence Mackay's guests in Box 54 were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gray Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Randolph, Count de Lubersac, the Hon. Evelyn Fitzgerald, Capt. Philip Lydig, and Alfonso de Navarro. Mrs. Mackay is in Paris and Mrs. Lydig is on her way back from Europe.

Mrs. Henry G. Redmond, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Anson, and Mrs. Cornelius C. Cuyler occupied Box 2. Mrs. A. D. Juilliard was not at the opening, as she is in mourning.

In Grand Tier Box 41 Miss Julia Chester Wells had Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury as her guests, also Mrs. Charles Henry Farnam of England, Ripley Hitchcock, and Edward Prentis. During the second intermission J. Pierpont Morgan visited Box 41.

With Mr. and Mrs. Morgan in their box in the parterre was their daughter, Miss Anne Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet had the German Ambassador and the Countess von Bernstorff and Mrs. Ralph Ellis among their guests in Box 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Juan M. Ceballos, Miss Ceballos, J. M. Ceballos, Jr., Miss Elise Ladew, Harvey Ladew, and Lieut. Moore were in Box 44 in the grand tier. Mrs. Allan C. Washington was unable to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper Poor in Box 39 in the grand tier had with them Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gardiner and Miss Mildred Poor.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., had with them in parterre Box 6 Mr. and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Sands.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews and Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould occupied Box 12, the latter having been the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clews before the opera.

Mrs. Orme Wilson, being in mourning, Box 8 was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pell.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander had with them their daughters, the Misses Harriet and Janetta Alexander, in Box 18 in the parterre.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker, Sr., had in their box Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew and Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phipps and Miss Anna Sands.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who had Box 14 in the parterre for the opening, had with her Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ross Proctor had as their guests in Box 26 in the parterre Mr. and Mrs. Oren Root and Miss Vouletti Proctor.

Box 15, owned by Miss Iselin, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Iselin and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Iselin.

Mrs. Richard Gambrill had among her guests Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Barney.

Mr. and Mrs. Jahn Warne Herbert, Miss Gertrude A. Herbert, Edward D. Dunn, and John C. Dunn occupied Stall Box V.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Graham in Box B in the stalls had Miss Marion H. Graham and J. A. McKay with them.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Clausen in Box J had as their guests Mrs. R. C. Black, Francis Hutchins, and G. Dodge.

Mrs. Von Juch Wellman in Box F had with her Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Manning and J. Leslie Cotton.

Mrs. Frank Scott Gerrish had Mrs. W. A. Fraser and Henry Preble as her guests in Box C in the stalls.

Mrs. Jonathan Bulkley had Mr. and Mrs. Frank Billings of Cleveland, Ohio, with her in Box H.

In stall Box E Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ditson had Mr. and Mrs. Lindsley Tappin.

WILL NOT SURRENDER JEFFERSON'S HOME

Congressman Levy Says the Government Cannot Force Him to Part with Monticello.

REPLIES TO MRS. LITTLETON

Campaign for the Acquisition of the Estate Is Not Founded on Reverence for Jefferson, He Says.

This statement, relative to the proposed purchase of the Thomas Jefferson home, "Monticello," which he owns, was given out last night by Congressman Jefferson M. Levy:

"Before the House Rules Committee in August last I stated in the most positive way that I would not listen to any proposal for the sale of 'Monticello.' As Mrs. Littleton has now formed an association, with herself as Managing Director and Miss Laura Littleton as Treasurer, and appeals to the public for funds to carry on a campaign for the acquisition of 'Monticello,' I feel in duty bound to notify the public that such subscriptions will be useless. The campaign to deprive me of the property, which has been in my family for eighty years, is without legal basis, as numerous Constitutional lawyers have advised me. I think that it will come as a keen surprise to the ordinary layman to hear that the Government can step in and take property away from a family that has had it for this long period. That the scheme is unlawful is manifest, and has been so characterized by some of the men whose names are used in favor of the project.

"If the campaign were founded on a real affection and reverence for the memory of Jefferson, I could look on it with different eyes, and however unpleasant it might be to me to see an effort to wrest this property away from me, it would be some consolation to me that I could respect the motives behind the scheme. But this campaign has been attended with numberless and wholly unnecessary misstatements about Monticello, about my uncle, Commodore Levy; those about myself I suppose I must overlook.

"In her second book, which Mrs. Littleton is now sending out, she abandons—absolutely without a word of apology—her old charge that Monticello has not been properly kept up. The fact is, at the hearing before the Senate Committee on Library last Summer, she made those charges as to my neglect of the property, and she was so positively contradicted by Senator Martin and Judge Duke, both of whom have lived all their lives within sight of Monticello, that she was compelled to abandon the charge.

"As to what she says about my uncle, Commodore Levy, I content myself with this brief statement of facts: In 1820 my uncle received his commission as a Lieutenant in the United States Navy, not through political influence, but after an examination by an Examining Board composed of no less distinguished persons than John Rodgers, Stephen Decatur, and David Porter. My uncle fought in the War of 1812 and in the Mexican War. He died in 1862 after having offered his sword in defense of the Union. At his death he held the highest rank then in use in the United States Navy.

"I was not an active participant in the litigation that was begun after my uncle's death, when I was a minor. When the litigation was finished and my title was confrmed by the courts, I set about as complete a restoration of the Monticello estate as possible. To preserve Monticello in accordance with its traditions has been the wish nearest my heart, and during all those years, since 1879, until a year ago, no one has said me nay. Mr. Bryan was disposed, at one time, to ask the Government to buy it, but after giving the matter full consideration he changed his mind, and assured me that Monticello was in safe hands.

"The public has always had as free access to the estate as its safety and preservation would permit and as any lover of Jefferson's memory could ask. As to the graveyard, all I can say is that I would have taken the same care of that as I have of the rest of the estate, if I had been permitted. I have said that I do not expect gratitude, but I think that every American will feel that I am entitled to fair play.

"I have demonstrated in the last thirty-three years that I fully appreciated the importance of properly maintaining this historic place. The public will not be surprised that I am unwilling to turn over the place to a self-appointed director whose interest in the matter has been of the briefest, especially in view of the character of the campaign of abuse of my family, willful misstatement, and absolute disregard of the care I have bestowed on the estate for a generation.

"Public ownership, or quasi-public management, by managing directresses, is still to prove its efficiency. At Monticello the atmosphere of the home of Jefferson is maintained, and a feeling of reverence for Jefferson is fostered. At Mount Vernon an admission fee is charged, and the home atmosphere has been lost. The public may be assured that I have not failed to give careful and patriotic thought to the care of Monticello in the years that may follow after I can no longer see to it in person. If my provisions for its proper maintenance then prove inadequate, that, I submit, will be time enough to consider the question of the Government's taking it."

COLUMBIA'S CROCKER FUND.

$1,566,635 Turned Over to the University for Cancer Research.

John Hays Hammond, Nelson C. Thrall, and Edgar C. Bradley, executors of the estate of George Crocker, who died in New York on Dec. 4, 1909, filed their accounting of his estate yesterday. This revealed that Columbia University has received $1,566,635 for its Cancer Research Fund from the estate. The accounting fixed the total value of the property of Mr. Crocker at the time of his death at $10,217,394. Income and increases from sales of property brought the total with which the executors charged themselves up to $12,249,808.

Of this estate only $434,932 personal property was in this State when Mr. Crocker died. His will was filed in New Jersey and his estate yielded the State of New York only $97,124 in inheritance taxes. The transfer tax proceedings fixed the value of the Fifth Avenue house at $610,000, and of his Tarrytown estate at $60,000. The accounting filed yesterday fixed the value of the wine cellar at the Fifth Avenue house at $11,593. His art objects sold for $81,204 at the American Art Galleries last January.

The accounting shows that payments were made on Mr. Crocker's bequests to Columbia University to establish a fund for the study of cancer; $3,232,687 to William H. Crocker, a like amount to Mrs. H. C. Alexander, and $1,616,343 each to Charles T. and J. A. Crocker. Bequests of $100,000 each were paid to Sarah D. Stedman and Jennie P. Childs.

Other charges in the accounting were $33,807 for debts, $147,665 for administration expenses, $366,907 for executors' commissions, and $7,557 for funeral expenses.

MR. SHERMAN'S WILL FILED.

Late Vice President's Widow Is Sole Legatee—Value of Estate Not Known.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The will of Vice President Sherman was admitted to probate in the Surrogate's Court to-day. The document, which is very short, is in Mr. Sherman's handwriting, and bears the date of April 23, 1887.

Mr. Sherman names as his executor his wodow, Carrie Babcock Sherman, and wills all of his estate to her.

In her petition Mrs. Sherman declares that the estate exceeds $10,000. The value of the estate, however, is only conjectured, but Mr. Sherman was credited with being one of the wealthiest men in this locality.
